MEANING OF TERMS USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases, except such as are classified as "Mentioned," are grouped according to the points in the case which they annotate: within these groups they are listed chronologically, except such as are classified as "Referred to," which come at the end of the group and are arranged inter se in chronological order. Cases which annotate the annotated case generally are grouped together after cases which annotate specific points, similarly arranged, and are followed by cases classified as "Mentioned" arranged chronologically inter se. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows:—

- "APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.
- "APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- "CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- "DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- "DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- "EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- "EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.
- "FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- "NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- "OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- "REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- "MENTIONED" (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

Privileges & precedence of peers, generally, see PEERAGES & DIGNITIES.

As to Irish peers, see 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67, art. 4.

24. Historical survey.—[Representation Act, 1918, deals specially with the position of petitioner & of all other peeresses in their own right, & enacts by Sect. 9, (5), that: "Any incapacity of a peer to vote at an election arising from the status of a peer shall not extend to peeresses in their own right." This sect. created a class of person who, holding peerage dignities, though they were not peers of Parliament, were to possess the privilege of voting at a parliamentary election (LORD BIRKENHEAD, C.).

It is material to consider how in past ages the House of Commons looked upon the relation of a peer of Parliament towards that House.

"In 1099 the House of Commons passed the following resolution: 'No peer of this Kingdom hath any right to give his vote at the election of any member to serve in Parliament.' In the year 1700 they passed this further resolution: 'If a peer or Lord Lieutenant of a county concerns himself in elections, it is an infringement of the liberties of the Commons.' A hundred years later the union with Ireland rendered it necessary to introduce a change into these resolutions, which, ever since their first passing, had been repeated at the commencement of every session, & accordingly on Apr. 27, 1802, the following resolutions were passed: 'Resolved, that no peer of this realm, except such peer of that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland as shall for the time being be actually elected & shall not have declined to serve for any county, city, or borough of Great Britain, hath any right to give his vote in the election of any member to serve in parliament. Resolved, that it is a high infringement of the liberties & privileges of the Commons of the United Kingdom for any lord of parliament or other peers or prelate, not being a peer of Ireland at the time elected & not having declined to serve any county, city, or borough of Great Britain, to concern himself in the election of members to serve for the Commons in parliament, except only any peer of Ireland at such elections in Great Britain respectively where such peer shall appear as a candidate or by himself or any other be proposed to be elected.' These resolutions are declaratory of the common law & without any doubt they embody the law of Parliament" (LORD BIRKENHEAD, C.).—RHONDDA'S (VISCOUNTS) CLAIM, [1922] 2 A. C. 339; 92 L. J. P. 28. ———.—[Not representative peer of Ireland or representing British constituency.]—An Irish peer, who is not one of the representative peers for Ireland, nor the representative of any constituency in Great Britain, is not entitled to be placed on the register of voters.—RENDLESHAM (LORD) v. 40. Question of fact.]—There is no strict or definite rule for ascertaining what is inhabitance or residence. The words have nearly the same meaning. Sleeping once or twice in a place would not constitute inhabitance. There is no precise line to be drawn. It is always, if the inhabiting be bonâ fide, a question of more or less. The question is whether there has been such a degree of inhabitance as to be in substance & in common sense a residence. When a person has a country & a town house it is a mere question of fact whether he has two residences or only one residence. When a man leaves one residence to go elsewhere to transact real business, whether he has two residences depends on quantity & amount. It is a pure question of fact (BLACKBURN, J.).—*R. v. He obtained from the bishop a licence for non-residence from May 17, 1871, up to Dec. 31, 1872. He, however, retained possession of the house till Oct. 1872, when he left for the Continent, with the intention of returning in the following Spring. He had arranged with a curate to serve the cure during his absence, & the curate obtained a licence from the bishop to officiate, & the bishop by such licence required him to reside, & assigned him the rectory-house as a residence. Upon claimant's departure, the curate took up his abode in the rectory-house. b. Joint tenancy of three persons under lease—Renewal of lease by two.—The three partners of a co. occupied business premises under a lease in favour of the co. until Whitsunday 1869. Two of the partners then became tenants of the subjects, under a lease which stipulated that their occupancy should commence at that term. 102. ——— Less cost of repairs.]—A. was registered as a county voter in respect of an undivided thirtieth share of certain freehold property which was let at a gross yearly rent of £75 15s., with an agreement that the landlords should pay all rates & taxes. These reduced the annual value to £63 3s. 7d., & there was a further charge of £1 6s. for expenses of collection. The average annual expenses of repairs, which were done by the landlords, & which the revising barrister found were necessary to enable them to obtain the net rent of £63 3s. 7d., had for the preceding six years been £4 per annum. The revising barrister decided that the cost of repairs must be deducted from the rent, for the purpose of ascertaining the yearly value, & consequently that A.'s interest was of less than the value of 40s. by the year, & he expunged his name from the list.—Held: he had correctly decided.—*HAMILTON v. 103. ——— Two buildings cannot be combined to form qualification.]—A. occupied a shop, which, together with a house & other premises, also occupied by him, constituted a sufficient qualification in point of value, but neither being sufficient in itself. The shop was separated from the rest of the premises by a yard, in the exclusive occupation of A., but there was no complete curtilage or fence surrounding the whole, the yard being approached by a passage at the side of the shop, open to the street, which was also the property of A., but used by the tenant of the adjoining house in common with him:—Held: the shop could not be joined with the other premises, so as to constitute one entire qualification, under the above sect.—*BRECON CASE, POWELL v. ing" in the enumeration in Representation (Scotland) Act, 1832 (c. 65), s. 11, "of any house, warehouse, counting-house, shop or other building" within a burgh, are to be construed as including only such buildings as are ejusdem generis with the buildings specifically enumerated, i.e. buildings for residential or commercial or agricultural purposes, & a gas meter house, 4½ ft. x 4 ft. built of stone & brick, which contains a meter for the supply of gas to a dwelling house outside the burgh, is not a building within the Act.—*DUNCAN v. 109. Occupation as member of charitable corporation—Exclusive use of rooms—Representation Act, 1832, s. 27.]—An hospital was incorporated by Act of Parliament & was empowered to hold land, & consisted of a master & twelve brethren, & was governed by certain rules. The appointment of the brethren (by the heir of the founder) was for life, subject to removal for the causes specified in the rules. Each of the brethren, as such, occupied exclusively two rooms in the hospital, of which he kept the key, & a part of the garden, & was rated in respect of such occupation:—Held: the brethren did not occupy as owners or tenants, & were therefore not entitled to a borough vote under the above sect.—*HEATH v. 110. — Representation Act, 1867, s. 3.]—The Naval Knights of Windsor were incorporated by royal charter. According to the rules of the foundation, which was of a collegiate character, the members dined together in a common hall, each knight was on his election placed in the occupation of a dwelling-house forming part of the collegiate buildings which were conveyed to the corp.; he held the house by virtue of his appointment, which was for life, subject to expulsion in the event of his marrying or being guilty of certain offences or breaches of discipline; & had to keep the house in repair:—Held: the occupation of each knight was as a member of the corp. merely, & subject to regulations which were inconsistent with ownership in the individual, & therefore did not confer a right to a borough vote, as an inhabitant occupier, as owner, or tenant [within the above sect.].—*DURANT v. At the election of a canon he produces the key of the house occupied by his predecessor, & prays to be admitted. As one of the canons he is elected & decreed to be installed, & thereupon takes possession of his house. Each canon repairs his house at his own expense:—Held: the proper inference was that each canon holds his house as a corp. sole & not as a member of the chapter; & he is therefore

When he first took the land, there was no building upon it. In 1862 an electioneering agent, having no interest of any sort in the land, caused to be erected a shed made of boards nailed to posts, & the claimant had used the shed by keeping therein some of his agricultural implements. Each party had a key to the outer door which stood open all day, but was shut at night.—Held : T. was entitled to a vote for members of parliament as the tenant of a building under Representation Act, 1832, s. 27.

The case seems to me to raise a question not relating so much to the nature of the thing occupied as to the nature & quality of the occupation. The point seems to be whether this is an occupation as tenant entitling the claimant to a vote under [sect. 27] or the occupation of a lodger as distinct from that of a tenant. I think that the distinction between these cases is this, that where the owner of a house takes some person into his house who occupies a room & has the right of ingress & egress, yet if the owner retains his general character of master of the house that person so occupying is a lodger & not a tenant within sect. 27 (MAULE, J.).—*TOMS v. 123. ————]—The word "lodger" involves the idea of lodging with some one else from whom he hires his lodging, whilst the word "tenant" does not involve, though it does not exclude, this idea. This difference gives the clue to the distinction which the statutes have made. It appears to me that where a house is wholly let out in unfurnished apartments separately occupied by tenants, & their landlord does not reside in the house, & has no servant in the house to look after it for him, the tenants are ratable & are not lodgers. On the other hand, where a landlord resides in the house & has a servant in it to look after it for him, then it appears to me that such tenants are not ratable & are lodgers (LINDLEY, L.J.).—*BRADLEY v. During his absence this room was unoccupied. He was not enrolled, & had not claimed to be enrolled, as a voter in D.:—Held: claimant had not sufficiently complied with the condition as to residence contained in the statute to entitle him to have his name inserted on the roll of voters.—MILLER v. BRUCE (1889), 2 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 265.—SCOT.

t. Absence during part of year.—A son occupied, as a lodger, rooms of the statutory value in his father's house, for which he paid rent to his father, residing in them during nine months of the year. During the remaining three months he was absent in the country, & the house was shut up, but he had access to it at any time he desired:—Held: he had been

a. Absence on account of ill-health.—Rooms let without knowledge.—MALCOLM v. BROWNE (1894), 22 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 188; [1897] W. N. 124.—SCOT.

b. Occupation of rooms in part remuneration for services.—An assistant priest, who was provided with board & lodgings in the rectory of the priest, to whom he was assistant, & whose salary was fixed on the basis that he was so provided:—Held: entitled to the lodger franchise, the rooms occupied exclusively by him being of the requisite value.—DOYLE v. CRAIG, [1911] S. C. 493.—SCOT.

c. Room in father's house.—Occasionally shared with brother.—Rent paid.—A son paid for & had the sole right to occupy a bedroom in his father's house:—Held: the fact that during the period of qualification for passage a staircase led up to the first floor occupied by another claimant & to the top floor occupied by applt., & both applt. & the occupier of the first floor were tenants of B., applt.'s rent being 7s. a week. All the rates in respect of the qualifying property had been paid by B., & no rates had been paid by applt.:—Held: applt. was not entitled to have his name inserted in division 1 of the occupiers' list as an inhabitant occupier.—HAVERCROFT v. DEWEY (1912), 108 L. T. 296; 77 J. P. 115; 29 T. L. R. 62; 11 L. G. R. 28; 2 Smith, Reg. Cas. 393.

128. ————Lodger implies personal relationship with landlord.—Claimant of a borough vote had during the qualifying period occupied as sole tenant at a weekly rent a room in a house, which he furnished himself, as his residence. At the commencement of the qualifying period all the rooms in the house were similarly let off to tenants as their residences, each tenant having a key to his room & a key of the front door. During the qualifying period the tenant of one of the other rooms relinquished his tenancy, & gave up the key of his room & his front door key to the landlord, who thereupon took the usual steps to obtain a new tenant of the vacant room. The landlord did not during any part of the qualifying period reside in the house or any part of it, either personally or by any servant, nor did he exercise any control over it, except such control, if any, as might by law be conferred on him by reason of the vacating of the room & the delivery of the keys to him by the outgoing tenant as aforesaid:—Held: claimant was entitled to the franchise as an inhabitant occupier of a dwelling-house.

In my opinion the term "lodger" implies a personal relation existing between the lodger and his landlord (LINDLEY, L.J.).—ANCKETILL v. BAYLIS (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 577; Colt. 289; 52 L. J. Q. B. 104; 48 L. T. 342; 47 J. P. 356; 31 W. R. 233, C. A.

the lodger franchise he had occasionally ex gratia allowed a young brother, who could have had a bed of his own, to sleep in the room with him did not prevent him from having occupied the room separately & as sole tenant.—MILNE v. DOUGLAS, [1912] S. C. 635.—SCOT.

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.—D.

d. Residence in different wards.—Same local government area.—Claimant resided, & carried on his business, at premises in H. Street, in the south ward of a registration unit until Dec. 27, 1917. He then resided at other premises in F. Road, in the east ward of the same registration unit but in the same local government electoral area, & he resided there for the remainder of the qualifying period, which, for the year 1918, as fixed by Order in Council, was the six months ending Apr. 15, 1918. He continued to carry on his business at H. Street:—Held: the claim in respect of the occupation of premises in F. Road be allowed, as claimant was occupying them on the last day continuous occupation of the building.—TIMMIS v. ALBISTON, [1895] 2 Q. B. 58; 64 L. J. Q. B. 564; 59 J. P. 663; 11 T. L. R. 399; Fox & S. Reg. 426; 15 R. 422.

A. "Dwelling-House."

See, now, Representation Act, 1918, ss. 3 (1); 41 (8).

130. What amounts to a dwelling-house—Whether part structurally severed.—Representation Act, 1887, ss. 3, 61.—A. claimed to be registered for a borough in respect of "a house." He occupied as tenant at £4 10s. per annum one room in a house, which consisted of nine rooms, & was originally built for one family, though now let out in six several tenements. The passage & staircase, & the conveniences, consisting of a privy & ashpit, were common to all the tenants. There was an outer or street-door to the passage, which was never closed, & was without lock or bolt. Each tenant had the exclusive occupation of his room or rooms. The owner did not reside upon the premises:—Held: (by BOVILL, C.J., & KEATING, J.) the room so occupied by claimant constituted a "dwelling-house" within the above sects.; (by WILLES, J. & BRETT, J.), it did not.

B. claimed to be registered for a borough in respect of "a house." He occupied as tenant at £6 10s. per annum two rooms on two different floors in a house, which consisted of seven rooms, whereof the remaining five were occupied by another tenant. The passage & staircase were common to both tenants. The house had a front door to the street, which was generally kept open by day, & shut by one or other of the tenants at night, & was fastened by an ordinary latch & bolt. Neither tenant had any right to exclude the other from the use of the front door. The owner did not reside upon the premises:—Held: (by BOVILL, C.J., & KEATING, J.) such occupation of the two rooms by B. was the occupation of a "dwelling-house" within the above sects.; (by WILLES, J. & BRETT, J.), it was not.—THOMPSON v. WARD, ELLIS v. BURCH (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 327; 1 Hop. & Colt. 530, 537; 40 L. J. C. P. 169; 24 L. T. 679; 35 J. P. 582.

131. ————]—H., on July 31, 1873, & for the preceding twelve calendar months, occupied part of a house in a borough, consisting of two rooms, not structurally separate from the rest of the house, in which he & his family entirely lived. These rooms were connected by a staircase & passage which were used by H. in common with the persons who occupied the rest of the house, the landlord not residing therein or retaining any control over the premises, but the tenants only having control over the outer door. During the twelve months ending July 31, 1873, two poor-rates were made, viz. one in Nov. 1872, the other in May, 1873. In both those rates the two rooms were rated separately from the rest of the house & H. was rated in respect of them. The two rooms were not rated separately from the rest of the house in the rate made in May, 1872, which was the last rate made before the commencement of the year ending on July 31, 1873. At the time of the passing of the above Act, there was no Act in force in the parish authorising owners of houses to be rated instead of the occupiers:—Held: (by KEATING & DENMAN, JJ.), the two rooms constituted a "dwelling-house" within the above sects., & H. was sufficiently rated in respect of them, notwithstanding the house was not separately rated in the rate made in May, 1872; for that sect. 3, sub-sect. 3, only required the occupier to have been rated in respect of the premises to all rates made during the qualifying year, & the separate rating of a house in sect. 61 had reference to this; & therefore H. was entitled to be registered; (by BRETT & HONYMAN, JJ.), sect. 61 contained a definition of what the thing occupied for the twelve months must be, viz. a part of a house separately rated; & therefore, as the rooms had not been separately rated till the rate in Nov. 1872, H. had not occupied for twelve months the thing required; (by BRETT, J.), the rooms were not occupied as a separate dwelling within sect. 61.—BOON v. HOWARD (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 277; 2 Hop. & Colt. 208; 43 L. J. C. P. 115; 30 L. T. 382; 38 J. P. 678; 22 W. R. 535. Annotation:—Refd. Bradley v. Baylis, Morfee v. Novis, Kirby v. 132. ————]*—Representation Act, 1884, s. 3—Sitting-room & bedroom in workhouse.—Applt. was an industrial trainer in the employment of poor law guardians, & as part of his salary was allowed to have the exclusive occupation of a sitting-room & bedroom in the main building of the workhouse. The guardians reserved another room in the workhouse which they used as a board-room; the master of the workhouse, whom they employed, resided in other rooms in the building. Applt. could not stay out of his rooms after 9 p.m. without the permission of the master; the master, however, had no power to suspend or dismiss him if he did so, but could only report the matter to the guardians:—Held: applt. was an inhabitant occupier of a dwelling-house by virtue of his employment, within the above sect.—for the workhouse was not in the circumstances inhabited by the guardians, & he did not serve under the master of the workhouse so as to disqualify him from voting.—ADAMS v. FORD (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 239; Colt. 403; 55 L. J. Q. B. 13; 53 L. T. 666; 49 J. P. 711; 34 W. R. 64; 2 T. L. R. 19.

133. ————]—Separate bedroom—Joint use of dining-room.—A shop assistant occupied exclusively, by virtue of his employment, a furnished bedroom in a dwelling-house belonging to his employers. The house contained other bedrooms similarly inhabited by other persons in the same employment, & a dining-room in which the inmates of the house took their meals in common, which were provided for them by their employers. The inmates had no keys of their bedrooms. The employers did not inhabit the house, but they had a resident caretaker who exercised general control over it, & a resident servant who was not under the order of the inmates, & by whom the domestic service requisite for the rooms was done:—Held: there was sufficient inhabitancy of a dwelling-house, by virtue of service, within the above sect. to confer the franchise, & this was not affected by the joint user of another part of the house.—STRIBLING v. HAISE (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 246; Colt. 409; 55 L. J. Q. B. 15; 54 L. T. 268; 49 J. P. 727; sub nom. STUBBING v. HAISE, 2 T. L. R. 24.

of the qualifying period & had also during the whole of the qualifying period occupied premises in the local government electoral area by reason of his occupation of the premises in H. Street until Dec. 27, 1917, & his occupation of the premises in F. Road from that date till Apr. 16, 1918.—WALLACE v. GALLAGHAN & HANRAHAN (1919), 53 L. T. 78.—IR.

134. ————]—A coachman by virtue of his employment as coachman in the service of

had a bedroom that he occupied exclusively. He & the other employes took their meals in a common sitting-room, & the only resident in the house was a servant paid by the employer to attend to the occupants; if he had a latch key for the hall door & had also charge of the other keys, & it was his duty to see that the doors were locked & the occupants within doors every night:—Held: R. was entitled to the franchise.—LYNCH v. BUCHANAN (1885), 18 L. R. Ir. 68.—IR.

133 ii. ————]—An attendant in a lunatic asylum had the separate & exclusive use & occupation of a room in the asylum, primarily used as a bedroom. There were in the asylum a dining-room & recreation-room for the attendants, but each attendant might receive guests in his own room, & it was the practice for the attendant when off duty to read in his private room & to provide himself there with food or delicacies in addition to the meals supplied in the dining-room. Each attendant had a key to his room, but the same key opened all the rooms in the block. The attendants had no contractual right to any special rooms, but in practice they were never moved from one to another. The outer gate of the asylum was closed at a particular hour at night, after which no attendant was allowed in or out without special leave:—Held: there was no evidence that the occupation of the room by the attendant was as a dwelling or dwelling house within the above Act.—O'BRIEN v. M'CARNEY, [1912] 2 I. R. 17.—IR.

133 iii. ————]—A clerk in the employment of a hydropathic company occupied as sole occupant a room in the building belonging to the company. No particular room was expressly stipulated for by him, but when he entered on his employment a room was given to him which he occupied for ten years; part of its furniture belonged to him. He took no meals in this room, but either in the servant's hall or the reception-room. During about four months in winter he left the room thus occupied by him, & lived in a smaller & more comfortable room. No one occupied the other room in his absence; he was entitled to use it, & he moved from the one to the other of his own choice. The house-steward had a room in the building set apart for him, but usually resided in a separate house in the neighbouring village:—Held: the clerk inhabited a "dwelling house" in the sense of the above Act, & the dwelling house was not inhabited by any person under whom he served, & therefore he was entitled to be registered.—BALLINGAL v. MENZIES (1886), 14 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 127; 24 Sc. L. R. 81.—SCOT.

133 iv. ————]—The manager of a farm, of which his mother was tenant, had the exclusive use & occupation of a bedroom in the farm-house, by virtue of his employment. His mother & sisters also resided in the farm-house, & he took his meals along with them in another room in the house:—Held: he was not entitled to be registered as an "inhabitant-occupier of a dwelling house" in respect of his occupancy of the bedroom.—PHILIP v. ROXBURGH (1888), 16 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 201; 26 Sc. L. R. 181.—SCOT.

133 v. ————]—A clergyman, a member of a religious community, inhabited a house in burgh along with two other clergymen & two lay brothers. He claimed to be enrolled under above Act as "occupant, in virtue of service, of dwelling house," under certain trustees. Each member of the community had the exclusive use of a separate bedroom, of which he kept the key. The public rooms were open to all, & they dined together in the refectory:—Held: the claim was good.—WATSON v. ANNAN (1892), 20 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 83; 30 Sc. L. R. 77.—SCOT.

133 vi. ————]—The "boots" in a hydropathic establishment occupied a separate bedroom for which he had a key & from which he could exclude other persons. The whole hydropathic building was under one roof. The boots took his meals with the other servants, in the servants' dining-hall. The manager, who had the whole control of the servants, & the right to engage & to dismiss them, occupied, with his family, rooms in the establishment, the entrance of these rooms being obtained only by a door from the main corridor of the building:—Held: the boots was not entitled to be enrolled in the register of voters as an inhabitant-occupier.—COLQUHOUN v. YOUNG (1897), 25 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 101; 35 Sc. L. R. 110; 5 S. L. T. 218.—SCOT.

134 i. ————]—Each teacher in a college conducted by a religious community had, as such, during the qualifying period, the exclusive use of a separate bedroom in the college by virtue of his office or employment as a teacher in the college, which was managed by a resident his master, occupied during the qualifying period one room over a stable within the curtilage of his master's premises. The building containing the stable & the room over it belonged to the master, but no part thereof was inhabited by him. As part of the terms of his service the coachman was obliged to, & in fact did, take his meals with the other servants in his master's dwelling-house. He had access to & used the room over the stable as a bedroom, & no right of control over it existed in the master:—Held: the coachman was an inhabitant occupier of the room over the stable as his dwelling-house within the above sect. & was entitled to the service franchise in respect of such occupation.—LASKEY v. MICHELMORE (1907), 98 L. T. 105; 71 J. P. 559; 24 T. L. R. 61; 52 Sol. Jo. 47; 6 L. G. R. 74; 2 Smith, Reg. Cas. 47.

135. ————]—An officer in the army or soldier who separately & exclusively occupies for the qualifying period regimental quarters in barracks, which are a dwelling-house within Registration Act, 1878 (c. 26), s. 5, occupies such quarters by virtue of office, service, or em-principal, under the supreme control of the superior-general of the community, who himself lived in Paris:—Held: the teachers were entitled to the franchise.—ALEXANDER v. BURKE (1887), 22 L. R. Ir. 443.—IR.

134 ii. ————]—Where W.'s gardener, during the qualifying period, exclusively occupied a bedroom over W.'s coach-house, in which bedroom he took his meals, which were prepared by W.'s cook, & sent to him from W.'s house, the coach-house containing W.'s carriages, & being situate in a detached walled yard, separated from his house by an avenue, but included in the grounds surrounding it:—Held: the gardener was entitled to the franchise.—HOLLY v. BURKE (1887), 22 L. R. Ir. 463.—IR.

134 iii. ————]—Each teacher & lay brother in college conducted by a religious community had, as such, during the qualifying period the exclusive use of a separate bedroom in the college, which was managed by a resident principal, under the supreme control of the superior-general of the community, who himself lived in Paris:—Held: there was nothing to show that the bedroom separately occupied by each of the voters was his dwelling house, & they were not entitled to the franchise.—LADD v. O'TOOLE, [1904] 2 I. R. 389; 37 L. T. 229.—IR.

134 iv. ————]—Where an employee of a firm by virtue of his employment occupied a separate room in a house, none of his employers inhabiting the house, & there were certain "understandings" regulating the occupation by him of his room, under which the manager could change him from one room to another if necessary, & under which he could not be in his bedroom during business hours without special permission, nor on Saturdays up to 2 p.m. nor on Sundays between 11 a.m. & 1 p.m.:—Held: as these circumstances were inconsistent with the ordinary ideas of a man's dwelling or home, the room was not inhabited by the claimant as a dwelling house, & he was not entitled to the franchise.—M'QUADE v. CHARLTON, [1904] 37 L. L. T. 19.—IR.

e. ————]—Room under sole control of claimant.—Draper's establishment.—The claimant was, along with several others, in the employment of P., who carried on an extensive drapery business in L. Each of the claimants was to have a yearly salary, & board, & a room to himself, & the ployment under the Crown, & is an inhabitant occupier within the meaning of Representation Act, 1884, s. 3. The fact that an officer or soldier of a superior grade occupies quarters in the same block of buildings as an officer or soldier of inferior grade, is not an inhabitancy of the whole block of buildings by a person under whom the last-mentioned officer or soldier serves, which will prevent the acquisition by him of the service franchise, if otherwise qualified. A servant does not the less inhabit a dwelling-house, nor is it the less a dwelling-house because the master makes & enforces regulations for the good government of the servant & of his house. Nor does the fact that the master retains for himself, or delegates to others, the power of entering a servant's house for the purpose of maintaining order, prevent the sole & exclusive use of the house. The proviso to sect. 3 of the last-mentioned Act, which prevents the gaining of the service franchise, where a dwelling-house is inhabited by a person under whom the inhabitant serves, only applies where the servant inhabits part of a house, & the master inhabits the house of a part of which the servant has the sole & exclusive use.

(2) There is no authority for the proposition that it is contrary to public policy that soldiers should have votes, soldiers having, in respect to the franchise, always been treated on the same footing as civilians (CAVE, J.).—ATKINSON v. 136. ——— Cubicle in dormitory.]—Appl. occupied during the qualifying period, a cubicle in a police station, by virtue of his service. In the cubicle were his bed & other furniture. The room in which the cubicle was contained twelve similar cubicles, each of which was occupied by a police constable. Each cubicle was about twelve feet by eight feet, & on three sides was enclosed by a wooden partition seven feet high. The fourth side was an outside wall of the building, & had a window in it. Each cubicle had a door opening into a passage, which passed down the main room, & that door had a lock. Each man was entitled to lock up his cubicle at any time. From the top of the partition to the ceiling of the room the distance was about five feet. The passage, the ventilation, & the atmosphere of the dormitory were common to all the cubicles:—Held: although applt. was occupying part of a room in a house, such part of a room was not "separately occupied by him as a dwelling" within Registration Act, 1878 (c. 26), s. 5, inasmuch as, the cubicles being open at the top, each of the occupants would to some extent share the warmth & light of the dormitory as a whole, & the arrangement of the cubicles precluded the idea of that complete or secure privacy implied in the separate occupation of a dwelling.—BARNETT v. HICKMOTT, [1895] 1 Q. B. 691; 64 L. J. Q. B. 407; 72 L. T. 236; 59 J. P. 230; 43 W. R. 284; 11 T. L. R. 230; 39 Sol. Jo. 260; Fox & S. Reg. 412; 15 R. 256.

A lavatory & mess-room were provided for the policemen who occupied these cubicles in another part of the police station. The policemen occupying the cubicles were subject to the control of a superior officer, who had power to impose restrictions upon their use of the cubicles inconsistent with the rights which a person ordinarily exercises in respect of his own dwelling:—Held: the cubicle was not part of a house separately occupied as a dwelling within Registration Act, 1878 (c. 26), s. 5, & applt. was therefore not entitled to the franchise in respect of it under Representation Act, 1884, s. 3.—CLUTTERBUCK v.

The lay brother performed the ordinary duties of a domestic servant, which were prescribed to him by the head clergyman. He was not subject to dismissal by any person living in the house, but he was bound to obey as a servant the orders of the head clergyman. The lay brother claimed to be enrolled as a voter under the above Act, as inhabiting a dwelling house by virtue of service:—Held: he was not entitled to the franchise.—CURRIE v. ANNAN (1892), 20 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 79; 30 So. L. R. 62.—SCOT.

g. ——— Flat in tenement.]—A draper's warehouse consisted of a tenement of several flats, the ground flat being devoted to the business premises, while the upper flats were devoted to sitting-rooms & bedrooms for the firm's servants. The manager occupied rooms on the second flat & a butler occupied for his exclusive use a bedroom on an upper flat. The flats were all reached by a common stair. There was no other communication between the flat occupied by the manager & that occupied by the butler. The manager was entrusted with a general supervision of the whole domestic arrangements provided for the servants & had power to dismiss the domestic servants, including the butler:—Held: the butler was entitled to be regarded as an "inhabitant-occupier" of a dwelling house under above Act.—FALCONER v. M'GUFFIE (1891), 19 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 295; 29 So. L. R. 237.—SCOT.

h. ——— Room over stables.]—A coachman had the exclusive use & control of a room over the stable furnished as a bedroom, in which he kept his clothes & dressed, but he took his meals in the mansion house occupied by his master & slept there as caretaker. He claimed to be enrolled as a voter in respect that he inhabited the room over the stable as a dwelling house by virtue of service in the sense of the above Act:—Held: he was not entitled to the franchise.—CAMPBELL v. MORRIS (1895), 23 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 118; 33 So. L. R. 121; 3 S. L. T. 171.—SCOT.

k. ——— Rooms in college buildings.]—M., a Roman Catholic clergyman, a member of a religious community, along with other members, resided in college buildings, held in trust for the community, he having the exclusive use of one room. He had various religious duties to perform, subject to the orders & directions of the rector, who resided in the college. There was no contract of employment of any kind. He was maintained in the college. M. claimed to be enrolled as a voter under above Act:—Held: assuming that M. occupied his separate rooms in virtue of some office, service, or employment he was disqualified in respect that the rector under whom he served resided in the same house.—MONYHAN (1894), 22 R. B. By Virtue of any Office, Service or Employment.

138. General rule.—Whether house auxiliary to service.—The guiding principle in all these cases is "Is the house auxiliary to the service?" I do not mean to say that that is decisive, because in each of these cases, it is always a question of fact. If the bargain is this: You shall have 15s. a week & the use of the house then it is in the occupation of the employer, & it is not an independent tenancy. I do not mean to say that there may not be an agreement between a master & servant as to the occupation of a house belonging to the master. I am only saying what is the presumption of fact which I must arrive at upon the evidence as to this particular case. I do not at all mean to say that the relation of master & servant may not co-exist with an independent occupation (MELLOR, J.).—PETERSFIELD CASE, STOWE v. JOLLIFFE, AYLWARD'S CASE (1874), 2 O'M. & H. 94. Annotation:—Consd. Dover v. Prosser, [1904] 1 K. B. 84.

139. Residence permitted but not required.—Farm labourers residing in cottages of employer.—By County Electors Act, 1888 (c. 10), any person possessing outside the limits of a borough the Burgess qualification under Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), is entitled to be registered under the Act as a county elector in the parish in which the qualifying property is situate.

By sect. 32 of the latter Act, "if an occupier of any qualifying property, whether the landlord is or is not liable to be rated to the parish in respect thereof, claims to be rated to the poor-rate in respect thereof, & pays or tenders to the overseers of the parish where the property is situate the full amount of the poor-rate last made in respect of such property, the overseers shall put the occupier's name on the rate book in respect of that rate, & if they fail to do so, he shall nevertheless for the purposes of this Act be deemed rated to that rate." Claimants were labourers residing in cottages on the farms of their employers. They were permitted but not required to live in the cottages on the terms that they were to give up possession when their employment ceased, & were either charged a reduced rent or had the rent deducted from their wages. The rates were paid by the employers, & the names of claimants appeared in the rate-book as occupiers:—Held: the facts showed an occupation by claimants not by virtue of service but as householders; the above sect. did not apply, & claimants possessed a Burgess qualification, & they were therefore entitled to be placed on division one of the occupiers' list as both parliamentary voters & county electors.—MARSH v. ESTCOURT (1889), 24 Q. B. D. 147; 59 L. J. Q. B. 100; 54 J. P. 294; 38 W. R. 495; Fox & S. Reg. 157, D. O.

He had exclusive use, rent free, of a room in a cottage on the farm, which was occupied by his grandmother, who paid no rent for the house to the father:—Held: he was not entitled to be entered on the roll as an inhabitant-occupier by virtue of "service," as there was no proof that his occupancy was connected with service.—ARCHIBSON v. The chief lived in a separate house, but the assistant occupied rooms in the asylum, & in respect of this occupation was enrolled as a parliamentary elector under the service franchise. What description sufficient—Successive occupation.]—A party whose qualification to vote for a borough was founded on the occupation of two houses in immediate succession, described in his notice of claim, under the third column, the nature of his qualification as "house," pointing out in the fourth column the situation of the two houses in question:—Held: (1) such description of his qualification was sufficient under Parliamentary Voters Registration Act, 1843 (c. 18), s. 15, Sched. (B) Form No. 6; as the third column was intended to point out the general nature of the qualification, & the fourth to give a more particular description of it; (2) at all events the revising barrister was empowered, under sect. 40 of above Act, to amend the description in the third column, by inserting therein "houses occupied in immediate succession."—*LINCOLN CITY CASE, HITCHINS v. At the revision it was proved that the houses in Ely Place were numbered, & that claimant's house was numbered 16; & upon the application of claimant, the revising barrister amended the claim by adding the number, & inserted the same on the list of voters:—Held: the amendment was warranted by sect. 40 of Parliamentary Voters Registration Act, 1843 (c. 18).—*PARLOW v. 156. Description inaccurate—Duty of revising barrister.]—Where there is an accuracy in the description of the qualification in a notice of claim to be inserted in a list of borough voters, the proper course for the revising barrister is, not to amend the claim, under Parliamentary Voters Registration Act, 1843 (c. 18), s. 40, but to treat the notice as sufficient, provided the mistake or misdescription is such as would have been amended if in a list of voters.—*CAMBRIDGE (BOROUGH) CASE, EADEN v. The name of William Nicholas appeared on the M. list of claimants, but in the list of voters for that parish it stood thus:—"William Nickless":—Held: the sufficiency of the notice was a question of fact, & not of law, the real question being, whether the name was so stated in the list of voters as to be commonly understood.—*HINTON v. 164. Names in schedule at foot of notice.]

—A notice of objection to a county voter, served upon overseers, under Parliamentary Voters Registration Act, 1843 (c. 18), s. 7, was in the following form:—"I hereby give you notice that I object to the names of the persons mentioned & described below being retained in the list of voters," etc.—the several names & descriptions of the parties objected to being contained in a schedule at the foot of the notice:—Held: a sufficient compliance with the statute.—*SMITH v. B. to Parliamentary Voters Registration Act, 1843 (c. 18), being a form of notice of objection to be given to overseers in cities & boroughs, states, "If more than one list of voters, the notice of objection should specify the list to which the objection refers":—Held: this note applies only to those cases where the overseers make out more than one list; & therefore it is not applicable in the city of London, where the overseers make out only the list of householders, the list of freemen being made out by the secondaries.

(2) The above note not being added to Form

175. Place of abode of voter unnecessary.]—A notice of objection to a borough vote, sent by post in the manner prescribed by the Parliamentary Voters Registration Act, 1843 (c. 18), s. 100, need not on the face of it show the voter's place of abode.—MACCLESFIELD CASE, BARCLAY v. PARROTT (1856), 1 C. B. N. S. 49; K. & G. 59; 26 L. J. C. P. 77; 21 J. P. 119; 3 Jur. N. S. 672; 5 W. R. 75; 140 E. R. 20.

176. —.]—Notice of objection to the name of resp. being retained on the ownership portion of the register was sent by applt. by post to resp., & was duly received by him. Applt. omitted to insert in the body of the notice resp.'s place of abode as described in the register, as required by Registration Order, 1895, Sched. 1, Form 5 (a), but, with the intention of saving postage, placed it on the back of the notice, where it served as the postal address of resp.:—Held: the notice of objection was good, although it did not strictly follow the form prescribed by the Order.—LINFORTH v. BUTLER, [1899] 1 Q. B. 116; 68 L. J. Q. B. 3; 79 L. T. 498; 47 W. R. 141; 15 T. L. R. 34; 43 Sol. Jo. 46; 1 Smith, Reg. Cas. 162.

177. Grounds of objection must be stated.]—A notice of objection sent to a voter on the list of £12 occupiers for a county, must specify the grounds of objection according to the provisions of 28 & 29 Vict. c. 36, s. 6.—BENNETT v. BRUMFITT, ALDERSON'S CASE (1868), L. R. 4 C. P. 407; 1 Hop. & Colt. 80; 38 L. J. C. P. 65; 19 L. T. 283; 33 J. P. 328; 17 W. R. 202.

178. —.]—A notice of objection to a voter on the register of county voters, stated that the objection was grounded on the third column, & that it related to the nature of the voter's interest in the qualifying property. The objection sought to be proved was, that the qualifying property, being situate within a parliamentary borough, was such & so occupied as to give the right of voting for the borough:—Held: a sufficient notice of objection within the terms of 28 & 29 Vict. c. 36, s. 6.—SIMEY v. DIXON (1871), L. R. 7 C. P. 190; 1 Hop. & Colt. 626; 41 L. J. C. P. 18; 25 L. T. 811; 20 W. R. 238; sub nom. SIMEY v. DIXON, 36 J. P. 168.

179. Nature of qualifying property unnecessary.]—A notice of objection, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 17 & Sched. D. 3, to a person on the Burgess list of a borough, need not specify the parish in which the objector's qualifying property is situate; nor the nature of the property in respect of which the person objected to is rated.

The mayor & assessors of a borough, at a ct. for the revision of the Burgess list, holden between Oct. 1 & 15, the time limited by sect. 18, erroneously determined that certain notices of objection were invalid, & refused to inquire into the qualifications of the persons objected to:—Held: the mayor & assessors had declined jurisdiction; & the ct. granted a mandamus commanding them to hold a ct. to revise the list, although the time limited had elapsed.—R. v. MONMOUTH (MAYOR), R. v. BOLTON (MAYOR) (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 261; 39 L. J. Q. B. 77; 21 L. T. 748; 34 J. P. 566.

on the column of the register mentioned is sufficient, although the objection is taken against a name on the Clerk of

180. Effect of omission to insert place of abode in notice of objection.]—(1) It is essential to the validity of a notice of objection that it should contain the objector's place of abode.

(2) A decision by the revising barrister upon the validity of a notice of objection, is not such a decision as gives the committee jurisdiction to go into the merits of the case.—BEDFORD (BOROUGH) CASE, FLIGHT'S CASE, (1833), Cockb. & Rowe, 37, 70; Per. & Kn. 112, 116.

182. What is sufficient description—Address in list of voters.]—“Of Poplar Grove, D.” is a sufficient description of the place of abode of an objector in a notice of objection, without stating where D. is situated.—“On the register of voters for the township of M.” is sufficient, although in the form given in Parliamentary Voters Registration Act, 1843 (c. 18), Sched. A, No. 5, the word “parish” only is used. Semble: the description of the place of abode of an objector, given in a notice of objection under sect. 7, of above Act, will, in all cases, be sufficient, if it be the same as that inserted in the list of voters.—*LANCASHIRE SOUTHERN DIVISION CASE, GADSBY v. 188. —[In a notice of objection, the place of abode of the objector was described as "The Oaks," without the addition of any parish, township or other district, "on the register of voters for the parish of St. W." In the list of voters for the parish of St. W., the objector's place of abode was described as "St. W.," & his qualifying property as "The Oaks":—Held: (1) the description was insufficient, & could not be aided by a reference to the list of voters, so as to show that the place called "The Oaks" was in the parish of St. W.; (2) the objection was not removed by the finding of the revising barrister that the place referred to was in fact in the parish of St. W.—*WOOLLETT v. (2) Where a parliamentary borough is divided into two divisions, it is not necessary for an objector to state, in his notice of objection, for which of the two divisions he is registered as an elector. No. 11, to Parliamentary Voters Registration Act, 1843 (c. 18), described the objector as being "on the list of voters for the parish of St. Paul." It appeared that there were two lists made out for the parish of St. Paul, viz. the £10 or new qualification list & the reserved right list. 202. —Several lists for one borough.]—Where there are two lists of voters for a borough, the notice of objection should distinctly state on which the objector's name appears. The parish of K. consists of the borough of K., the foreign of K., & the hamlet of L. M., which latter is not within the parliamentary borough, for each of which, separate overseers are appointed & separate rates made. Two lists of persons entitled to vote in K. are made out, one, of persons so entitled in respect of property occupied within the borough of K.; the other, of persons so entitled in respect of property occupied within the foreign of the parish of K.; the former is signed by the overseers of the borough, the latter by the overseers of the foreign:—Held: a notice of objection signed "G. There are also two lists of burgesses for the parish of W. The name of H. J. was on the parliamentary list, No. 1, Div. 1. The revising barrister held the notice to be invalid for omitting to state that the objector was on the “parliamentary” list, & also for omitting to define on which of the several lists his name appeared; & that he had no power to amend:—Held: the objector was not bound to state upon which of the several lists his name appeared; but that it was enough if he followed the words of the note appended to Form (I.), No. 2, in Sched. to Parliamentary & Municipal Registration Act, 1878 (c. 26). Semble: the omission to state that the objector was on one of the “parliamentary” lists was fatal, but was a mistake which the revising barrister had power to amend, & ought to have amended under sect. 28, (2).—JAMES v. Jolliffe (No. 248, post), not a mere temporary disqualification by reason of the receipt of parochial relief during the qualifying period: consequently, in absence of a notice of objection, the revising barrister was not bound to expunge the name of a person who had been in the receipt of such relief.—*HAYWARD v. Estate.” The voter having parted with all the plots specified, except one, which was freehold land of sufficient qualifying value, notice of objection grounded on the third column, & relating to the voter’s interest, was given, & objection taken before the revising barrister that the qualification was misdescribed. He, so deciding, expunged the voter’s name:—Held: (1) the barrister ought not to have entertained any other objection than the one of which notice was duly given; (2) as the identity of the property was not changed by the diminution of it, he had power to amend, & should, under the circumstances, have amended the description in the fourth column by striking out the numbers of the plots which the voter had ceased to own.—*SMITH v. 228. — Shared by two—Independent exercise by one conclusive.]—Where two or more barristers are appointed to revise the same lists, & one hears, & finally adjudicates on a particular case, it is not competent to another to re-hear the case. Two barristers were jointly appointed to revise for L. At a ct. held by one barrister, a claimant was duly objected to; & not being present his name was expunged from the list. The ct. was adjourned, & on a subsequent day the revision of the same list was continued before the other barrister. Claimant came, & gave a reasonable excuse for his absence; & at his instance, the second revising barrister re-heard the case, & restored the name:—Held: the decision was erroneous; for on the first occasion there had been a proceeding in foro contentioso, fully heard & finally determined; besides which there was no evidence that the objector was present, ready with his proofs, on the second hearing.—BLAIN v. At the termination of that sitting the revising barrister, having ascertained that there were no other claimants or persons objected to present who desired to be heard, declared the list closed. On the following day he proceeded in open ct. to read out & initial the names which he expunged from or inserted in the list. Certain claimants, on their names being thus read out, applied for the first time to be heard in support of their claims. At the termination of that sitting the revising barrister, being satisfied that there were no claimants or persons objected to who desired to be heard, declared the lists closed. Upon the occupiers' list was the name of a certain voter who was objected to by an objector who was not an overseer, but at the time of the lists being declared closed no person had applied to be heard either in support of the voter's right to be on the list or in support of the objection thereto, although both the objector & the agent of the person objected to had been present throughout the sittings of the ct. On the following day the revising barrister allowed the objector to prove service of notice of objection & to give prima facie proof of the ground of objection; while he at the same time refused to hear evidence on behalf of the voter in opposition to the objection, on the ground that, the lists having been closed, his application to be heard was too late; & he expunged the voter's name from the list:—Held: notwithstanding Registration Act, 1878 (c. 26), ss. 28 (9), 10, the revising barrister was justified in so doing.—R. v. If he has so decided that question & has, accordingly, admitted or rejected the evidence, as the case may be, then Parliamentary Registration Act, 1843 (c. 18), s. 65, prohibits any appeal from his decision; but that sect. does not enable him to admit & act on evidence, though objected to, irrespective of the question whether it is admissible or not according to the law of evidence.—STOREY v. d. Proof of objection—Admissibility of evidence.]—Questions in cross-examination were objected to as irrelevant & as intended to elicit or expunged or omitted therefrom, by the express decision of the revising barrister who shall have revised the list of voters from which such register shall have been formed:—Held: the intention of the legislature was that where a matter of fact has been fairly raised before the revising barrister, & the revising barrister had heard it, & come to an express decision upon it, his decision might be reviewed by an election committee—now an election judge—in order to see that injustice has not been done. A revising barrister decided that a notice of objection was bad when it was good:—Held: this was an express decision reviewable by the election judge, & giving him jurisdiction to inquire whether the vote of the person objected to was good or bad.—BEWDLEY CASE (No. 2), *ANSON v. 238. Objection cannot be withdrawn.—The public have an interest in an objection to a person's name being retained on the list of voters; & therefore, where notice of objection to such name has been given, the objector has no right of his own accord to withdraw it; at all events, where such notice of objection has been duly given, & the objector appears before the revising barrister in support of it, & proves the giving of such notice, the revising barrister must require the voter's qualification to be proved, & he has no jurisdiction to inquire whether the objector has or not previously withdrawn his notice of objection.—*PROUDFOOT v. 237. Although the requirements of that sub-sect. as to what is to be deemed to be prima facie proof of the ground of objection may not have been satisfied, the revising barrister is entitled, & ought, to give effect to the evidence given in support of the objection, if in his opinion it outweighs the prima facie evidence of the claim afforded by the declaration of the claimant,

The revising barrister found: (a) the house, part of which was alleged to be separately occupied as a dwelling, was itself a house of the description popularly known as an ordinary dwelling-house; (b) the immediate landlord to whom the person in question paid rent resided in the house; (c) such landlord was rated for the entire house as a separate tenement:—Held: (1) these facts constituted evidence upon which the revising barrister could decide that there was prima facie proof of the ground of objection within Parliamentary & Municipal Registration Act, 1878 (c. 26), s. 28, s-s. 10; (2) In order to rebut the prima facie proof of the ground of objection applt. produced a document signed by himself & his landlord containing, inter alia, a statement to the effect that the landlord had no control over the applt.'s rooms; but the revising barrister did not accept the statements in the document as facts, & held that the document was not sufficient to rebut the prima facie proof:—Held: it was competent to the revising barrister to come to that conclusion.—*DOUGLAS v. 241. — Duty of revising barrister to consider each case upon merits.—(1) At a ct. held by a revising barrister objection was taken to the names of certain persons being retained in the occupiers' list for a borough on the ground in each case that they had not occupied as owner or tenant the premises named in the list for twelve months immediately preceding July 15 in the year. The objector proved as to each of the persons objected to: (a) the dwelling-house in respect of which he claimed to be placed on the list formed part of a house which was itself a house of the description known as an ordinary dwelling-house; (b) the landlord or landlady to whom he paid rent also resided in the house; (c) the landlord or landlady was rated & paid the rates for the whole house as a separate tenement. The revising barrister then examined the assistant overseer & the registration clerk for the borough as to the conditions of letting, in the majority of cases in the borough, of houses of the same description as those occupied by the persons objected to:—Held: the revising barrister, if he believed that the proof of the three facts above stated applied to the particular house & occupation as to which the objection was taken, evidence to prove a qualification other than that appearing in the list. The evidence was admitted, & the answers established the right of the voters to ought then to have inquired into the circumstances of the occupation in that particular case; he must not, as he had done in the present case, act upon general evidence with regard to the majority of houses similarly occupied in the borough, & he must therefore be directed to complete the revision. (2) It is always for the revising barrister to judge whether the evidence brought before him on behalf of the objector (which may not be strictly legal evidence) is prima facie proof or not of the ground of objection.—KENT v. FITTALL (No. 3), [1909] 1 K. B. 215; 78 L. J. K. B. 110; 99 L. T. 776; 73 J. P. 33; 25 T. L. R. 41; 53 Sol. Jo. 48; 7 L. G. R. 37; 2 Smith, Reg. Cas. 93, D. C.

242. Failure of objector to appear—Claim must be allowed.]—(1) Where objection is taken to the name of a person being on the list of voters, the revising barrister is bound under Parliamentary & Municipal Registration Act, 1878 (c. 26), s. 28, s-s. 9, to retain the name on the list unless the objector appears by himself or by some person on his behalf in support of the objection. This applies to a case where the objection is made by overseers as well as where the objection is made by a private voter. Therefore, where overseers object to the name of a person who is already on the lodgers' list by writing opposite his name in the list the words "Objected to," but do not appear in support of their objection, the revising barrister is bound to retain the name of the person objected to in the list. Remedy by mandamus—Omission of name from register.]—In a borough comprising several districts, an inhabitant of one district, qualified to be a Burgess, sent in to the town clerk, before the annual revision, his notice of claim to be placed on the Burgess list for his district. The overseers negligently omitted sending any Burgess list for for that district to the revision ct.: the mayor, consequently, decided, against the opinion of the assessors, that applt.'s name could not be placed on any list, though he proved his qualification; & the Burgess roll was made up, omitting his name. On motion, this ct. granted a mandamus to the mayor to insert the name in the Burgess roll.

245. — Names inserted by mistake.]—A revising barrister for a parliamentary borough, owing to an accident to his right hand, availed himself of clerical assistance to mark upon the lists of voters the results of his decisions as pronounced orally in ct. By some inadvertence the clerk omitted to strike off the lists the names of some persons who had been successfully objected to & whose names were ordered by the revising barrister to be expunged. The lists with those names remaining on were delivered by the revising barrister to the town clerk, & the names were accordingly printed in the register of electors for the borough. The mistake was not discovered until the expiration of some months after the register had come into operation. The original lists of voters which had been before the revising barrister were either lost or destroyed:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to grant writs of mandamus to the revising barrister & to the town clerk to have the mistake corrected; in the circumstances there need not be a previous demand & refusal to do the act sought to be enforced; the proper course was for the revising barrister to expunge the names on a copy of the register & to deliver the same to the town clerk, & for the town clerk to make the necessary corrections in the register.—R. v. The revising barrister allowed the claim, but held that at the time the notice of selection was given there was no duplicate entry on the list of voters to which the notice could apply, & he accordingly marked the entry in respect of applt.'s place of abode as the entry to be retained for voting:—Held: the revising barrister was right, & no appeal lay from his decision.—*JONES v. 263. ———. Evidence wrongly admitted.—(1) The name of B. appearing on the occupation list of Division I. of a metropolitan borough, & being duly objected to, on its appearing that the rooms where B. resided & in respect of which he claimed were in an ordinary dwelling-house, that B.'s landlady resided in the house & that she was rated & paid rates for the whole house, the revising barrister held that prima facie proof of the objection had been given. The barrister then proceeded to examine a person employed by the town clerk, "an official canvasser whose duty it was to call at the several houses & obtain from the resident landlord, or some other person competent to give it, all necessary information as to the terms of the occupation of the respective inmates." The canvasser produced his canvass book containing his notes made at the actual time of each inquiry, & reading therefrom deposed on oath that he had been expressly informed by B.'s landlady that the premises occupied by B. were let to him unfurnished; that B. had separate and exclusive occupation; that the landlady performed no services for B. & exercised no control over the premises. The barrister on this testimony, which was uncontradicted, held that the prima facie evidence of the ground of objection had been rebutted, & he retained the name of B. on the list:—Held: the decision of the barrister was wrong & the prima facie proof of the ground of objection had not been rebutted; for on the assumption that the canvasser's evidence was admissible, the fact that the landlady exercised no control over the rooms was no evidence that she had abandoned her right of control over them. If the barrister had found that the landlady had abandoned her right of control, there was no evidence in support of his decision. The revising officer having ruled that the notice was valid, the person whose name was objected to appealed to the county judge, who held that the notice was invalid, & the revising officer thereupon refused to go on & hear the complaint:—Held: no appeal was given by s. 33 of the Act from the revising officer's ruling; & therefore the proceedings before the county judge were coram non iudice.—Re LILLEY & ALLIN (1892), 21 O. 272. Decisions of election committees not binding on court.]—(1) Applt., a freeman of the borough of T., resided with his wife & family, & carried on business as a wine-merchant, at G., more than seven miles from T. In order to obtain a vote for the borough, he paid ninepence a week for the use of a furnished bedroom & a dark closet in a friend's house at T. He had the key of the closet, & between Jan. & July kept some wine samples in it. During that time he slept in the bedroom twelve times, & in the course of the year ending July, 1844, between fifteen & twenty times; but he never took his meals in the house, except as a guest :—Held : applt. had not resided in T. within the meaning of Representation Act, 1832.

(2) The decisions of election committees of the House of Commons would not be regarded as authorities by the ct.

(3) "Residence" is not a technical term; it is a word adopted by the framers of this Act of Parliament from the popular language of the country, & is, therefore, to be interpreted in its popular sense. The term "inhabitation," on the other hand, has a technical meaning when used in Acts of Parliament, but that is not the case with the word "residence" (MAULE, J.).

(4) The statement of facts contained in the case sent by the revising barrister may be amended by him in ct., should he be present.

(5) The fact of a man's sleeping a few nights at a place by no means constitutes it his residence, although I apprehend that in order to constitute residence it may not be necessary that a party should sleep in the place at all. He might himself be absent the whole six months, but if his family were there & he had the intention of returning he might still "reside" within the meaning of this statute (ERLE, J.).

(6) The mere payment of ninepence a week would not make a residence. Residence must mean an actual occupation by the party being there himself or by the presence of his family or servants (TINDAL, C.J.).—TEWKESBURY CASE, WHITHORN v. 297. Who may act—Parliamentary borough comprising several boroughs—Right of mayor of largest borough—Writ previously directed to mayor of smaller borough.]—Under Representation Act, 1867, the Parliamentary borough of The Hartlepoons comprised the municipal borough of Hartlepool & three townships. The municipal borough of West Hartlepool was created in 1887, & the Parliamentary borough of The Hartlepoons then consisted of the municipal boroughs of Hartlepool & West Hartlepool & portions of three townships. According to the last census, the municipal borough within the Parliamentary borough of the Hartlepoons having the largest population was the municipal borough of West Hartlepool. On the completion of the revision of the lists of voters, the town clerk of West Hartlepool claimed that the revised lists of voters should be delivered to him. The revising barrister decided that the town clerk of Hartlepool was the proper person to receive the revised lists of Parliamentary voters, as the writs of election had on the occasion of every Parliamentary election since 1867 been directed to the mayor of Hartlepool:—Held: inasmuch as the writs of election for all the Parliamentary elections since 1867 had always been directed to the mayor of Hartlepool, he was entitled under Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885 (c. 23), s. 12 (4), to be the returning officer for the Parliamentary borough of The Hartlepoons, & therefore, the town clerk of Hartlepool was the proper person to receive the revised lists of Parliamentary voters from the revising barrister.—*R. v. ### SECT. 4.—COMMENCEMENT OF ELECTION.

306. No definite rule.]—(1) I cannot assent to the contentions of petitioners that the candidature of F. commenced on Aug. 26, 1893. At that meeting F. was invited to become a candidate, but he did not accept that invitation (BRUCE, J.).

(2) No definition & no definite rule can be laid down as to the time when an election begins (BRUCE, J.).

(3) I agree that the practice [treating by means of smoking concerts given by political association] is dangerously near to corrupt treating . . . but I cannot, in the circumstances of the present case, say that the observance of the custom by persons, who from time to time acted as chairmen of smoking concerts, was a treating with the intention to influence votes by persons for whose acts F. ought to be held responsible (BRUCE, J.).

(4) Charges in an election petition are of a very serious nature & cannot be dealt with in the same way as particulars in a civil action. It is the duty of the ct. to see that such charges shall be formulated in definite terms & that they shall not be brought by the petitioners from time to time after the expiration of the statutory period fixed by the Act of Parliament [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883] (BRUCE, J.).

(5) The ct. ought not to allow particulars to be amended in such a way as to bring in charges which were not pointed at by the petition (BRUCE, J.).—LANCASTER (COUNTY), LANCASTER DIVISION CASE, BRADSHAW & KAYE v. FOSTER (1896), 5 O'M. & H. 39.

Annotation :—Generally, Reid. Great Yarmouth Case (1906), 5 O'M. & H. 176.

307. Not date of writ—Or nomination.]—(1) I cannot think the period of candidature or the period of agency is to be limited either by the date of the writ or by the day of nomination (HAWKINS, J.).

(2) With regard to the hat cards there is nothing I think which entitles resp. to relief. It is not proved, nor is it attempted to prove that these were used contrary to the order or without the sanction of resp. or his election agent. Any one who reads the Act of Parliament [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883] must know that the use of such cards is an infringement of the Act; & (3) although a man may not know the law because he has not taken the trouble to make himself acquainted with it, no one can call that "inadvertence," within the meaning of the Act. The election therefore must be declared void (HAWKINS, J.).

(4) Upon the present occasion, I think, the limit of time to which we ought fairly to apply our minds is a period commencing from the time when it was first known that resp. announced his intention to present himself as a candidate for election at the next ensuing election (HAWKINS, J.).—WALSALL CASE, HATELEY, MOSS & MASON v. JAMES (1892), 4 O'M. & H. 123; Day, 106.

308. ———.]—(1) When a man begins to incur expenses with regard to an election, there is nothing to prevent his appointing an election agent. In some cases canvassers are set to work, & committees are formed long before the dissolution or the issue of the writ. If those expenses are not to be returned as election expenses, the words of the Act [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883] as to the maximum amount of expenditure are set at naught (CAVE, J.).

(2) If people are called together for the purpose of exciting their political enthusiasm, & if the so-called treating is a mere incident of such a gathering, it is not an offence within the Act [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883]. It does not make it corrupt treating that a roof or warmth is provided for the meeting, nor is it necessarily corrupt treating if the persons attending the meeting are provided with some sort of refreshment. But if they are gathered together merely to gratify their appetites & so to influence their votes, then it is treating within the Act (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J.).

(3) The duties of the Public Prosecutor were confined to assisting the ct. at the conclusion of the case in considering whether any particular individual had been guilty of corrupt or illegal practices. If the Public Prosecutor had witnesses, who would throw light on this, they might be summoned to attend (CAVE, J.).

It is no part of his [the Public Prosecutor's] duty to call evidence with respect to matters at issue in the petition, yet if there should be in his opinion a collusive withholding of evidence, it would be his duty to interfere & to call that evidence himself (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J.).

The ct. ought to be very cautious in allowing such evidence to be called by the Public Prosecutor (CAVE, J.).

(4) It is impossible to say that only those expenses are to be returned which are incurred after the writ is issued (CAVE, J.).

(5) Resp. has failed to prove that he & his election agent took all reasonable means for preventing the commission of corrupt & illegal practices at the election. The lesson, therefore, to be gathered from this election petition . . . is that those who stand for Parliament must feel the full responsibility of personally taking care that those whom they allow to act as their agents are not guilty of corrupt & illegal practices, & if they fail to do that they disentitle themselves to the relief from the consequences of the acts of others which the judges are entitled to give them under Corrupt Practices Act, 1883, s. 22 (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J.).—ROCHESTER CASE, BARRY & VARRALL v. 309. — Or occurrence of vacancy.]—GREAT YARMOUTH CASE, WHITE v. FELL, No. 940, post.

310. —.]—(1) The first principle is that the election expenses do not necessarily begin on the day the writ is issued, that is to say, the promotion, the conduct & management of the election do not begin necessarily upon the day when the writ is issued (LAWRANCE, J.).

(2) But the next principle that I gather from the cases is this—a great point was made when the question first arose: "Well, but you cannot do this because you have no election agent." I think the answer to this is that there is nothing to prevent you having an election agent if you like. . . . But if you have not an election agent & expenses have been incurred which are expenses which ought to be returned, there is no difficulty in your election agent getting possession of those & paying for those & getting vouchers for them, & returning them as election expenses (LAWRANCE, J.).

(3) I think that when a man puts himself in that position, "I am not merely nursing the constituency; I am not merely considering something in the distant future, but I am going to put myself by my candidature in such a position that I shall be ready at any moment for the election"—then I think what he does then may be considered as part of the conduct & management of the election, & I consider that the expenses may be, & some of them are, expenses of the election (PICKFORD, J.).

(4) A man ought to be able to give his vote without any compulsion from either side, & there ought not to be people in the polling-booth such as M., who was watching for his employers . . . to see whether a man has voted (LAWRANCE, J.).—DORSETSHIRE, EASTERN DIVISION CASE, LAMBERT & BOND v. 312. Whether on appointment of election agent.]—(1) I do not agree with my learned brother (GRANTHAM, J.) that the day when the election begins is necessarily the day when the agent is appointed, nor can I agree that one cannot have election expenses until one has got an election agent (LAWRANCE, J.).

(2) On Dec. 27, C. was adopted, the association J.—VOL. XX.

dissolved, & the election agent was appointed. From that time election expenses began, & those expenses do not include the ones of which complaint has been made (LAWRANCE, J.).

(3) It was contended that T. had been seen in a committee room where he was supposed to have seized a few cards or handbills & scattered them about the street. But that is not nearly sufficient to make resp. liable for his doings (LAWRANCE, J.).

(4) The person charged can be informed afterwards as to what has been said against him. I think it is better he should remain out of ct. (GRANTHAM, J.).

(5) If expenses are primarily or principally expenses incurred for the promotion of the interests of the candidate they are election expenses (LAWRANCE, J.).

(6) It is true that in election cases we have to throw overboard the rules which regulate ordinary cases, because we have to deal with peculiar circumstances (LAWRANCE, J.).—MAIDSTONE CASE, EVANS v. CASTLEREAGH (VISCOUNT) (1906), 5 O.M. & H. 200.

313. —.]—(1) In Oct. 1903, M. was acting as election agent; on wards we find him expending money on meetings and so forth . . . these expenses ought to have been returned [as election expenses] (LAWRANCE, J.).

(2) Resp., in my opinion, properly & legitimately incurred these expenses in holding meetings as a candidate & in educating the electors, but although his primary object may have been to secure his own return, they were not expenses incurred by him with reference to the conduct & management of the election. I take the view that there is no difference whatever between candidature & prospective candidature, but there is a great difference between campaign & battle. When the time of battle comes all expenditure must be returned as election expenditure under the Act (GRANTHAM, J.).

(3) In regard to the garden party, I have nothing to say against the Liberal Social Council as such, . . . but there was a man concerned who did know perfectly well [that it was corrupt treating] & saw to what use the party could be put. . . . I find that the giving of the garden party was treating, & that M. [the agent] was at the bottom of it & was thereby guilty of corrupt treating (LAWRANCE, J.).

(4) If you give drink to a man with the intention of confirming his vote & of keeping up the party zeal of those believed to be already supporting your candidate, then that is corrupt treating (LAWRANCE, J.).

(5) Petitioner ought to pay to resp. the extra costs to which he had been put by reason of the charges upon which no evidence has been offered.

(6) With regard to the charges upon which the ct. is not unanimous, it must be borne in mind that upon the authority of previous cases petitioners were justified in bringing forward those charges; . . . under those circumstances we think that petitioners are entitled to their costs of those charges (GRANTHAM, J.).—CORNWALL, BODMIN DIVISION CASE, TOM & DUFF v. 326. Election agent—Qualifications of.]—(1) The object of the Act [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883], is that a person shall be the election agent who shall be effectively responsible for all the acts done in procuring the election. The affairs of the election should be carried on in the light of day, & a respectable & responsible man, responsible to the candidate & to the public, should be there to do all that is necessary (FIELD, J.).

(2) It is important to observe that the Act makes a great distinction between corrupt practices & illegal practices. A corrupt practice is a thing the mind goes along with. An illegal practice is a thing the Legislature is determined to prevent, whether it is done honestly or dishonestly (FIELD, J.).

(3) We see no reason why they [resp. & election agent] should not have certificates. We have no reason to think they have not answered perfectly honestly, truly, & fairly (FIELD, J.).—BARROW-IN-FURNESS CASE, SCHNEIDER v. DUNCAN (1886), 54 L. T. 618; 4 O'M. & H. 76.

329. ——— Employed in non-political work—Secretary to candidate—Part of salary returnable as expenses.]—(1) [Petition alleged the non-inclusion of any figure for the services of the clerks & the election agent.] First, as to the election agent. If it could be said that B. was so employed by F., that his employment was in substance political or partly political, that he was retained partly as a private secretary but also for all political work that F. might have, as registration agent during the years when there was no election, as election agent during the years when there was an election, it would be necessary to return a proportionate part of his salary as being expenses of the election, because they would be the hire of his services as election agent. But the facts that B. was given an extra payment in 1900 & that F. was prepared & even desirous, but for personal grounds, to appoint somebody else in the place of B. as election agent for this election show that we cannot consider it as part of the duties of B. in respect of his standing employment to be election agent when called upon (PHILLIMORE, J.).

(2) The next point I deal with is the complaint that people were paid for piloting carriages or motors to & from the houses of the electors. These people have been classed by the election agent in his returns as messengers. . . . All such

k. Sub-agents—Whether limited in number.]—No limit can be placed to the number of persons through whom the sub-agency may extend.—RE NIAGARA ELECTION, BLACK v. PLUMB (1874), H. E. C. 568.—CAN.

classes of odd men may very properly be ranked as messengers (PHILLIMORE, J.).

(3) Was W. an agent of resp.? His general position was that of a keen supporter, an odd supporter; he drove about in a motor car provided for speakers from meeting to meeting; he from time to time visited the central committee room; he was one of the assenters to resp.'s nomination & a counter at the election. All these things, all even combined, are not enough to make him an agent, but they bring him into close connection with the election & make it not improbable that his services might, on an emergency, be put into requisition, or that the voluntary tender of his services might be adopted or recognised by the agents of resp. (PHILLIMORE, J.).

(4) [Special train with horses, etc., for use in election sent by resp.'s son.] It is said that this comes within clause 7 of Corrupt Practices Act, 1883; we have come to the conclusion that there is no ground of complaint in this respect (PHILLIMORE, J.).—HARTLEPOOLS CASE (1910), 6 O'M. & H. 1.

He alleged that he voluntarily undertook the duties of a sub-agent without any payment or reward, & that when he voted he was under the impression & belief that he would receive no payment, & that neither before, during, nor after the election did he ask for any payment for his services, & that previous to his entering on his duties he was informed that he could not be paid for his services. Upon an application for relief under the Corrupt Practices Act, 1883:—Held: it was not a case in which the ct. could grant the application.—Re ESSEX, SOUTH WESTERN DIVISION CASE (1886), 2 T. L. brought up & distributed gratis among the company by the landlord of the public-house at his own cost & without the sanction of resp. — Held: no case of treating was made out, for though the above circumstances might afford some slight ground for suspicion, yet there was no plain & positive proof of treating corruptly; providing refreshments on the polling-day for persons bond fide engaged in the work of the election was not illegal.

(2) The law is a stringent law, a harsh law, a hard law; it makes a man responsible who has directly forbidden a thing to be done, when that thing is done by a subordinate agent. It is in point of fact making the relation between a candidate & his agent the relation of master & servant, & not the relation of principal & agent (MARTIN, B.).—WESTMINSTER CASE (1869), 20 L. T. 238; 1 O.M. & H. 89.

342. — — —.]—(1) The law of agency, as applied to election petitions, has been differently expressed by different learned judges, some of whom have likened it to the relation of master & servant & another to the employer of persons to run a race for him. All agree that the relation is not the common law one of principal & agent, but that the candidate may be responsible for the acts of one acting on his behalf, though the acts be beyond the scope of the authority given, or, indeed, in violation of express injunction (GROVE, J.).

(2) It must be borne in mind in these cases, that although the object of the statute [Elections Act, 1868] by which these election tribunals was created was to prevent corrupt practices, still the tribunal is a judicial, & not an inquisitorial, one; it is a court to hear & determine according to law, & not a commission armed with powers to inquire into & suppress corruption (GROVE, J.).

(3) In proving general corruption, it would be impossible to specify names (GROVE, J.).

(4) My learned brothers, whom I have consulted with respect to the production of the telegrams, coincide in the opinion that I decidedly ought not to interfere to compel the production of those telegrams, or even to say anything to the Post-Office officers to procure their production. I am not by this decision saying that cases might not arise where, upon strong specific grounds being shown, the judge might interpose his authority (GROVE, J.).

(5) A point reserved for the ct. must go to the whole trial. A point reserved must be such a point that if the ct. decide it against my ruling, it will affect the whole result of the trial. No point can be reserved unless it goes to the whole result (GROVE, J.).

(6) So far as regards the present question, I am of opinion that to establish agency for which the candidate would be responsible, he must be proved to have by himself, or by his authorised agent, employed the persons whose conduct is impugned, to act on his behalf, or have to some extent put himself in their hands or to have made common cause with them, all these or either of these, for

B. What constitutes Agency.

(a) In General.

350. No precise rule.—(1) No one can lay down a precise rule as to what would constitute evidence of being an agent. Every instance in which it is shown that, either with the knowledge of the member or candidate himself, or to the knowledge of his agents who had employment from him, a person acts at all in furthering the election for him, in trying to get votes for him, is evidence tending to show that the person so acting was authorised to act as his agent (BLACKBURN, J.).

(2) It is by no means essential that it should be shown that a person so employed, in order to be an agent for that purpose, is paid in the slightest degree, or is in the nature of being a paid person. But it is a question what is sufficient evidence upon that point (BLACKBURN, J.).

(3) Resp. had deposited £11,000 with P. directing him to apply it honestly, but exercising no control at all over him. . . . A person proved to be an agent to this extent is not only himself an agent of the candidate, but also makes those agents whom he employs. The extent to which a person is an agent differs according to what he is shown to have done. An agent employed so extensively as is shown here, makes the candidate

PART VI. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 3.— B. (a).

350 i. No precise rule.—The law of election agency is not capable of precise definition, but is a shifting elastic law, capable from time to time of being moulded to meet the inventions of those who in election matters seek to get quences of their acts.—Re NORTH ONTARIO ELECTION, GIBBS v. WHEELER (1879), H. E. C. 785; 4 S. C. R. 430.—CAN.

responsible, not only for his own acts, but also for the acts of those whom he, the agent, did so employ, even though they are persons whom the candidate might not know or be brought in personal contact with. In paying money to a person not declared to be his election agent, resp. was in the most direct terms acting contrary to Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 29), s. 4. Besides I cannot in the slightest degree doubt that if a fund is placed in the hands of an agent by a candidate, & if it is shown that the agent expended it in corrupt practices afterwards, it is evidence tending to show that the candidate paying into those hands the money that was spent in corrupt practices was himself intending that it should be spent in corrupt practices (BLACKBURN, J.).

(4) As to this word "corruptly" the true construction of Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 4, is that which was stated by Mr. Justice WILLES in giving his opinion in the House of Lords in the case Cooper v. Slade, No. 404, post, namely, that "corruptly" there does not mean wickedly, or immorally, or dishonestly, or anything of that sort, but with the object & intention of doing that which the legislature plainly means to forbid. In fact, giving meat or drink is treating, when the person who gives it has an intention of treating . . . not otherwise; & in all cases where there is any evidence to show that meat or drink has been given, it is a question of fact for the judge whether the intention is made out by the evidence, which in every individual case must stand upon its own grounds; & although each individual case may be a mere feather's weight by itself, & so small that one would not act upon it, yet if there is a large number of such cases, a large number of slight cases will together make a strong one; & consequently it must always be a very important inquiry what was the scale, the amount & the extent to which it was done (BLACKBURN, J.).

(5) Insufficient return by agent of expenses is evidence of knowledge on his part of corrupt practices.—BEWDLEY CASE (1869), 19 L. T. 676; 1 O'M. & H. 16.

351. —[1] The managers of an association having circulated addresses & papers issued by the candidate, will be presumed to have done so with his knowledge, or with that of his agents, so as to constitute the association an agent of such candidate, & to make him responsible for any illegal acts of its managers. Where an association or a person is tacitly allowed by a candidate, or with the candidate's knowledge, to promote his election, that is some evidence to show that he is an agent; & where a body acts in support of a candidate, the assistance being a substantial benefit, & he does not hold them off or repudiate them, he must accept the consequences, & be responsible for their malpractices.

What is the definition of agency for which the candidate would be responsible? What relation between the candidate & the person who is shown to be guilty of a corrupt practice would be sufficient to make the candidate responsible. . . . I think all one can do is this, to say that wherever a person is in any way allowed by a candidate or has the candidate's sanction to try to carry on his election & to act for him, that is some evidence to show that he is his agent (BLACKBURN, J.).

(2) The rule of Parliamentary election law that a candidate is responsible for the corrupt act of his agent although he himself not only did not intend it or authorise it but bonâ fide did his best to hinder it, is a rule that must fall at times with great hardship upon particular persons (BLACKBURN, J.).

(3) The further question as to whether or not resp. should have the seat would depend upon the result arrived at after going through the individual votes & seeing, without regard to who it was corrupted this man or that what was the majority of uncorrupted voters & whether there was a majority for any one who had not rendered himself by personal misconduct incapable of standing (BLACKBURN, J.). — TAUNTON CASE, WILLIAMS & MEILLOR v. COX (1869), 21 L. T. 109; 1 O'M. & H. 181.

352. —[1] It has never been distinctly & precisely defined what degree of evidence is required to establish such a relation between the sitting member & the person guilty of corruption as should constitute agency (BLACKBURN, J.).

(2) I believe the law to be, though I do not think it has been distinctly settled, that if the bribery or corruption was to such an extensive degree (though it was not shown to be in any way connected with the agents or persons belonging to the members) as to show that it was not a fair and open election, but a corrupt election; or if it was shown that corrupt practices of any sort, however small, were committed by an agent of the sitting member, the seat is vacated; & it has been established that it is not at all necessary & essential that the agent should have been acting with the knowledge or consent, or with the request of the member; if he abuses his authority, & commits corruption, it equally vacates the seat, as if the corrupt practice had been committed by the express direction & authority of the member (BLACKBURN, J.). — BRIDGEWATER CASE (1869), 1 O'M. & H. 112.

Annotation:—As to (2) Reid. Ipswich Case, Packard v. Collings (1886), 54 L. T. 619.

353. Deduced from all facts of the case.—

(1) It is bribery under Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 3, to promise to see that a workman shall be no loser of wages by giving his vote.

(2) What is the definition of agency? What is the relation between the sitting member & the person guilty of a corrupt practice that shall constitute agency, so as to make the sitting member responsible for it? At present I cannot go further than to say that each case must be considered upon the whole facts taken together, & it must be determined in that way whether the relation between the person guilty of the corrupt practice & the member was such as to make the latter fairly responsible for it (BLACKBURN, J.).

(3) I do not think it necessary that there should be any paid agency to make a candidate responsible for what the person has done. I think that many of these volunteer agents who were heads of committees might or might not be so far connected with resp. that he would be responsible for them (BLACKBURN, J.).

Counsel for petitioner laid it down as a definite proposition of law that wherever a sitting member or his agents for whom he was responsible had employed a person to obtain a vote though they meant him to obtain it honestly, yet if he did that corruptly which they meant him to do uncorruptly they must take the consequences. To a very considerable extent I am inclined to agree to that proposition (BLACKBURN, J.).

354. —.—(1) It rests with the judge, not misapplying or straining the law but applying the principles of the law to changed states of fact, to form his opinion as to whether there has or has not been what constitutes agency in these election matters (GROVE, J.).

(2) It was proved that resp. was vice-president of a certain society, that he spoke at meetings of that society, & that many members were to his knowledge active partisans of his, & were actively canvassing for him, that there were certain rooms belonging to this society, which might in one sense be called committee-rooms, but which were not committee rooms in the old sense of being occupied by a certain fixed committee. These rooms were placarded with resp.'s name & at them business in connection with the election was transacted. These facts would prima facie bring the case within the law of agency, & would be sufficient to satisfy a tribunal that resp. had put himself in the hands of certain persons, so as to make himself liable if they, for the purpose of promoting his election, committed acts of bribery (GROVE, J.).

(3) A candidate is responsible generally for the deeds of those who, to his knowledge, for the purpose of promoting his election, canvass & do such other acts as may tend to promote his election, provided that the candidate or his authorised agents have reasonable knowledge that those persons are so acting with that object (GROVE, J.).

(4) Under Elections Act, 1868, powers are given to a judge which may be exceedingly useful for the purpose of aiding inquiries of this sort, but it appears to be impossible that a judge can take upon himself to inquire into the conduct of a whole constituency, or call witnesses before him & treat them as if he were an adverse counsel testing their evidence by cross-examination, because he has not materials for doing so, & because it would be entirely a non-judicial proceeding (GROVE, J.).—WAKEFIELD CASE (1874), 2 O'M. & H. 100.

Annotation:—As to (4) Consd. Monmouth (Boroughs) Case (1901), 5 O'M. & H. 166.

355. —.—(1) The fact that resp. is not called is a very startling one, & without at all inferring therefrom that he is a party to any malpractices, it does appear to me that there must have been some very strong reasons for not calling him. When a resp. is charged through his agent with bribery, the practice has been, as far as my experience goes, universal to put resp. in the box, to prove, even if he is not personally charged, that to the best of his endeavour he has used all his exertions to make the election a pure one (GROVE, J.). (2) I think it highly desirable that in election inquiries the law of principal & agent should be, as it is, rather one of facts than of distinct rules; for this reason, that when the judges have laid down a rule as to what constitutes agency, in the next election petition which they try they find that that rule has been evaded; therefore it must always remain a mixed question of law & fact, though very much a question of fact, as to what constitutes agency (GROVE, J.).—EVESHAM CASE, HARTLAND v. It was also proved that the same persons had been prevailed upon to travel from Chester, their then place of residence, & to vote at the election by a promise made to them by H. that their expenses should be paid, & that a sum of £5, which was greatly in excess of their expenses, had actually been paid to them by H. on account of such expenses, & in pursuance of the promise made by him to them:—Held: the fact that these persons were not entitled to vote at the election made no difference, & that as they had prima facie a right to vote, the case was within the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), & the promise to pay their expenses conditionally upon their voting for the sitting member, & the subsequent payment of those expenses were consequently corrupt practices.

(2) Authority from a candidate or from his agent to canvass, or to procure votes on his behalf, is, as a rule, the test of agency; but agency will not in all cases be limited within these bounds, as it may under the new system assume a novel form, in which it may be necessary for the ct. to recognise it.

It is a power of attorney to the extent to which it goes to every individual in any of those classes to do that which the circular requests him to do. It must be looked to, I think, as the foundation of authority & agency, such as existed in the election. Its effect was to make an agent of every person having authority down to the last grade, that of overlookers over the hands, & to request, & therefore authorise, each such to influence the hands who were under him for the purpose of inducing them to vote for the candidates upon whose behalf this document was issued, & any overlooker, & consequently anybody in that or any higher grade, who bond fide took up the Tory side, & who acted upon the circular & did canvass for resps., became their agent, & his acts did bind them (WILLES, J.).

It may proceed directly from the alleged principal or it may be created indirectly through one or more authorised agents.—Re LISGAR DOMINION ELECTION (1902), 22 C. L. T. 433; 14 Man. L. R. 310.—CAN.

who has been guilty of illegality, or whether the illegality has been committed by his agent only, even without his authority or against his will, provided it be done in his agency & for the supposed benefit of his principal, such principal must bear the brunt, & cannot hold the benefit in respect of that in which the agent has compromised him. The amount of the injury done by the agent, if the injury has been done of the character which I have described, is immaterial (WILLES, J.).

(3) Is it undue influence within the meaning of Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 5, to discharge servants who have votes on the eve of a Parliamentary election upon the ground of their politics differing from their masters? This sect. uses language which makes it undue influence to practise intimidation directly or indirectly with intent to influence the vote of a single voter. Whether the voter be the person ill-treated, or whether the ill-treatment be violence or damage done by the removal of custom or business, or employment, is immaterial. If it is done with a view to affect votes, or interfere with the free exercise of the franchise, it is within the prohibition of the sect. The wrongful dismissal by an employer of a voter or voters from his employment shortly before the general election, upon the ground of his political opinion, is evidence of intimidation within the sect. (WILLES, J.).

(4) Another question arises as to the dismissal of workmen by their masters immediately before a Parliamentary election, & that is this: where an employer has a mixed motive for dismissing his man, where he has a reason for getting rid of him apart from his politics, is the employer bound, in point of law, to abstain from getting rid of him merely because of the general election coming on? In point of law as on abstract question he is not bound to abstain. Any sensible man or sound lawyer advising him would say, "You may do so, but take care how you do so, because unless you prove clearly that you have a good ground for discharging your servant apart from the political one, it is inevitable that your discharge of him will be imputed to your dislike not of the man himself, but of his politics (WILLES, J.).

(5) When seat not claimed evidence exculpatory of petitioner's party not admissible.

(6) The question whether what was done at a municipal election had any effect upon the Parliamentary election is one of fact, & it is for the ct. to say whether the parties engaged in the municipal election had not the Parliamentary election in their minds. If the municipal election occurred three months before the Parliamentary election, & the interests involved in the former were purely local or personal, that would divide the one from the other, & no notice ought to be taken in reference to the Parliamentary election of what was done with respect to the municipal election.

(7) [Certain charges withdrawn constituted a great portion of the staple of the petition.] Those charges were alleged & persisted in up to a late moment & then were only in part withdrawn. There is no ground whatever for making them. . . . Under these circumstances I ought not to make any order with respect to costs on either side (WILLES, J.).

(8) If fellow workmen, for political purposes ill-treat & expel one another from the common place of employment, they are guilty of the offence against which the undue influence clause of the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), is specially directed.

(9) If masters stand by whilst persons of subordinate position & workmen in their employ exercise undue influence over other persons in their employ there is a strong inference against the masters that they aided & abetted the conduct of those exercising undue influence, but not an inference sufficiently strong to affect the election.—BLACKBURN CASE, POTTER & FEILDEN v. 367. ——— May be express—Or implied.]—

(1) The relation between a candidate & a person whom he constitutes his agent is much more intimate than that which subsists between an ordinary principal & agent. The closest analogy is that of a sheriff & his under-sheriff & bailiffs. For, as regards the seat, the candidate is responsible for all the misdeeds of his agent committed within the scope of his authority, although they were done against his express directions, & even in defiance of them. There is never any difficulty or doubt as regards this proposition. An agent is a person employed by another to act for him & on his behalf either generally or in some particular transaction. The authority may be actual, or it may be implied from circumstances. It is not necessary in order to prove agency to show that the person was actually appointed by the candidate. If a person not appointed were to assume to act in any department of service as election agent, & the candidate accepted his services as such, he would thereby ratify the agency, so that a man may become agent of another in either of two ways, by actual employment or by recognition & acceptance. The next question is, if agent, what is he agent for? If a person were appointed or accepted as agent for canvassing generally, & he were to bribe or treat any voter, the candidate would lose his seat. But if he was employed or accepted to canvass a particular class, as if a master were asked to canvass his workmen, & he went out of his way & bribed a person who was not his workman, the candidate would not be responsible, because this was not within the scope of his authority. For the same reason, if a person whom the candidate had not in any way authorised to canvass at all for him, were to take upon himself to bribe a voter, the candidate would not be responsible for the wrongful act. No candidate could ever secure a seat, if he were made answerable for the acts of unauthorised persons (LUSH, J.).

(2) [Regarding costs of witnesses subpoenaed to give evidence as to the recriminatory case, but who were not required when the claim of the seat had been withdrawn] we must give directions

3671. ——— May be express—Or implied.]—It must be made out that a party, before he is chargeable as an agent, has been entrusted in some way or other by the candidate with some material part of the business of the election which ordinarily is performed, or is supposed to be performed, by the candidate himself. That entrusting may be made out not merely by an express appointment to the performance of some material duty in reference to the election, but may be made out by implication.—DUNGANNON (BOROUGH) CASE (1880), 3 O'M. & H. 101.—IR, that the registrar will be good enough to examine & not to allow witnesses, who, in his opinion, were called for the purpose of the scrutiny after it was no longer sought (LUSH, J.).

(3) I think the ct. is quite authorised to require the production of the telegrams. The statute contemplated that an order should be made, & the telegrams must be produced on the following day (LUSH, J.).

(4) Is the gift of money as a reward for coming to vote & voting a corrupt gift within Corrupt Practices Act, 1854, s. 2? I am of opinion that it is. I think that there is a material distinction between treating after an election & giving a money reward after an election. Treating is prima facie an innocent act, & to make it a corrupt practice it must appear to have been done with a corrupt motive, & when given after an election is over must be shown to have been given in fulfilment of an antecedent promise or expectation held out in order to influence the vote. But the payment of money as a reward for having voted is corrupt in itself. The 5 & 6 Vict., c. 102, specially prohibited any payment or gift under any pretence whatsoever. The Act which is now in force, Corrupt Practices Act, 1854, was passed, as it expressly recites, to make the law still more stringent than it was before. To hold that a payment, which would have been bribery under the former Act, is not bribery now, would be to relax instead of to increase the severity of the former Act (LUSH, J.).—HARWICH CASE, TOMLINE v. TYLER (1880), 44 L. T. 187; 3 O'M. & H. 61.

368. ———.]—(1) An agent is a person employed by another to act for him, and on his behalf, either generally, or in some particular transaction. The authority may be actual, or it may be implied from circumstances. It is not necessary, in order to prove agency, to show that the person was actually appointed by the candidate. If a person not appointed were to assume to act in any department of service as election agent, & the candidate accepted his services as such, he would thereby ratify the agency, so that a man may become the agent of another in either of two ways—by actual appointment, or by recognition & acceptance of his services (LUSH, J.).

(2) If agent, the next question is, what is he appointed to do; or, if not appointed, what kind of service does he profess to do which is accepted by the principal. If a person were appointed or accepted as agent for canvassing generally, & he were to bribe a voter, the candidate would thereby forfeit his seat. But if he was appointed or accepted to canvass a particular class, as if a master were asked to canvass his workmen, & he were to go out of his way, & bribe a person who was not his workman, the candidate would not be responsible. In the one case the agent would be acting within the scope of his authority, though it may be in abuse of it; in the other, he would be acting beyond his authority, & would be no more to the candidate than a stranger. It follows that if a person whom the candidate had not authorised to canvass at all, or to take such part in the management of the election as included canvassing, whatever else he was employed to do, were to take upon himself to bribe a voter, the candidate would not be responsible for that wrongful act (LUSH, J.).—WESTBURY CASE (1880), 3 O'M. & H. 78.

369. Authority refused—Person allowed to act notwithstanding.—(1) It is true that resp.'s agent said: "I cannot employ you [one D.] as an agent"; & though L. (resp.'s agent) may have meant not to employ him & may have said: "Do not employ him," yet if others working side by side with L. did employ him (D.) & allowed him to go on working in matters connected with the election, the fact that L. said what he did could make no difference. I must hold D. to be an agent (PIGOTT, B.).

(2) A person is not to be made an agent of the sitting member by his merely acting, that is not enough; he must act in promotion of the election, & he must have authority, or there must be circumstances from which we can infer authority. As to D. I think the circumstances are strong & numerous, from which I am bound to draw the inference. We find that he was canvassing three times a week, though he does not appear to have had a regular canvass-book, that he was attending continually at the committee room, & was bringing up voters all day, on the polling day (PIGOTT, B.).

(3) Although the general rule is that the successful party should have his costs, this is a case in which he should not have them to the full extent (PIGOTT, B.).—STROUD CASE, HOLLOWAY v. BRAND (1874), 3 O'M. & H. 7.

(1) O. was the land agent of P., one of the candidates, & had the management of a lot of small houses rented by weekly tenants. T. was a middleman as regarded that property. In carrying out a scheme for the re-arrangement of this property, C., after the election, & within the period at which a petition could be presented, gave T. notice that the houses must be vacated. C. was forbidden by P. to take part in the election:—Held: C. was not an agent for whose acts P. was responsible, & in view of the period at which notice was given to T. the eviction of the tenants could not be regarded as part of a scheme of undue influence & oppression by C.

(2) It was alleged that C. acted as the agent of H. B. the colleague of P., that P. looked on whilst intimidation was exercised in H. B.'s favour, & that both were therefore bound by O.'s acts. The petition, however, did not allege intimidation against H. B.

Held: for the purposes of this allegation, they could not be affected by O.'s acts except by ratification in the case of P., which was not proved.

(c) Canvassers.

390. What canvassing amounts to agency.]—

(1) The meaning of Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 36, is this, that if, supposing bribery, treating, or undue influence to have been legal acts, it would have been within the scope of the employment of the person who commits either of them to do that in advancing the views of the candidate in the capacity in which the agent is employed, then his committing such acts, notwithstanding they are illegal by the statute, shall bind the member to the extent, not of making him subject to penalties, but of having the election at which such practices took place by an agent declared void. The agent must be an agent employed by a member to canvass, that is not necessarily to canvass generally, but to canvass a particular voter or voters in respect of whom the act was done. . . . Again, there might be put, proceeding still in the same direction, cases in which a person, although nominally & popularly a canvasser, would really be no agent at all, . . . a person who, though called a canvasser nominally, was in substance not a man whose influence was relied upon, but was rather a mere messenger sent round to know how the voters in the district meant to give their votes. . . . I can conceive that it would be very unjust with reference to the latter class of persons, unless he were really proved to be an agent by other evidence, to make the member liable for what he did, to hold, in fact, that he was an agent at all (WILLES, J.).

(2) In order that the case should fall within that sect. [4, of above Act], it is necessary to prove, not only the fact that meat or drink was given to a voter, but that it was done with a corrupt design to influence the election or to obtain a vote or votes (WILLES, J.).

(3) I quite agree that if that were made out [a promise of refreshments in futuro], quite apart from the question of corrupt treating, there would be a bribe within sect. 2, (1) [of above Act], by reason of G. offering valuable consideration to the voters, in order to induce the voters to vote or to refrain from voting, which, with reference to procuring food to be consumed in futuro, would be bribery; whereas the mere giving of food to be consumed on the spot is looked upon certainly in a more lenient way, & is dealt with separately, in the manner I have already described, by sect. 4 (WILLES, J.).—BODMIN CASE (1869), 20 L. 3901. What canvassing amounts to agency.]—Mere canvassing of itself does not prove agency, but it tends to prove it. A number of acts, no one of which might in itself be conclusive proof of agency, may, when taken together, amount to proof of such agency. Certain persons canvassed & went to meetings with resp. & attended meetings to promote the election, at which meetings resp. attended; others canvassed with & introduced voters to resp. calling meetings & appointed canvassers, & did other acts to further the election, & examined the results of the canvass:—Held: they were all agents of resp.—Re CORNWALL ELECTION, BEGIN v. MACDONALD (1874), H. principal, it is not necessary that there should be done upon which the question arises whether it is to bind the principal should be done by the procurement of the principal & by his authority.

(3) A man may do an act voluntarily, although he does not do it willingly, as running away to avoid a danger, or leaving the employment of an angry master to avoid being turned out forcibly. But the compulsion which causes this description of voluntary act is intimidation within Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1845 (c. 102), s. 5.

(4) The threat of dismissal from employment which is beneficial to a man, in which he has, as it were, a goodwill, & which he might fairly suppose would be continued, as it previously was unless he misconducted himself, is intimidation within the above Act.

(5) By the common law of Parliament, & sect. 36 of the above Act, a single act of bribery by an agent avoids an election. Undue influence stands upon the same footing, & the judge has no discretion as to what amount of undue influence will avoid an election. But where an election has been properly conducted, & where there is an allegation of a single act of intimidation, the ct. will require very strong evidence indeed before declaring the election void.

(6) A man who is sent out to live upon the charity of his fellow workmen, or to go to the workhouse with his family, unless he does a particular thing, is intimidated.

Held: (7) that which it would be bribery to promise the enjoyment of, it was intimidation to threaten the deprivation of.

(8) The relation between candidates [& their agents] fully compared with the relation of master and servant, and found to be closely analogous.

(9) The mere fact of a name being on the published list of a committee is no proof of agency.

(10) Or I might put even the more apposite case of a man employing another to steer or assist him in the management of his vessel in a race, when, by the act of one of the crew, wholly unauthorised by the employer, a foul takes place, & the employer's vessel wins. In such a case if it were proved to demonstration that, notwithstanding the foul, the race would have been won by the vessel on board of which the misconduct took place it would surprise one if by any rule, either of honour or of law, the prize was given to the vessel which was in fault. No innocence of the employer could have any effect upon his liability (WILLES, J.).

(11) Resp. not only desired H. to canvass for him but he also (whether expressly or impliedly, whether by words or actions, it is immaterial) conveyed that desire to him. Accordingly H. did canvass for resp., & in so doing I came to the conclusion that he acted as his agent (WILLES, J.).

(12) Canvassing may be either by asking a man to vote for the candidate for whom you are canvassing or by begging him not to go to the poll but to remain neutral & not to vote for the adversary (WILLES, J.).—WESTBURY CASE, LAYERTON v. PHIPPS, HARROP'S CASE (1869), 20 L. T. 16; 1 O'M. & H. 47.

392. —.]—I do not apprehend that agency is established by merely showing that a particular person has gone about with a candidate & has canvassed. Canvassing will only afford premises from which a judge, discharging the functions of a jury, may conclude that agency is established. If a gentleman comes down to canvass a borough &, as a kind of guarantee for his respectability, is introduced to the voters by persons of station & position in the borough, such canvassing, though it would be properly called canvassing, would not be canvassing within the meaning of those words from which the ct. is to infer the agency existed. The widest distinction exists between the kind of canvassing in the presence of the candidate, and canvassing of such a character as to constitute agency (CHANNELL, B.).—SHREWSBURY CASE (1870), 2 O'M. & H. 36.

Annotation:—Conn'd. Harwich Case (1880), 3 O'M. & H. 61.

393. —.]—(1) S., I take it, was the manager of the machinery of the election. To say he is not an agent would be simply to make useless all election inquiries. If that were the case, a candidate would have nothing to do but to employ a secretary, & to call him a secretary, in order to enable him to see such voters as he thinks fit, to canvass for him, to exert his influence for him, & to employ his money. The question is whether S. was, within the meaning of those decisions, which now have become governing decisions for the election judges, an agent by whose acts resp. would be bound. It appears to me that he was, & it appears to me that this is really a clear case (GROVE, J.).

(2) The law of agency in election cases has now for a period of many years, since these cases have been tried by judges, been held to go much further than the ordinary law of principal & agent (GROVE, J.).

(3) There may be cases in which canvassing would not necessarily involve agency but general canvassing has always been held to be strong evidence of agency & evidence which requires a very strong case to rebut it, if it can be rebutted. Where the canvassing is general & where the indiscriminate use of the candidates name is committed to the person canvassing, that person is generally held to be an agent (GROVE, J.).

(4) You must not measure the treat by the actual thing which is given. Water or bread in itself may appear a little matter, but you must take into consideration the time at which & the circumstances in which it is given. Now, on this day hunger was abroad in the streets. Charity at election times ought to be kept by politicians in the background. The persons who ought to have relieved the distress were not the politicians; they ought to have stood aloof; they had another duty to discharge on that day & they could not properly discharge both duties at the same time. In truth, I think it will generally be found that the feeling which distributes relief to the poor at election time, though those who are the distributors may not be aware of it, is really not charity, but party feeling following in the steps of charity, wearing the dress of charity, & mimicking her gait (BOWEN, J.).

(5) No doubt it may seem hard to persons who are not conversant with the law that a man should lose a valuable position & the dignity it gives on account of the conduct of somebody who has perhaps disobeyed orders, but it has been pointed out over & over again that hard as it may appear . . . this law is the purest justice & common sense (BOWEN, J.).

(6) Resp. is, to my mind, unseated for the very clearest contravention of electoral law that can be presented to election judges; because the act of paying several of the witnesses was brought home to S. & is admitted; the only question which remained being whether S. was an agent whose conduct would affect the seat. I am of opinion that it would be to contravene almost every decision on the subject of agency which has been given since the judges have tried these petitions, & to fly in the face of all authority, if we were not to hold that S. was such an agent (BOWEN J.).

There are reasons in this case for not applying the principles of Poole Case, No. 712, post, too strictly. It is sufficient to say that the object is to reassert the doctrine that the character & status of petitioners is a matter to be carefully watched by the election judges in order that they may see that petitions are not made the means of inflicting upon the sitting member a litigation for the costs of which, if he succeeds, he will have no remedy whatever beyond a recourse to the limited security imposed by the statute as a condition on the presentation of election petitions (BOWEN, J.).—WIGAN CASE, SPENCER & PRESTT v. POWELL (1881), 4 O'M. & H. 1.

Annotation:—As to (4) Consd. Kingston-upon-Hull Central Division Case (1911), 6 O'M. & H. 372.

394. Authority to canvass.]—(1) Bribery by a messenger unauthorised to canvass does not affect the election, for mere employment does not constitute agency.

(2) A person to whom is entrusted the general management of an election has, impliedly, authority to canvass. Authority to canvass constitutes agency; therefore such a person may, by bribery, defeat the election.

(3) A bribe by anybody unauthorised will defeat the vote thereby procured; a bribe by an agent will defeat the election.

(4) Attending a dinner of a non-political society at which electors are present, & supplying wine for the table is, on the part of a candidate, an objectionable proceeding, but is not prima facie within the Act relating to treating.

(5) The judges are not bound by the decisions of parliamentary committees except in respect of precedents not provided for by the Rules (Regulæ Generales, 1868).

(6) The ct. will be reluctant to connect an inquiry with what occurred at a previous election, & especially so where resp. was not a candidate at that election.

(7) I consider my duties to be judicial & not inquisitorial except in so far as it would be proper that I should follow up any clue which the evidence laid before me may furnish. I do not think that it was the intention of [Election Act, 1868] to convert a judge into a magistrate to institute a preliminary inquiry (WILLES, J.).—WINDSOR CASE, RICHARDSON-GARDNER v. The production of the canvass books proves nothing, except that certain ticks appear on it. The mere fact of a man having a canvass book & canvassing cannot affect the principal unless I know by whom the man was employed (MELLOR, J.).

(2) I should not as at present advised hold that the acts of a man who was known to be a volunteer canvasser, without any authority from the candidate or any of his agents, bound the principal. . . . a political assocn. existing for the purpose of a political party, advocating the cause of a particular candidate, & largely contributing to his success, yet in no privity with the candidate or his agents, an independent agency, & acting in its own behalf. To say that the candidate should be responsible for the corrupt acts of any member of that assocn., however active, would be unjust, against common sense, & opposed to law. There may, on the other hand, be a political assocn. in a borough advocating the views of a candidate, of which that candidate is not a member, to the funds of which he does not subscribe, & with which he personally is not ostensibly connected, but at the same time in intimate relationship with his agents, utilised by them for the purpose of carrying out his election, interchanging communication & information with his agents respecting the canvassing of voters & the conduct of the election, & largely contributing to the result. To say that the candidate is not responsible for any corrupt acts done by an active member of such an assocn. would be repealing the Act, & sanctioning a most effective system of corruption (LOPES, J.).—BEWDLEY CASE, SPENCER v. These may be looked to, however, to explain other acts which are ambiguous, & if upon a future election petition arising out of another election at the same place, acts similar to those of which the judge had expressed his disapproval were proved to have been repeated, the judge who tried the second petition might well take them into consideration to aid his conclusion that the act upon which the validity of the election depended was a corrupt and dishonest act.

There was no affirmative evidence to show that the money which resp. knew had been raised for the purposes of the election was so large that as a reasonable man he must have known that some portion of it would be used for corrupt purposes:—Held: looking at the whole case, & at this branch of it, as a penal proceeding, resp. should not be held personally responsible for the corrupt practices of his agents.—Re KINGSTON ELECTION, STEWART v. MACDONALD (1874), H. 470. — Sub-agent committing bribery.]—(1) Payment of substitute to do voter's work while he votes is a corrupt practice.

(2) It is clear law that if an agent of the candidate employs a sub-agent to negotiate with a voter for going to the poll, & the sub-agent commits an act of bribery in carrying out his commission, the candidate is as responsible as if the act had been done by the agent himself (LUSH, J.).

(3) It is obvious that what are called charitable gifts may be nothing more than a specious & subtle form of bribery, a pretext adopted to veil the corrupt purpose of gaining or securing the votes of the recipients, & if this is found to be the object of the donor, it matters not under what pretext, in what form, to what person, or through whose hands the gift may be bestowed, or whether it has proved successful in gaining the desired object or not. On the other hand a gift may really be what it professes to be, the offspring of a purely benevolent impulse, & if this be its character, it matters not whether the recipient makes a good or bad use of it, or what its effects may be upon him. A motive originally pure cannot become corrupt by reason of a misuse of what was intended to be a benefit (LUSH, J.).

(4) In considering the question of costs we necessarily have regard to how much of the petition has been proved, & how many of the charges it alleged have failed. We cannot close our eyes to the fact that the primary object of petitioners was to have it declared that the gifts of resp. were corrupt gifts, & to unseat him on that ground. In that they have entirely failed. The act which entitles them to our judgment was evidently in their view a subordinate point, & probably a mere speculation. If we were to apportion the costs according to the result, the costs payable by the one party would probably be about equalled by the costs payable by the other. The taxation & the apportionment would cause great expense to both parties, & we therefore think it better to say that each party shall bear his own costs (per CUR.).—*PLYMOUTH CASE, LATIMER & BARRATT v. Between Dec. 1873, & the dissolution of Parliament, P. had, through his agents, distributed coal amongst the voters, under circumstances such as to make him guilty, though not personally, of corrupt practices, & for this P. was afterwards unseated. I. was out of England when the coal was so distributed, & up to the time

c. Essentials to valid nomination—Residence & description of candidate.]—Technical objections to the form of nomination papers filed with the returning officer at an election of a member of the House of Commons under Dominion Election Act, R. S. C., 1906, should not be permitted to defeat the manifest purpose of the statute. The omission in nomination papers to mention the residence, addition or description of the candidate proposed in such manner as sufficiently to identify him constitutes a patent & substantial failure to comply with the essential requirements of sect. 94 of the Act; on the objection in this respect taken by the only opposing candidate it is the duty of the returning officer to reject a nomination so irregularly made & to declare such opposing candidate elected by acclamation.—TWO MOUNTAINS CASE, FAUTEUX v. ETHIER (1912), 47 S. C. R. 185.—CAN.

d. —.—& occupations of nominating voters.]—Alta. Election Act, 1909 (c. 3), s. 137, does not require the residences & occupations of the nominating voters to be set out in a nomination paper. The fact that the form referred to in sect. indicates that said

(1) The secretaryship of the Most Illustrious Order of St. Patrick is a new office or place of profit under the Crown, created since 1700, within the meaning of 6 Anne c. 41, & disqualifies the holder for being elected a member of Parliament.

480. Refusal of nomination by returning officer—Security for expenses of election not given by candidate—Return of other candidate void.]—

(1) The expenses of carrying into effect the provisions of Ballot Act, 1872 (c. 33), are to be borne in the first instance by the returning officer, & to be apportioned between & recovered by him from the several candidates. The pre-payment of or security for the estimated amount of such expenses cannot be insisted upon by the returning officer as a condition precedent to his putting the candidate in nomination. Where, therefore, the returning officer refused to nominate one of two candidates on the ground that he declined to submit to such a demand, the return of the other candidate was declared void.

(2) As to costs, K. did nothing wrong, so that we do not give costs against him. The case of the returning officer is more doubtful. I think on the whole he will be sufficiently punished by having to bear his own costs (LORD COLERIDGE, C.J.).—Re HAVERFORDWEST CASE, DAVIES v. KENSINGTON (LORD) (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 720; 43 L. See Statute of Westminster I., 1275 (c. 5); Territorial & Reserve Forces Act, 1907 (c. 9), Sect. 23, sub-sect. 2.

481. General rule.—Extent & effect of intimidation.]—(1) To constitute intimidation as defined by Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 5, individuals must be identified as the objects upon which it was practised, or to whom it was addressed by the candidate or his agent.

(2) To constitute intimidation at common law, the intimidation must be so general & extensive in its operation, that it cannot be said that the polling was a fair representation of the opinion of the constituency in which the intimidation took place.

(3) Where intimidation, not practised upon individuals, is confined to particular districts, so it can be demonstrated that it could not have affected the result of the election, the return ought not to be avoided.

(4) Where there has been so large an amount of intimidation that it is uncertain that the result would have been the same without it, or that it represents the real opinions of the constituency, the election must be held void.

One must look not only to the amount of intimidation, but to the absolute majority which has been obtained . . . at the probable effect of intimidation, which consists of two things, its extent & operation, & the majority which the sitting members have got (BRAMWELL, B.).—DURHAM (COUNTY) NORTHERN DIVISION CASE

499 i. General bribery—Avoids election.—At common law.]—An organised system of bribery or treating will

(3) Under the will of one W., twelve "pasture masters" were annually chosen in the borough, who distributed the interest of a sum of £1400 amongst poor freemen & their kindred, the direction of the will being that the money should be given in substantial amounts, & not scattered over a large number of persons. During the year in which the election took place, however, the gift was distributed in a number of small sums to a great number of persons. 33 of these persons had votes, & 26 of these votes were given for resps. at the election. It being proved that the pasture masters were elected by bribery on the part of the party to which resps. belonged:—Held: such a state of things must tell much in the consideration of the validity of the election.

(4) The conclusion I come to is, that this money was expended in bribery for the purpose of influencing the borough election as well as the municipal, & that it was to such an extent as to be general; & that by the common law an election effected by such means was vicious from the commencement (MARTIN, B.).—BEVERLEY CASE, HIND, ARMSTRONG & DUNNETT v. EDWARDS & KENNARD (1869), 20 L. T. 792; 1 O'M. & H. 143.

499. ————.]—At common law.]—If it had been proved that there existed in this town generally bribery to a large extent & that it came from unknown quarters, that no one could tell where it had come from, but that people were bribed generally & indiscriminately; or if it could be proved that there was treating in one direction on purpose to influence voters, that houses were thrown open where people could get drink without paying for it—by the common law such election would be void (MARTIN, B.).—BRADFORD CASE (No. 2), STOREY & GARNETT v. FORSTER (1869), 19 L. T. 723; 1 O'M. & H. 35.

500. ————.]—Source of bribery immaterial.]

—(1) In order to prove treating it must be shown, not only that eating & drinking went on during the election, but that it went on under the eyes of the candidate . . . it must be shown that the meat & drink were supplied at the expense or upon the credit of the candidate, either by his own authority or by the authority of one or more of his agents.

(2) Bribery at common law, equally as by Act of Parliament, would avoid an election where it took place. If there were general bribery, no matter from what fund no matter from what person, & though the sitting member might have nothing to do with it, it would defeat an election, because it would show that the election was not a proceeding pure & free as an election ought to be, but that it was vitiated & corrupted by an influence which, no matter from what quarter it came, had avoided the return & shown it to be abortive. If, however, the bribery be short of general bribery it is not enough to show that a stranger to the member or his agents bribed one or more persons.

avoid an election, although not in any way connected with the candidate or his agents, & though the votes affected thereby might be struck off on a scrutiny.—DROGHEDA (BOROUGH) CASE (1869), 1 O'M. & H. 252; 21 L. T. 402.—IR.

(3) Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 36, must be construed by the light of the common law, & must be read as meaning agents authorised in the conduct of the election to canvass, & not merely agents authorised to bribe. Were there any doubt on the subject it would be entirely removed by Election Act, 1868 (c. 125), s. 23. If it were shown that the agent of the member bribed . . . contrary to the express orders of the member his seat was forfeited (WILLES, J.).

(4) The proper definition of that undue influence, which is dealt with in Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 5, is using any violence or threatening any damage or resorting to any fraudulent contrivance to restrain the liberty of a voter so as either to compel or frighten him into voting or abstaining from voting otherwise than he freely wills (WILLES, J.).

(5) Wherever it [treating] is resorted to for the purpose of pampering people's appetites & thereby inducing them to vote or abstain from voting otherwise than they would have done if their palates had not been tickled by eating or drinking supplied by a candidate, the seat so gained is forfeited (WILLES, J.).—LICHFIELD CASE, ANSON v. p. Payment to voter to be away on election day.]—An election petition charged that H., an agent of the candidate whose election was attacked, corruptly offered & paid $5 to induce a voter to refrain from voting. The evidence showed that H. was in the habit of assisting this particular voter, & that being told by the voter that he contemplated going away from home on a visit a few days before the election, & being away on election day, H. promised him $5, towards paying his expenses. The bill would have amounted to about $3. Resp. stated that the tavern-keeper was an old friend of his, & was just starting in business, & that he thought it right to pay him as it were a compliment on his first visit to his tavern, & that he believed he would have done the same thing if it was not election time :—Held : being an isolated case in an election contest, free from profuse expenditure, & this being a quasi-criminal trial, involving grievous results to resp. if found a corrupt practice, such payment was not an act of bribery.—*Re GLENGARRY ELECTION, McLENNAN v. Therefore, where A., who was a warm supporter of a candidate, & acted in the town as agent to a brewer, went to B., an elector & publican, & asked him for his vote, & the latter said he could not give it, as being under an obligation to his landlord's agent for arrears of rent, & A. offered to advance the money to pay it off; but

(2) The costs of the petition ordinarily follow the result, but this is an exceptional case. Petitioner has failed in his attempt to bring home personal bribery to resp.; petitioner's agents, or some persons on his behalf, have been guilty of the same illegal acts as are charged in the petition, & to this day they have withheld from the returning officer his election expenses. 543. General rule.]—(1) Agent extolling candidate to voter—& suggesting probability of his giving employment to voter is not necessarily corrupt.

A man is not bound to give notice to quit to all his tenants of his way of thinking if he is going to stand for the county, or to refuse to take into his service a man of his way of thinking if he is going to set up for the borough. He must not do that as a reward for the vote which he hopes to obtain, & he must not make the vote a condition of giving employment. But the employment of persons to do work must go on in election times as well as in others; the affairs of life cannot be brought to a standstill. If you have a sum of money, or a benefit, for which nothing is returned, conferred upon a voter, you have a tangible case which cannot be explained away merely by saying, "I did it, & I had no particular reason for it." You have then a case in which a member or his agent must be called upon to give an account of what they meant, & to show satisfactorily that that which primâ facie was giving a benefit to a person which might have the effect of inducing him to vote for the member was really done with some other & innocent motive. I am clear that where an unfavourable inference is to be drawn from the fact that some person has been employed one ought to take care to be quite sure that there is something more than merely getting the man's work for that which is the real equivalent for the man's work (WILLES, J.).

(2) A Mr. Preston was sent down at considerable expense to make inquiries prior to the registration; he was also employed at the registration. These are expenses which could not, as I read the Act [Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1863 (c. 29)], properly come into a properly framed account, though I should not like to advise anyone to leave them out, who was anxious to avoid the penalties of not accounting (WILLES, J.).—PENRYN CASE (1869), 1 O'M. & H. 127.

Annotation:—Generally, Mentâ. Salisbury Case (1883), 4 O'M. & H. 21.

544. —J.—(1) It is only in so far as the employment of a number of persons during the election by a candidate, in breach of the law, indicates a corrupt intention, that this sect. [Representation Act, 1867, s. 11] can be prayed against the candidate upon any particular occasion (POLLOCK, B.).

I concur in the conclusion at which my learned brother has arrived, but there is one ground which has been strongly relied upon by petitioners as to which I desire to make some observations. That ground is the employment by some of resp.'s agents of a number of paid voters for the purposes of the election. By the existing law such employment is not illegal, & does not, per se, invalidate the election, notwithstanding that every elector, so employed, is guilty of a misdemeanour if he votes. Nevertheless, if the employment be corrupt, that is to say, if the candidate, or his agent, gives employment to an elector in order to induce him to vote, or refrain from voting, that is bribery which avoids the election. . . . If electors are selected to do election work in order to induce them to vote or refrain from voting, that is, in my opinion, & I think it right to say it emphatically, primâ facie bribery; notwithstanding there being a certain amount of work to be done bonâ fide, & only a sufficient number of persons employed to do it, & notwithstanding that the work is actually done. . . . I would observe that the practice of employing electors to act as messengers, bill-posters, watchers, & such like, at Parliamentary elections is so pernicious, & has been denounced by judges so repeatedly, that one wonders that the law remains as it is, . . . seeing that the law has been made more stringent with regard to Municipal elections (MANISTY, J.).

(2) As a rule costs ought to follow the event, & in ordinary actions they almost invariably follow it, the exceptions being rare. I did intend to deal with these cases as if they were ordinary suits between party & party; I have, however, become deeply impressed with the feeling that there is a third party no less interested than those who are immediately engaged in the petition, & that I ought in each case to consider, not merely whether the petition has failed, or has succeeded, but whether upon the whole I think there are grounds, not founded merely upon the truthfulness of witnesses, but founded upon the very character & history of the transaction upon which it was for the public benefit that the petition should be presented, & upon which I think petitioners have had reasonable & probable cause for instituting the inquiry (POLLOCK, B.).

I think resp. ought to bear & pay his own costs. I agree that as a rule the costs follow the event, but in this case I think there are exceptional circumstances which fully justify us in the conclusion at which we have arrived. I think the conduct of resp.'s agents in employing so many paid voters, & the illegal act of resp.'s election expenses agent in not complying with the Act of Parliament [Representation Act, 1867] by sending to the returning officer a detailed statement of all the election expenses, with the bills & vouchers relating to them, including as it ought a list of all the persons employed in any paid capacity on behalf of the candidate, fully justified petitioners in instituting & in prosecuting this inquiry. If authority be needed to support this view, there is abundant authority (MANISTY, J.).—SALISBURY CASE, MOORE v. KENNARD (1883), 4 O'M. & H. 21.

N. was elected, & afterwards, paid all these persons for their services. 549. ———.]—(1) Evidence of corrupt payments made after the election by an agent is admissible.

(2) The previous statement of a witness may be used to refresh his memory.

(3) The wholesale employment of voters to render valueless services avoids the election.

(4) It is illegal for any paid agent, whether canvasser, messenger, watchman, clerk, or otherwise, to vote at the election. His vote would be struck off upon a scrutiny, & he would render himself liable to an indictment for a misdemeanour. Can we suppose that those who employed these men [watchers] meant to neutralise their votes? Is it not far more probable that they meant to secure them? If the law was to be obeyed, the voters so employed would be lost to the party. If they were not to be lost, & neither candidate could afford to lose so large a number, a breach of the law must have been contemplated. What inference can be drawn from the wholesale employment of voters under these circumstances? . . . Was it to influence their votes, or was it to procure a needed service without regard to whether they voted for the party who employed them or not? From the evidence of the watchers, who appeared as witnesses before us, we cannot come to any other conclusion than that the employment of this large body of voters was a colourable employment, & a pretext for finding them a day's wages in order to induce them to vote. It is immaterial whether the object was to gain over voters from the other side, or to prevent them from going over to that side. The Act [Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102)] forbids, & makes penal, any attempt to influence a vote by such means (LUSH, J.).—BOSTON CASE, TUNNARD v. INGRAM (1880), 44 L. The fact that it is in one ward would not be conclusive, but the fact that it is largely in one ward, so greatly as to affect probably the whole of the election, would be important (DENMAN, J.).

Whether this is so or not must be a matter of inference to be drawn from the facts of each particular case, & must depend upon many circumstances, involving those of time, place, the persons by whom the charity is distributed, & by whom it is received; whether it has been given in pursuance of an accustomed course, or whether it is novel & unprecedented; whether it is moderate or immoderate in amount, & especially whether the persons to whom it is given are proper recipients (POLLOCK, B.).

(2) In determining the question how far a candidate, by attending the meetings of a political association makes it or any of its officers his agents, it is necessary first to inquire what is the object & character of the association. If its object be simply to secure the election to Parliament of a particular individual, it would be difficult, if not impossible, for a candidate to take part in its operations without becoming responsible for its acts during an election. . . . Where, however, the object of an association is merely to advocate the views & interests of a particular portion of the community, . . . the position is different, & a candidate who is invited by a branch association within his division to attend their meeting, to hear their views & to explain his own, does not by so attending necessarily associate himself with their organisation as so to make any of their officers his agents (POLLOCK, B.).

(3) Any act of treating tending to interfere with the free exercise of the franchise was always considered as a corrupt & illegal act at common law. But it has never been considered as necessarily a corrupt thing for persons interested in a particular subject to invite other persons to a discussion relating to the subject, even though some entertainment may be provided . . .

The question of corrupt treating must be in each case a question of fact. If the refreshments provided were excessive, if the occasions were numerous, & if there were other circumstances calculated to excite suspicion, a corrupt intention might be inferred (POLLOCK, B.).

(4) Treating, to be corrupt, must have reference to some election, & it must be for the purpose of influencing votes. . . . The intention with which the act of treating is done must be a question of fact in each case. . . . A corrupt act is not the less corrupt because done a long time before an election is in prospect, but in determining the question whether it is or is not reasonable to conclude that an act is done with a view to influence votes, the element of time becomes a very material one (POLLOCK, B.).—TOWER HAMLETS, ST. *587. ———.]—(1) I for one have always felt that the modern form—which has in some sense necessarily taken the place of the older form of corruption & bribery—of coming to reside in a place, taking a course that is altogether abnormal from the usual course of social & citizen life, & "nursing" a place, as it is called, & from time to time taking every step to shake the minds of the voters, & to make them less firm in their own honest convictions by reason of that course of conduct, is worse, if possible, because it is more insidious & more mischievous in its consequences than the old simple form of giving a man the known & customary sum for his vote. But I think it is absolutely clear, looking at the dates & the mode in which this money was given by resp., coupled with the fact that his name was not set forth, that this gift could not for a moment be considered to be bribery on the part of resp. Then it was suggested that though at that time it might not be bribery, it might be made to be bribery by the subsequent conduct of resp.'s agents when they issued the placard reminding the electors of what he had done. In point of law I think that such a contention is wholly untenable. You cannot by any ex post facto act make that, which was legal at the time, illegal & criminal at a later date (POLLOCK, B.).*

(2) I think that no Act of Parliament like this, where there is a doubt in the matter, ought to be construed so as to fetter & to interfere with the undoubted right of a man, apart from an election, to uphold, & to encourage the upholding by others of those political sentiments in which he honestly believes. . . . I think, therefore, in that respect that I ought to come to the conclusion that that subsidy [by F., the candidate] was arranged, not merely for the purpose of the election, but that it was for the purpose of promoting a particular view (POLLOCK, B.).

(3) When there has been a systematic arrangement, by which vehicles shall be got within range of the poll, & where the distance is such that they must come there overnight, & possibly leave next day, that baiting should be provided for them; I think it is impossible to say that such a payment for baiting is not a payment made on account of the conveyance of electors to or from the poll (POLLOCK, B.).

(4) I think as soon as a candidate begins to hold meetings in the constituency to advance his candidature—in other words, as soon as he begins to take measures to promote his election—the election commences. I cannot doubt that the meeting of Mar. 14 was an election meeting. [Parliament dissolved in July following.] I therefore hold that the expenses of that meeting & the expenses incurred after that date to promote F.'s candidature were election expenses, & that there was a neglect to comply with the statute in not returning those expenses (BRUCE, J.).—STAFFORD (COUNTY), LICHFIELD DIVISION CASE, WOLSELEY, LEVETT, ALKIN & SHAW v. Counsel . . . for the defence in this case said, "You must in all such cases as this prove moral corruption as the governing motive." I do not accept that as a correct or complete definition. Certainly, if there was moral corruption it would be a corrupt motive. But there are definitions which show that there are other cases which do amount to corrupt practices which are not in themselves morally corrupt; & that it is to be held to be a corrupt practice if a man does a thing which must produce an effect upon an election which is contrary to the intention of the Act of Parliament [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883]—an improper thing, influencing the electors in a manner contrary to the intention of the Act of Parliament (RIDLEY, J.).

(2) You assume for the moment that a man forms a design which at the time is unobjectionable because no election is in prospect. Yet if circumstances alter, & an election becomes imminent, he will go on with that design at his risk, & if he does so he will be liable to be found guilty of corrupt practices; that is to say that he has done a thing which must produce an effect on the election contrary to the intention of the Act of Parliament (RIDLEY, J.).—KINGSTON-UPON-HULL CENTRAL DIVISION CASE (1911), 6 O.M. & H. 372.

591. ——— Without check—Intention to influence votes.]—(1) A member was in the habit of sending down to his agent annually a sum of £250 to be distributed in Christmas gifts. He gave no directions as to how it should be expended, & made no inquiries:—Held: the giving of Christmas gifts was not a matter to avoid the election, unless it was shown that the gifts dispensed by a responsible agent had influenced votes.

When I find that charities are distributed in a borough by . . . candidates, & are distributed without check by the election agent of the borough, I am not charitable enough to draw any other conclusion than that they do it with the intention of giving the voters money, in the hope & expectation that it will influence the future election (BLACKBURN, J.).

(2) A member is responsible for the act of an agent done contrary to instructions, but if the agent treacherously or traitorously agrees with the other side, then if he does a corrupt act it would not vacate the seat unless it is proved that the corrupt act was at the especial request of the member himself or that some untainted & authorised agent of the member directed the act to be done.

But the seat would be affected if a man being an agent is tricked by the other party into committing a corrupt act, he himself honestly still intending to act as agent.

(3) An agent of the sitting member organised a vigilance committee for the purpose of detecting bribery on the other side, & in a public speech exhorted his audience not to allow their voters to vote. This advice was followed on the following day:—Held: intimidation for which the member was responsible.

(4) Where any candidate is by his agent, or by himself, guilty of any corrupt practice the seat must be vacated & the member is incapable of sitting again during that Parliament; but it is required that it should be shown to be brought home to the agent. Any corrupt practice, whether bribery, intimidation or treating brought home to the agent, will vacate the election (BLACKBURN, J.).

(5) It [riot] is a crime in itself, & is committed for the purpose of producing an undue effect upon the election. This is a thing that is very likely to happen without the members or agents being guilty of it. Where this happens to such an extent as not to let the election be free, though not traced to the agent, it will make the election void (BLACKBURN, J.).

(6) In considering whether an election was free or not it would be necessary to see what is the positive majority (BLACKBURN, J.).—STAFFORD (BOROUGH) CASE, CHAWNER v. MELLER (1869), 21 L. T. 210; 1 O.M. & H. 228.

Consequently, applt. must enter into the recognisances required by Summary Jurisdiction Acts, & such recognisances may be entered into before any justice. At the rehearing the onus is on resps. in the first instance to prove a prima facie case; this may be done by reading the report with any evidence thereto subjoined which relates to applt., such report corresponding to the conviction before a ct. of summary jurisdiction; & where the election comrs. do not appear as resps., but the Director of Public Prosecutions does appear, he has a locus standi which entitles him to bring the report & subjoined evidence before the ct., so as to shift the onus on to applt. Applt. had made payments after the close of the poll to voters as a reward for their having voted:—Held: (1) in the absence of any evidence to connect such payments with some agreement or understanding made with those voters before the poll, applt. could not be convicted of the corrupt practice of bribery; (2) the functions of the election petition judges & the election comrs. being different a finding by the former tribunal as to the non-committal of illegal practices did not estop the election comrs. from finding applt. guilty of illegal practices, for though the comrs. were appointed under Elections Commissioners Act, 1852 (c. 57), to inquire into "corrupt" practices, illegal practices were included in that expression.—*CALDICOTT v. 658. General rule.]—It cannot be taken as a hard & fast rule that wherever a case of corruption can be proved within the letter of the Act, the seat should be declared vacant. Each case must be regarded with reference to the facts taken together & determined by the solution of the question whether the relation between the member & the agent was such as to make the member responsible for the acts done. evidence as to bribery consists of offers or proposals to bribe, the evidence should be stronger than with respect to actual bribery. h. — Multiplicity of charges—Weight of evidence.]—When there are a multiplicity of charges each charge should be treated as a separate charge, & if proved by one witness only, & rebutted by another, the united weight of the testimony, without accompanying or collateral circumstances to aid the ct. in its appreciation of the contradictory statements, cannot overcome the effect of the evidence in rebuttal, & in such case, the candidate is entitled to the presumption of innocence to turn the scale in his favour.—Re JACQUES CARTIER ELECTION, SOMERVILLE v. LAFLAMME (1878), 2 S. C. R. 216.—CAN.

i. — Conflicting testimony.]—A number of separate charges of corrupt practices against an agent of resp., based upon offers or promises, & not upon any act of such agent, each of which depended upon the oath of a witness to the offer or promise, but each one of which such agent, directly contradicted, or gave a different colour to the language, or a different turn to the expressions used, which quite altered the meaning of the conversations detailed, or constituted in effect a complete or substantial denial of the charges attempted to be proved against such agent:—Held: although in acting on such conflicting testimony where there was a separate opposing witness in each case to the testimony of the witness supporting the charge, the election judge might be obliged to hold each charge as answered & repelled by the counter-evidence, he could not give the like effect to the testimony of the same witness in each of the cases where the only opposing witness is confronted by the adverse testimony of a number of witnesses, who, though they do not corroborate one another by speaking to the same matter, are contradicted in each case by the one witness; the more frequently a witness is contradicted by others, although each opposing witness contradicts him on a single point, the more is confidence in such witness affected, until, by a number of contradicting witnesses, he may be disbelieved altogether; acting on the above & on a consideration whether the story told by the witness in support of the charge is reasonable or probable in itself, the charges of corrupt practices against the agent of resp. set out in the judgment, were proved.—Re NORTH RENFREW ELECTION, *WHITE v. F. kept his tavern open on polling day, & various persons treated there during polling hours. Counsel for resp., after the evidence of the above facts had been given, admitted that F. was an agent of resp. & that his acts were sufficient to avoid the election:—Held: although the ct. did not adjudicate that resp. by giving the $5 & requesting F. to appoint a scrutineer, had constituted him an agent for all purposes, it was the practice of the ct. to take the admission of counsel in place of proof of agency & therefore the admission of counsel as to F.'s agency was sufficient.—Re RUSSELL ELECTION, *OGILVIE v. The vote polled was about 4,500, out of which there was a majority of 51 for resp.:—Held: the election was void because of the corrupt acts of R.; & in view of the conduct & details of the contest, the saving provisions of the above Act could not be applied.—EAST NORTHUMBERLAND (PROV.), 1 E. ### B. Treating.

(a) In General.

See Corrupt Practices Act, 1883, ss. 1, 3, 22.

671. Definition of treating.]—(1) A single case of bribery by an agent renders an election void.

(2) A circular letter addressed by a candidate to his constituents must not be interpreted with the same strictness as a commercial document.

(3) Where a meeting is held or other expenses are incurred with the object of inducing a person to become a candidate at an election, the question whether the costs of the meeting & other expenses are election expenses is one which must be answered in relation to the particular circumstances of the case.

(4) Treating is not the entertainment of equals by equals, but of an inferior by a superior with the object of securing the goodwill of the inferior.

(5) An overloaded petition will be visited with costs, even if it is successful.

(6) Expenses before candidature need not be returned.

Until the resp. had consented to become a candidate, the payment [of expenses incurred in order to induce a particular person to become a candidate] was not a payment on his behalf (DENMAN, J.).

(7) Effect of circular sent out by candidate [to voters asking for their votes & to "enter heartily into the contest"].

I fail to see that this is alone, without more, sufficient to enable us to say that if any person, acting upon that, set to work immediately after he had given his own vote, to go about & do a quantity of illegal things, he at once would become an agent to the candidate in respect to that. I think you would require . . . evidence such as has always been required upon the question of agency (DENMAN, J.).

(8) Payment for placards by volunteer illegal.

If this expense is within the sect. [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883, s. 25] is it within the proviso?

Sealed candidate.]—36 Vict. c. 2 (O.) s. 3 (2) applies equally to the elected & defeated candidates at an election; & if found assenting parties to any practice declared by the statute to be corrupt, each of them is liable to the disqualifications, mentioned in the statute.—Re NORTH WENTWORTH ELECTION, CHRISTIE v. STOCK (1875), H. E. C. 343.—CAN.

p. Without knowledge of candidate or agents.—Vote avoided.]—Bribery, where committed without the knowledge of the candidate or his agents, affects the man bribed alone; it does not affect the candidate; it has more the effect of extinguishing the vote; & if there was a scrutiny for the purpose of ascertaining who had the majority of votes, that man's vote ought to be struck off.—DOULL v. CARMICHAEL, Russ. E. R. 14.—CAN.

PART VI. SECT. 9, SUB-SECT. 1.—B. (a).

a. What amounts to treating.—Re-freshment given.—On nomination day.—By agent.]—F., an agent of resp., on nomination day treated a large number of persons at a tavern:—Held: a corrupt practice which avoided the election.—Re DUNDAS ELECTION, COOK v. BRODER (1875), H. E. C. 205.—CAN.

to the polling place, saying that he would do so without charge. Some days after the election P., the agent, gave M. £2, intending it as compensation for the conveyance of such voter to the poll, but M. thought it was in payment for work which he had done for P. as a carter. The candidate knew nothing of the matter:—Held: there was properly no payment by P. to M. for any purpose, the money being given for one purpose & received for another; but that if there had been, it was made after P.'s agency had ceased, & there was no previous hiring or promise to pay, to which it could relate back. If such payment had been established, as a corrupt practice, it would have avoided P.'s vote, but not M.'s; & it would not have defeated the election, for it was not found to have been committed with the knowledge or consent of the candidate, but the contrary.—BROCKVILLE CASE, FLINT v. FITZSIMMONS (1871), H. E. C. 139.—CAN.

1. ———.]—Whether disqualification for re-election.]—The election of deft. as a member of the local legislature was set aside under Bribery Act, 1883, for bribery & treating by his agents—the judge certifying that the bribery was not committed by or with the knowledge or consent of deft.

At an election held to fill the vacancy, deft. was again elected:—Held: he was not disqualified for re-election.—KAY v. HANINGTON (1872), 1 Fug. 26.—CAN.

m. ———.]—Election not avoided.—Less votes than majority affected.]—Where corrupt practices by agents, others in the interest of resp., affected less votes than the majority obtained by resp. at the election:—Held: such corrupt practices did not extend beyond the votes affected thereby, & did not avoid the election.—Re LINCOLN ELECTION, PAWLING v. RYKERT (1879), H. E. C. 489.—CAN.

667 i. By the candidate.—Election avoided.]—A single bribed vote brought home to a candidate would throw doubt on his whole majority & would therefore annul his return.—Re NORTH VICTORIA ELECTION, CAMERON v. MACLENNAN (1874), H. E. C. 584.—CAN.

n. On votes of persons guilty.]—On a petitioner claiming the seat on a scrutiny, the ct. declined on a preliminary objection to strike out a clause in the petition, which claimed that the votes of persons guilty of bribery, treating & undue influence should be struck off the poll.—Re NORTH VICTORIA ELECTION, CAMERON v. MACLENNAN (1874), H. E. C. 584.—CAN.

Sect. 9.—Corrupt and illegal practices: Sub-sect. 1, B. (a).]

The proviso is meant to apply to such small payments as the hire, for instance of a cab by a canvasser (where no use is made of it for the purpose of taking any voter to the poll), or for telegrams or postage, where the payee is not, & does not intend to be repaid.

(9) Description of clerks, etc., in election agent's return necessary.

I think it is clear that a description must be given which would involve that by which they would be known, identified & distinguished from other persons. Obviously, therefore, their address & their business should be given (CAVE, J.).

(10) [Report to Speaker.]

So far as the requirements of the law are concerned, I apprehend that it would be unnecessary for a judge to give any reasoned judgment at all . . . but, . . . it has always been the practice [of election judges] to give their judgment with certain reasons for the conclusions which they have arrived at, stating what those conclusions are, & stating the general effect of that which they feel it their duty to report (DENMAN, J.).—NORWICH CASE, BIRKBECK v. BULLARD (1886), 54 L. T. 625; 4 O'M. & H. 84.

Ipswich Case* (1886), 4 O'M. & H. 70.

672. Treating in open air—Specification of locality—Necessity for.]—Where treating takes place in the open air the exact locality must be specified otherwise the evidence will not be admitted.—NEW WINDSOR CASE, HUNT'S CASE (1866), 15 L. T. 108.

673. What amounts to treating.]—(1) It is the policy of the law that a man should exercise the franchise freely; & therefore, if undue pressure, whether it be bribery, treating, or oppression, be brought to influence his vote the vote becomes bad. If this influence be widespread & general it vitiates the election by virtue of the common law, irrespective of particular Acts of Parliament. The opening of public-houses in the sense to avoid an election must be a systematic opening for the purpose of giving refreshment to voters, the supply being limited by the discretion of the landlord as to what is a reasonable supply. Where, therefore, rooms in public-houses were hired for certain days for committee purposes, & at other times used for other purposes of the ordinary character, & in no way connected with the election:—Held: this was not an opening of the public-houses for the purpose of treating.

(2) To make the doing of an act corrupt, it must be done with an evil mind, with the knowledge that it is wrong, & with evil feelings and evil intentions. A., a strong partisan, spoke to B. about his vote, who said he intended to give it to C. A. said he could persuade him that D. was the best man, asked him to come & talk it over at a public-house, & gave him some beer:—Held: neither bribery nor treating, as not being a corrupt act, but a natural, ordinary, & common thing which the ordinary course of life leads to be done.

(3) Large numbers of voters came to S., an agent of resp., at a public-house, & said that the other side was treating largely. S. thereupon told the landlady to give them some beer to keep them quiet:—Held: this was not treating, inasmuch as it was not a voluntary corrupt act, but an act done under pressure.

(4) Sixty persons were furnished with refreshments in the committee rooms of one ward where 1,400 votes were polled on each side. It was sworn that these persons were engaged in the actual business of the election, & that no one received refreshments who was not so engaged:—Held: the giving of this refreshment was not a corrupt but an innocent act, because it was not given with the evil intention of influencing votes.

(5) Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 4, defines treating, & says that any candidate guilty by himself or his agents of corruptly influencing any person by such means shall be liable to a penalty of £50, & that the person corruptly accepting the treating shall be incapable of voting. Sect. 23 declares the giving of refreshments to voters on the days of nomination & polling to be illegal, & that the person so offending shall be liable to a penalty of 40s.:—Held: an offence committed against the provisions of sect. 23 would vitiate an election, & an offence committed against sect. 4 is illegal but would not vitiate an election.

(6) If money is given to a man before an election to induce him to vote or refrain from voting, it is ipso facto bribery, & has the effect of disqualifying the candidate for being elected. But if the money is given after the man has voted, it must be shown to have been given corruptly.—BRADFORD CASE (No. 2), STOREY & GARNETT v. FORSTER (1869), 19 L. T. 723; 1 O'M. & H. 35.

677. — Refreshment given—On nomination day—At house of election agent.]—(1) The agent for election expenses is a general agent of the candidate for the purposes of the election.

(2) Bribery alleged to have been committed in Jan., the general election, which was not then expected, not taking place till Mar., is not a subject of inquiry for the committee.

(3) Refreshments supplied to voters on the day of nomination at the house of the election agent are not in themselves a corrupt treating within Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 5.

(4) To prove that treating is corrupt, it is necessary to prove that some person has been thereby corrupted & induced by such treating to vote for the sitting member.—TWICKESBURY CASE (1857), 1 Wolf. & D. 111; 29 L. T. O. S. 266.

685. ——— Treating after election.](1) It is clear . . . that the word "corruptly" governs the whole section, [Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 4], so that what the Act contemplates & makes so penal is, not treating simply & without regard to its character & object, but corrupt treating, that is, treating with a bad motive, treating with an object & purpose which the law denounces & desires to put down (LUSH, J.).

(2) The treating which the Act [Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102)] calls corrupt as regards a bygone election must be connected with something which preceded the election, must be the complement of something done or existing before & calculated to influence the voter while the vote was in his power. An invitation given before to an entertainment to take place afterwards, or even a promise to invite, or a practice of giving entertainments after an election, which it may be supposed the voters would calculate on, would, if followed up by the treat afterwards, give to it the character of corrupt treating (LUSH, J.).—BRECON (BOROUGH) CASE, WATKINS & WATKINS v. Until resp. & his wife arrived at the hall they were ignorant of the intention to hold such gathering, & neither resp. nor his committee were called upon to pay, or undertook to pay, or did pay, any of the cost of the entertainment. Where meat & drink are given away for the purpose of gaining popularity, & thereby to affect the election, that is evidence of corrupt motives.

(2) Seven voters went the day before the polling to the house of an agent of resp. to obtain instructions. The agent was from home, but, at their suggestion, the servant permitted them to pass the night in the kitchen, & his wife & daughter supplied them with a small quantity of beer & tobacco, & the next morning gave them a breakfast. During the evening resp. entered the kitchen & stumbled over them, as they lay asleep, but told them not to disturb themselves. They had all previously promised to vote for resp. — Held: not to be treating.

(2) Now, there is, of course, nothing to be said in the abstract against assocns. for the promotion of either Conservative or Liberal views. People have a right to associate together in order to persuade their fellow-countrymen to adopt those views of politics which they themselves are per-sueded are the best & most wholesome, & so long as in doing that they resort solely to things which are likely to produce an effect upon the reason of those to whom they are addressed, no fault whatever can be found with their action; it is only when they endeavour to go beyond that & to acquire popularity for political principles of a particular kind by endeavouring to secure the adhesion of those voters who take a less strong view of political matters by addressing themselves, not to their reason, but to less praiseworthy methods, by giving them treats or entertainments for the purpose, by those means, of inducing those who take but little interest in politics, for the sake of what they may get by those treats & picnics to join one or other of the great political parties into which the country is divided, that fault is to be found (CAVE, J.).

(2) Scattered acts, such as invitations to drink, occurring as they do in everyday life, do not amount to treating simply because an election is going on; but if numerous, they would furnish a strong inference of an intention to influence voters, & therefore would amount to treating.

(3) The ct. will not require the fact that an election has taken place to be proved, but will take notice of it as a matter of public notoriety.

(4) I shall ever hold it to be a wise & beneficial rule—I may say that certainly is my view quite apart from Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102)—a wise & beneficial rule of constitutional law, that for the purpose of securing purity & freedom of election candidates shall be answerable for the acts of their agents as well as for their own acts, & that a person can no more claim to be a Member of Parliament for a place, as the result of an election in which his agent has be corrupt, in the sense contemplated by the statute. If the treating was intended to produce an influence upon the vote, or to reward the voter after having voted, it is corrupt, otherwise not. — CARRICKFERGUS (BOROUGH) CASE (1880), 3 O.M. & H. 90. — IR.

710. ——— —.—(1) To act corruptly in connection with an election is to do something which is contrary to the intention of the Act of Parliament. Therefore the giving of meat & drink to be corrupt must be done with the intention of influencing an election generally, as by acquiring popularity, or by inducing a voter to vote or refrain from voting.

(2) H. gave a breakfast before the polling, to which the whole town was invited. Everybody was invited to come & have drink there, vehicles were provided to carry voters to the poll, & some were actually so conveyed. On the day of the election the candidates wrote & thanked H. for what he had done.—Held: this went a considerable way, though it was not conclusive, to show that H. had been adopted as an agent to a great extent.

(3) In the bribery particulars 184 cases were put down. On five only was evidence given, & they failed.—Held: although petitioners had succeeded, each party should bear their own costs.

The ct. refused to separate the costs & to give petitioners the costs of the cases of treating which had been established.

(2) Where a secretary is paid for registration work . . . & he devotes his time substantially to work of that character, I do not feel sure that merely because he gives part of his time to work which may be determined to be election work, therefore a portion of his salary must be necessarily allotted as forming part of the election expenses (BRUCE, J.).

(3) A meeting that is called for general political purposes does not, I think, become an election meeting merely because a candidate attends it, nor even because some allusions are made to his candidature. . . . In each case it must be a question of fact whether the main object of the meeting is to promote the election of the candidate. The lectures . . . were lectures to advance political principles; & I think it would be most mischievous to hold that the expenses of such lectures should be regarded as election expenses (BRUCE, J.).

The line must be drawn between meetings called with the direct object of advancing the election of the candidate, & meetings called for another object from attendance upon which the candidate only derives some indirect or remote advantage (BRUCE, J.).—*SHOREDITCH, HAGGERSTON DIVISION CASE, CREMER v. (2) At a previous election in 1868 upwards of £200 was paid by the present resp., then a candidate, for beer supplied. Such payments were not returned in the election expenses. At the election in 1874 large quantities of beer were supplied by the publicans, but the bills sent in to resp. were dated the day after the polling & purported to charge only for beer supplied subsequently to the election. When such bills were sent in they were not objected to by resp.'s agent, nor did he make any remonstrance concerning them.—Held: the treating at the election in 1874 was sufficiently connected with that in 1868, to justify the anticipation that a considerable sum of money would be allowed for beer, & to make the treating at the latter corrupt, as tending to influence voters, or as being a reward for having voted. (3) Semble: lavish treating by publicans themselves, without any ground for expecting payment, would be sufficient to avoid the election.

— —.—Held: the treating of non-electors may be illegal & corrupt just as much as the treating of voters; a general systematic treating of non-electors, consisting, as they did, largely of the families of the electors, was corrupt, because it was carried out systematically with the intent of keeping up popular excitement, influencing public & individual opinion, promoting the popularity of the candidate, & generally to procure his election.—

749. Agent threatening violence.]—(1) There being a coalition between candidates, the agent of one becomes the agent of the other; & if a corrupt act is brought home to the one, both are unable to hold their seats. But personal corruption must be proved against each individually: the proof personally against the one does not prove it personally against the other.

(2) Doing or threatening violence to an elector to induce him to vote or refrain from voting, vitiates the election, although done by an agent only. If that is done which a man has a perfect right to do, but with a view to influence a vote, it is intimidation. E.g., if a landlord threatens to turn out, or does turn out a tenant for his vote, that is inflicting harm or loss within the statute.

(3) An employer who dismisses his servant on account of his vote is also guilty of undue influence.

from the altar during divine service & by other means, threatened loss & damage, & in other manners practised intimidation upon the electors who were members of the Roman Catholic persuasion, in order to induce them to vote or to refrain from voting at the election.

It was proved that a considerable amount of influence had been exercised by the priests in favour of the two resps., & that in several instances the mass had been suspended & the congregations had been addressed & exhorted to support them:—Held: this influence had not been more than might legitimately & properly have been exercised.—GALWAY (BOROUGH) CASE (1869), 1 O'M. & H. 303.—IR.

h. — Threats.]—The priest may counsel, advise, recommend, entreat & point out the true line of moral duty, & explain why one candidate should be preferred to another, & may if he think fit, throw the whole weight of his character into the scale; but he may not appeal to the fears, or terrors or superstition of those he addresses. He must not hold out hopes of reward here or hereafter, & he must not use threats of temporal injury, or of disadvantage, or of punishment hereafter. He must not for instance, threaten to excommunicate, or to withhold the sacraments, or to expose the party to any other religious disability or denounce the voting for any particular candidate as a sin, or as an offence involving punishment here or hereafter. If he does so with a view to influence a voter, or to affect an election, the law considers him guilty of undue influence.—LONGFORD CASE (1870), 2 O'M. & H. 6.—IR.

(4) Whether the withdrawal of custom from a tradesman, or a threat to withdraw it, amounts to undue influence is a question of degree. Semble: where the loss proposed to be inflicted in this way would seriously affect the saleable value of the goodwill of a business, it would be such a loss as is contemplated by the statute.

The loss must be so serious that a judge could direct a jury in a criminal ct. that a person threatening to inflict or inflicting it was guilty of a misdemeanour.

(5) A threat to exercise undue influence must be deliberately uttered with the intention to carry it into effect, & not in a moment of anger; whilst the loss to be inflicted must not be too remote.

(6) An act of treating under Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 23, does not affect the election. If it comes within sect. 4 it will affect the election. But the candidate will be responsible if he is in any way accessory to the giving or providing of refreshment corruptly, i.e., with the view of influencing votes at the election then pending. The question whether the intention was to influence votes must depend upon the circumstances & the manner in which the refreshment was given, the time when it was done, & very much upon the nature of the entertainment.

(7) There is no law which prohibits the giving of feasts to electors after the election. The authority of a person requested to canvass, & so made an agent, ceases with the election; & unless there is something to show continuing authority, that person could not, by giving a feast ten days after the election, upset the election.

(8) The word "corruptly" [in sect. 4 Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102)] governs the whole, & it means, with the object & intention of doing that thing which the statute intended to forbid. . . . It is essential also that the candidate should be mixed up in it . . . he need not do it with his own money, or by himself personally, if he shall be in any way accessory to the giving or providing. If the agent, for whom he is responsible, does it, that, as far as voiding the election goes, has the same effect as the candidate doing it (BLACKBURN, J.).—NORFOLK, NORTHERN DIVISION CASE, *COLMAN v. That throughout the day D. seemed to be acting as leader of a portion of the crowd whose action prevented voters from going to the poll:—Held: D. was guilty of undue influence, & he exercised it as an agent of resp. EAST KERRY CASE (1910), 6 O'M. & H. 58.—IR.

(2) A candidate is not bound to refrain from doing a particular thing from a legitimate motive because he may be also actuated by a motive which, if it stood alone, would be illegitimate.

But I must take all the circumstances together. Twelve years ago C. let this house to G. as a monthly tenant at 1s. 6d. a week. It is evident (& I cannot shut this out of my mind) that it was an advantage to G. to have the house; he said he had been waiting three years for the opportunity of getting the house, & therefore he got something which he desired to have. Could I have come to the conclusion that there was any semblance of a threat in [the reference by the landlord's agent to the condition] in the presence of resp. p. Voter's travelling expenses—When a corrupt practice.]—The payment of a voter's expenses in going to the poll is illegal as such, & a corrupt practice, even though the payment may not have been intended as a bribe.—RE SOUTH GREY ELECTION, HUNTER v. LAUDER (1871), H. E. C. 52.—CAN.

(2) If a candidate will go about the high places of a town in view of everybody, & having behind him not an orderly procession in the progress of which a good deal of drinking took place, the persons joining in which stopped from time to time to have beer at public-houses, he cannot complain if it is said of him that what he has tolerated, & what he has allowed to follow him, was of a nature calculated to excite & provoke to treating to some extent & to illegal practices to some extent, & that if he makes himself a party to that he has not done all that lay in his power to prevent them (WRIGHT, J.).

(3) I regret that an election should be set aside on account of an act which I am prepared to certify was "of a trivial character." . . . We have no power to relieve against an illegal act which is "of a trivial, unimportant & limited character," unless we can affirmatively find that "all reasonable means for preventing the commission of corrupt & illegal practices were taken," & I find myself in this case unable to pronounce such an affirmative finding (BRUCE, J.).

(4) With regard to costs petitioners have failed on all points, except that of the railway fare; they were justified in petitioning in respect of that; & they must have some costs in respect of it. The taxing officer must give them such reasonable part of the general costs as he thinks fairly attributable to that issue & the costs of the evidence on it. Petitioners must pay to resp. the remainder of the general costs of the petition & the costs of all the other issues. Petitioners will get not the whole of the general costs of the petition, because the length of it & the expense of it are out of all proportion to what resp. ought really to bear; but they will get whatever the taxing master thinks would have been a reasonable amount for the petition to have cost if it had been confined to that, & of course, the evidence of the witnesses in connection with it (WRIGHT, J.).

(5) In the case of a voter receiving payment, for the purpose of promoting or procuring the election of a candidate, on account of the conveyance of electors to or from the poll, no offence is committed by him unless he knows same to be in contravention of the Act [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883]; but in the case of the person making such payment he is equally guilty of an illegal practice whether he knows or not that he is acting in contravention of the Statute (WRIGHT, J.).

788. — Not merely to public acts or conduct.]—(1) I think this room [forming part of licensed premises & used as a committee-room] is well within the proviso to Corrupt Practices Act, 1883, s. 20. It is a part of licensed premises ordinarily let for the purpose of holding public meetings, & it has no direct communication with any part of the premises on which liquor is sold (DARLING, J.).

(2) I think the matter [election address not bearing printer's name] is absolutely trivial. The address bears the stamp of the London Stereoscopic Co. Even if it amounts to a technical breach of the Statute [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883], it is a matter in which we would certainly give relief (DARLING, J.).

(3) The sect. [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883, s. 18] was aimed at documents which were anonymous or of doubtful authority, so that the printer might be asked who had authorised him to issue such a document. This was an election address signed by resp., & it did not come within the sect. at all (CHANNELL, J.).

(4) As to the matter of the Liberal-Unionist tea, if those were expenses incurred "on account of or in respect of the conduct or management of" the election, then an offence was committed, because they were not paid by or through any agent of resp., but I do not think that those expenses were incurred in respect of the conduct or management of the election. I am satisfied that this assoc. was an independent assocn., that it had meant to have that tea party some considerable time before, that it did not arrange it on that date in order to assist in the conduct or management of resp.'s election at all, that resp. had nothing to do with the getting of it up, that he did not contribute in any shape or form to the expenses, he simply came there to what was a party held by other people, not a party having to do with the conduct or management of his election, but something got up by them for their own purposes, & that being there, he did make the few remarks which have been repeated to us. In those circumstances it seems to me that resp. is in no way guilty of an offence under that sect. of this Act [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883, s. 18] (DARLING, J.).

(5) What the Act [Corrupt & Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1895 (c. 40)] forbids is this: You must not make or publish any false statement of fact in relation to the personal character or conduct of a candidate; if you do, it is an illegal practice. It is not an offence to say something which may be severe about another person, nor which may be unjustifiable, nor which may be derogatory, unless it amounts to a false statement of fact in relation to the personal character or conduct of such candidate; there is a great distinction to be drawn between a false statement of fact, which affects the personal character or conduct of the candidate, & a false statement of fact which deals with the political position or reputation or action of the candidate. If that were not kept in mind this statute would simply have prohibited at election times all sorts of criticism which was not strictly true, relating to the political behaviour & opinions of the candidate. That is why it carefully provides that the false statement, in order to be an illegal practice, must relate to the personal character & personal conduct (DARLING, J.).—CUMBERLAND, COCKERMOUTH DIVISION CASE, ARMSTRONG, BROOKSBANK, BROWN, BECK, COOPER & HENDERSON v. 790. — Must be false statements of facts.]—If it be a false statement of fact, & it be in relation to the election & to the personal character & conduct of the candidate, this ct. has nothing whatever to do with the question which arises in cases of libel as to whether there was malice. Any false statement, whether charging dishonesty or merely bringing a man into contempt, if it affects, or is calculated to affect, the election, comes within this Act [58 & 59 Vict. c. 50].—SUNDERLAND CASE, STOREY v. 791. ——Corrupt & Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1895 (c. 40), was passed for a special purpose. Inasmuch as it is a statute extending the power of the ct. to restrain certain defamatory statements, it is necessary to look at the Act carefully. The language of the statute is "false statement of fact," & that language must be used in contrast to a false statement of opinion. The language is not merely a "false statement," but a false "statement of fact." Secondly, the statement must be in relation to the personal character or conduct of the candidate. It must, therefore, be a false statement of fact bearing on a candidate's character or conduct (BUCKLEY, J.).—ELLIS v. NATIONAL UNION OF CONSERVATIVE & CONSTITUTIONAL ASSOCNS., MIDDLETON & SOUTHALL (1900), 44 Sol. Jo. 750.

798. — Contract with professional bill posters—Similar contract possible with opposing party.]—I think this was a contract under which the man was a contractor as distinguished from an agent or servant. The distinction is quite a fine one when the contract contemplates, at any rate, the probability of some personal service being done under it; of course, it then becomes rather a fine question, but I think the test laid down is an extremely good one. Would it have been a breach of contract if the same thing had been done by this man for the other side? If he was a servant or an agent it clearly would; it would have been a clear breach of his duty. I see no reason why he should not have gone & made precisely the same bargain with the other side, & posted the bills of the other side at the same time (CHANNELL, J.).—EXETER CASE, DUKE v. ST. 799. No one deceived by distribution.]—(1) The Public Prosecutor is not entitled to administer a general cross-examination, without definite object, to every witness called in the course of the hearing of a petition.

(2) A scrutiny is to be taken before the recriminatory case.

(3) The documents which the men were employed to put into the hands of voters cannot properly be held to be either an "advertisement," or an "address," or a "notice" within the schedule. The most appropriate description of it would be "a canvassing handbill." But even assuming that these handbills could be held to be addresses or notices within the schedule, I do not think that the men in question were men who were in any true sense of the words men employed to "distribute addresses or notices" within the schedule (DENMAN, J.).

(4) The election agent who personally employed the men for the purpose [distributing the handbills] has been guilty of an illegal employment & of an illegal payment in the employment & payment of the lightermen for such services, & in strictness, by the joint effect of [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883], ss. 21 (2) & 11 (b), petitioner would be liable to the consequences of this illegal practice, & therefore incapable of being elected for the borough during the present Parliament. I am, however, of opinion that as regards petitioner & his election agent there is sufficient evidence before us to authorise us to hold that the case comes within sect. 23 of the Act, & that we shall be justified in holding that the illegal conduct here arose from inadvertence & not from want of good faith within sect. 23 (b) of the Act (DENMAN, J.).

(5) I am unable to hold that the distribution of these yellow cards, in the absence of any evidence that any one was in fact deceived by them, was an act, however objectionable & discreditable to the party who circulated them, which deprives petitioner of a right to sit for the division in case any vacancy should occur during the present Parliament (DENMAN, J.).

(6) This being a question of law requiring further consideration by the Q. B. Div. of the High Ct. within sect. 12 of Election Act, 1868, we reserved that question by stating a case for the opinion of that ct. as to the right of such persons to vote, & postponed the granting of our certificate until that ct. should have determined such question, upon which would turn our decision as to the validity or invalidity of resp.'s election (DENMAN, J.).

(7) We do feel that if recounts are to be demanded, it would be far more satisfactory that they should take place at an early stage of the case; but we do not here think it fair to preclude G., for the matter was undoubtedly mentioned early in the case. It is the first ground of objection in resp.'s particulars, & there, certainly, the language used was calculated to prevent him from then & there insisting upon it, & from making the application which it would be open to him at any time to make. Therefore I do not think the delay is fatal in this case, though in other cases it might be a ground for refusing the application if any unreasonable delay took place in making it. The demand for a recount is a matter within the jurisdiction of the ct. to consider upon reasonable grounds, & a recount can take place by the ct. itself directing its own officers to act with it in making the recount (DENMAN, J.).—TOWER HAMLETS, STEPNEY DIVISION CASE, ISAACSON v.

802. Provided by election agent—Banners.—

(1) The canvas advertisements [broad strips of canvas, with the words "Isaacson for Stepney" upon them, & paid for by resp.'s election agent] are banners & nothing else (CAVE, J.).

It is perfectly plain, with regard to many of these banners, that they were used as marks of distinction, & when banners are so used, I do not doubt but that they come within the sect. [Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 7] & that any payment for them is illegal (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J.).

(2) There were illegal practices at the election. The question arises whether the ct. ought to give relief to those who were guilty of them, under sect. 23 [Corrupt Practices Act, 1883], & to declare them exempted out of the Act, & consequently, not illegal at this election. . . . The question depends upon whether the things were done inadvertently & bonâ fide. Now, as to the inadvertence, it may be either that the party was not aware of what was done, or that he did not know that it was wrong. . . . Now, as to the payments for the banners. The election agent might fairly say that the payments were inadvertent in the sense that he did not know that they were wrong. Then, as to their having been made bonâ fide, it is very material to consider what was the character of the election in other respects, whether it was in other respects pure, so as to show that there was a bonâ fide desire to avoid illegal practices (CAVE, J.).

(3) There is in ct. £1,000, which is available for the payment of costs. n. —Ostensibly to local-option poll—Parliamentary election on same day.]—A committee of the licensed victuallers in an electoral district paid for cabs to convey voters, ostensibly to vote only at the local-option poll, which was being taken on the same day & in the same polling-booths as an election of members of the House of Representatives. The same committee contributed from its funds to the funds of the Liberal Electoral League, formed to promote the election of the Liberal candidates for the House, & meetings took place between the two bodies, at which it was agreed to co-operate, & that the trade committee should support the Liberal candidates, the Liberal League supporting the trade committee at the local-option poll. There was no evidence that the Liberal League was given the control of the cabs paid for by the trade committee, or that any arrangement was made between the two bodies as to the use of the cabs:—Held: this was not evidence that would justify the et. in holding that the cabs were used for the purpose of promoting the election of the Liberal candidates.—WELLINGTON CASE (1897), 15 N. The candidate knew nothing of the matter:—Held: there was properly no payment by P. to M. for any purpose, the money being given for one purpose & received for another; if there was a payment, it was made after P.'s agency had ceased, & there was no previous hiring or promise to pay to which it could relate back.—Re BROOKVILLE & ELIZABETHTOWN (1871), 32 U. 859. Presiding officer.—Duties of.]—(1) Ballot Act, 1872 (c. 33), by implication, imposes a duty prima facie on the presiding officer at a polling station during an election to deliver to the voters voting papers bearing the official mark appointed under the Act for the election, & to be present during such election at the polling station, so that the voters before depositing their voting papers in the ballot box, can show to him the official mark on the back of such papers in accordance with the statute. For breach of these duties, being merely ministerial, an action will lie by a party aggrieved, e.g., who has thereby lost the election through votes given to him being void for want of the official mark without malice or want of reasonable care on the part of deft.

(2) If a clerk be appointed by the returning officer to assist at the polling station, the presiding officer may by the Act depute to such clerk so much of his duties as he thinks fit, with certain specified exceptions. For the acts of commission or omission of the clerk in the performance of the duties so delegated, the presiding officer will not be responsible, inasmuch as he does not appoint the clerk, & the relation of master & servant does not exist between them.

(3) (BOVILL, C.J., & GROVE, J.) The Act does not impose on the presiding officer the duty of ascertaining, before the voter deposits a voting paper in the ballot box, whether the official mark is on such paper.

There was no proof that the copy of the burgess roll was seen by any person while in the room:—Held: there was not sufficient evidence to warrant a conviction under the above sect., as there was no proof that the information as to the voters was actually communicated to any person, & it was not enough that the means of acquiring such information were afforded to any one. Qu.: whether, under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), the information was defective as being for more than one offence?—STANNANOGHT v. candidates at a Parliamentary election, one of them was guilty of a corrupt practice by giving leave, on the day of nomination, to his tenants to kill rabbits on his estate, for the purpose of influencing their votes at the election. A notice was given to the electors on the morning of the polling-day, before the polling, by the agent of the other candidate, in the following terms:—"Colonel D., having, for the purpose of influencing voters at this election, given to all his tenants on the W. estate & voters in this borough a right to trap & shoot rabbits, has, I believe, been guilty of a corrupt practice, & as agent of H., a candidate at this election, I hereby give you notice that, under those circumstances, the said Colonel D. is disqualified from being a candidate, & that all votes given for him will be thrown away." Colonel D. obtained the majority, & was declared elected, but, being petitioned against, was unseated, on the ground of the above-mentioned corrupt practice. Petitioner claimed the seat on the ground that the votes given to resp. being given with knowledge of his disqualification, were thrown away, & consequently petitioner was in a majority:—Held: bribing by a candidate at an election, though it renders his election void if he be found guilty of it on petition, does not incapacitate the candidate at that election in the sense that the votes given for him by voters with knowledge of it will be thrown away, & no disqualification arises in that sense of the term until after the candidate has been found guilty of bribery on petition, & consequently, petitioner was not entitled to the seat.—*Re LAUNCESTON CASE, DRINKWATER v. 890. General rule.]—(1) With regard to those votes as to which objections have been raised to the mode in which they were marked by the voters, we have proceeded upon what we think was the true intention of the Legislature in framing [Ballot Act, 1872, c. 33]. We have, first of all, asked ourselves whether the voter received his paper with the intention to vote. The mere fact that he has applied for & received a voting paper, affords abundant evidence that such was his intention. Then we have looked at the face of the paper itself, with a view to see whether or not the voter has by any mark clearly indicated the person for whom he wished & intended to vote; & if we have found such a mark, we have upheld the vote, regardless of the very technical, & as we think unsubstantial, objections which have been allowed in some of the earlier cases to be found in the reports of election cases, our view being that we ought to interpret the Ballot Act liberally, & subject to other objections, to give effect to any mark on the face of the paper, which in our opinion clearly indicated the intention of the voter, whether such mark were in the shape of a cross, or a straight line, or in any other form, & whether made with pen & ink, pencil, or even an indentation made on the paper, & whether on the right or the left hand of the candidate's name, or elsewhere within his compartment on the voting paper (HAWKINS, J.).

(2) We think we ought to adhere to the language of the statute itself, which says that the mark must be a mark by which the voter can (not might possibly) be identified; whether the mark is such, is a matter of fact (HAWKINS, J.).

(3) The result of our investigation of the whole matter is that we have come to the conclusion that there is an equality of votes. The effect is to render the election void (HAWKINS, J.).—GLOUCESTER (COUNTY) GIRENCESTER DIVISION CASE, LAWSON v. CHESTER-MASTER (1893), 9 T. L. R. 255; Day, 155; 4 O'M. & H. 194.

892. Position of cross—Not within vote space.]

—(1) An election is to be declared void by the common law applicable to parliamentary elections, if it has been so conducted that the tribunal which is asked to avoid it is satisfied, as a matter of fact, either that there was no real electing at all, or that the election was not really conducted under the subsisting election laws, that is, that the constituency have not in fact had a fair & free opportunity of electing the candidate which the majority might prefer, or that there is reasonable ground to believe that a majority of the electors may, by reason of irregularities in the mode of conducting the election, have been prevented from electing the candidate they preferred.

(2) To render an election void under the Ballot Act, 1872 (c. 33), by reason of a non-observance of or non-compliance with the rules or forms given therein, such non-observance or non-compliance must be so great as to satisfy the tribunal before which the validity of the election is contested that the election has been conducted in a manner contrary to the principle of an election by ballot, & that the irregularities complained of did affect or might have affected the result of the election.

(3) The ballot paper must not be marked so as to show that the voter intended to vote for more candidates than he is entitled to vote for, nor so as to leave it uncertain whether he intended to vote at all, or for which candidate he intended to vote, nor so as to make it possible by seeing the paper itself, or by reference to other available facts, to identify the way in which he has voted. If these requirements are not substantially fulfilled, the ballot paper is void & should not be counted; &, if it is counted it should be struck out on a scrutiny.

(4) Ballot papers with the name of the voter or of the candidate voted for written opposite to the name of the latter & not marked with a cross or with the addition of "cu" to the cross were held to be void.

(5) The placing of two crosses, or three crosses, or a single stroke (thus /) in lieu of a cross, or a straight line (thus |) or a mark like an imperfect letter P in addition to the cross, or a star instead of a cross, or a cross blurred or marked with a tremulous hand, or a cross placed on the left hand side of the ballot paper, or a pencil line drawn through the name of the candidate not voted for, or a ballot paper torn longitudinally through the centre:—Held: not to avoid the vote, in the absence of evidence of connivance or pre-arrangement.

(6) Twenty ballot papers were marked by the presiding officer by the direction of voters who were unable to read. Each of these ballot papers was placed by the presiding officer in the ballot box wrapped up in the declaration of inability to read made by the voter. The declarations of inability to read of the votes so marked by the presiding officer were not made up into a separate packet, sealed with the seal of the presiding officer, & so delivered to the returning officer (pursuant to sched. 1, Part I., rr. 26 & 29), but were delivered to him in the ballot box with the ballot papers as above mentioned. These votes could have been, but were not in fact identified by the returning officer at the counting of the votes:—Held: notwithstanding this breach by the presiding officer of the direction of the rules, the votes in question were properly counted.

(7) At one of the polling stations the presiding officer before delivering the ballot papers to the electors attending to vote marked upon each (to the extent of 294) the number of the vote appearing on the burgess roll, which would enable any of the persons present at the counting of the votes to identify the way in which the party had voted. Of the electors who received these ballot papers, 234 voted for the petitioner, & 60 for the resp. These votes were not counted by the returning officer:—Held: this admitted error of the presiding officer, which did not affect the result, did not render the election void either at common law or under the Ballot Act.

(8) Where there have been irregularities in the conduct of an election by the presiding officer at a particular polling station, but there has been no personal default on the part of the returning officer, & the result of the election has not been affected by the mistake of the presiding officer.

901. ———.]—The question here is whether a ballot paper is good, in which the voter, instead of making a cross or a mark of the ordinary kind straight with his pen, deliberately makes a circle. If a man does that, he really must do it either with some sinister object, or it is so perversely & absurdly in deviation from the directions of Ballot Act [1872 (c. 33)], as to make it a case in which he ought really to be held to have thrown away his vote. If he does it with the sinister object of having his vote known, then he has forfeited his vote because he had violated the Act. If he does it purposely, he has done it perversely & done it in such a way as again to legitimately forfeit his vote (DENMAN, J.).—TOWER HAMLETS, STEPNEY DIVISION CASE, ISAACSON v. If, on the other hand, the transgressions of the law by the officials being admitted, the ct. sees that the effect of the transgressions was such that the election was not really conducted under the existing election laws, or it is open to reasonable doubt whether these transgressions may not have affected the result, & it is uncertain whether the candidate who has been returned has really been elected by the majority of persons voting in accordance with the laws in force relating to elections, the ct. is then bound to declare the election void. (1) At a parliamentary election the high sheriff was the returning officer, the duties being performed on his behalf by a firm of solrs., one of whom was under-sheriff. (2) The right of a returning officer under sect. 2 of the same Act to be paid his reasonable charges & expenses is not limited to such charges only as have been vouched under sects. 4, 5 of the Act, nor is a charge made by him to be disallowed merely because in the account sent in by him to the candidates it appears under a wrong heading.

(3) A returning officer is not limited to charging for such services & expenses as come verbatim et literalim within the descriptions in the sched. to the Act, if they are services & expenses of one of the kinds mentioned in the sched. #### SUB-SECT. 2.—EXPENSES OF CANDIDATE.

A. What are.

See Corrupt Practices Act, 1883, s. 33 (1), (5), (8), (9), 35 (1), (2), Sched. II., Part I.; Representation Act, 1918, s. 47, Sched. VIII.

940. General rule.]—(1) Although the election may commence from the time when any particular individual is announced as a candidate, it does not follow that the work of the election does begin then. From the time when a man becomes the adopted candidate he is in a position in which he may incur expenses for the conduct & management of that election which is still in the future; (2) but it does not at all follow that all the expenses which he incurs because he is a candidate, & which he would not incur if he were not a candidate, & which, in one sense, therefore have a reference to that election which is still in the future, are expenses incurred in the conduct & management of the election. There are two classes of expenditure which a candidate almost invariably does incur, & which he begins to incur from the time, at any rate, when he is announced as a candidate. First of all there is a class of expenses incurred in promoting & disseminating the political opinions of the party to which he belongs, & in holding meetings for the purpose of delivering speeches upon this or that subject which the party politicians have taken up, or which they take up in answer to what their opponents are taking up. Expenses must be incurred in that way by an intending candidate, & a candidate who comes down & makes speeches in support of what are supposed to be the principles of his party is incurring expenses & incurring those expenses with reference to his future election. But those expenses, if they can be identified as being in reference to the political views of his party, are not expenses "in respect of the conduct & management of his election." . . . There is another class of expenses which is more doubtful but which always occurs, & that is this, the expenses which a candidate incurs for the purpose of making himself personally popular. That class of expenses is not necessarily part of the conduct & management of an election. Expenses of that character would not come within "expenses in respect of the conduct & management of the election," which have to be paid through the election agent, & which have to be kept within a definite maximum (CHANNELL, J.). (3) "Corrupt" means doing the thing which the legislature forbids. . . . Treating has been defined as getting at voters through their mouths & through their stomachs, supplying them with food & giving them drink (CHANNELL, J.).

(4) The time when the election is supposed to commence . . . is certainly not limited to the commencement of the active part of the election by the occurrence of a vacancy or by the issue of a writ (CHANNELL, J.).

(5) The difference of opinion results in favour of resp. as far as the seat is concerned, but in petitioner's favour as regards costs (CHANNELL, J.).—GREAT YARMOUTH CASE, WHITE v. FELL (1906), 5 O'M. & H. 176.

(3) Where a petition is utterly unfounded the costs of the Public Prosecutor will be ordered to be paid by petitioner.

(4) To call resp. & his agents as the sole witnesses in support of a petition, & to treat them as hostile witnesses is not the proper way to conduct a petition.—LAMBETH, KENNINGTON DIVISION CASE, CROSSMAN v. DAVIS (1886), 54 L. T. 628; 4 O'M. & H. 93.

The fact that the return of election expenses transmitted to the returning officer under sect. 33 contains an error does not make it a nullity so as to render the candidate liable to the penalties imposed by sub-sect. 5 of that sect. upon a candidate for sitting or voting before the return required by the Act has been transmitted.—MACKINNON v. 971. — — — — — Money advanced by agent.—Expended illegally.]—It is unlawful for any election agent or sub-agent, except the expense agent, to make payments on behalf of the candidate even for current disbursements, & such payments cannot be recovered from the candidate. An election sub-agent, who was a solr., employed canvassers for the work of the election, & paid them out of his own money. The expense agent having disallowed these payments the sub-agent brought an action against the candidate in the district registry for the money expended. The candidate obtained the common order to tax pltf.'s account as a solr.'s bill of costs, & then obtained an order to stay further proceedings in the action pending the taxation. On the taxation the candidate objected to the payments as illegal under Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1803 (c. 20):—Held: (1) the payments were illegal, & although the sub-agent had an implied authority to employ canvassers, he had no implied authority to pay them, & therefore, he could not recover the amount expended from the candidate; (2) the candidate could take the objection of illegality on the taxation of the bill of costs.—Re PARKER (1882), 21 Ch. ### PART VII. SECT. 1.

1. Extraordinary vacancy.—Failure to hold election.—Power of Governor in Council.]—Held: an election under Local Authorities Act, 1902, is not merely the taking a poll but a continuous process, consisting of several steps, & that as soon as the time prescribed by the statute for the taking of any of these steps has expired, without such steps having been taken, & it has thus become impossible to hold an election in accordance with the statute, the power of appointment conferred upon the Governor comes into operation. It is not necessary that he should wait until the last day which could have been fixed for taking a poll has passed without a poll being taken.—HODGE v. R. (1907), 5 C. L. R. 373.—AUS.

m. Special election.—Statutory notice.]—Municipal Ordinance, C. O. 1898, c. 70, s. 21, requires at least six days' notice of a special election & only five days' notice was given:—Held: the statutory provision as far as it to regulate the time for making such election, it is not competent to a majority of the electors assembled at the time of such election to narrow the period which the common law would allow; & therefore, a resolution by them that it shall conclude at a given time must at least limit a time reasonable in itself with respect to numbers & distance, & be of sufficient notoriety.

(2) Whether a resolution by a majority of the vestry on the first day of the election to close the poll at 4 o'clock on the next day in a parish where the number of electors did not exceed 180, & where the affidavits stated a custom for 200 years not to keep the poll open for more than two days, & no instance within living memory of extending it beyond 4 o'clock on the second day, were sufficient to warrant the closing of the poll at that time, while some of the voters were still coming in to poll, & others had no notice of the resolution was a fit question to be tried upon a mandamus.—*R. v. 978. Election of honorary freeman—Vote taken collectively—Not individually—Election void.]—Where at a corp. meeting, for the purpose of electing honorary freemen, a list of names was proposed, upon the whole of whom the vote was taken collectively, instead of individually:—Held: such election was void, even where the corp. consisted of an indefinite number.—*R. v. 979. Ordinary & extraordinary vacancies—One election to fill both—No distinctions made—Election void.]—A councillor to fill up an occasional vacancy under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 47, & councillors to replace the third part of the council annually going out of office, ought not to be chosen at one & the same election. 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict., c. 78, s. 11, does not prospectively sanction such a proceeding. An election having been held to fill up an occasional vacancy & the ordinary ones at the same time, a quo warranto information was brought against a party claiming to have been elected to fill one of the ordinary vacancies. Issue being joined on averments raising the question whether he was duly elected, it appeared on the trial that voting papers were delivered containing the particulars required by sect. 32 of the former Act, that deft. was named in a majority of such papers, & that the presiding alderman & assessor declared him & two others elected to fill the ordinary vacancies, & a fourth party to fill the occasional one. Deft. endeavoured to show by this & other evidence that the voters understood, at the time of the election, which persons were candidates to fill the ordinary & the occasional vacancies respectively, & that they gave their votes accordingly. The judge told the jury that the information which enabled the presiding officers to declare deft. elected to fill an ordinary & not the occasional vacancy was by law to be derived from the voting papers alone. On bill of exceptions & writ of error to the Exch. Chamber:—Held: the direction was right.—ROWLEY v. R. (1844), 6 Q. B. 668; 1 New Mag. Cas. 156; 14 L. J. Q. B. 62; 4 L. T. O. The proceedings were protested against & a poll demanded, but the chairman refused to grant one, & declared the meeting at an end.

g. Absence at time of election—Irregularities by substitute—Effect.]

At an election of county councillors one of the deputy returning officers was absent from his booth on three separate occasions, during polling day. The town clerk placed the deputy's initials on the back of the ballots given to voters, & the consequence was that these ballots were upon a judicial investigation identified & separated, & it appeared that during the third absence nine votes were cast for relator & nine for resp. Upon the whole resp. had two more votes than relator, & by County Councils Act, 1896, s. 13, there being two county councillors to be elected, a voter could give both his votes to one candidate. There was no suggestion of bad faith.—Held: the absences did not affect the result of the election, & applying the saving provisions of Consolidated Municipal Act, 1895, s. 17, it should not be declared invalid.—*R. P., thereupon, made & subscribed the declaration of acceptance of the office required by Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), ss. 34, 35. R. subsequently made & subscribed a similar declaration:—Held: (1) the returning officer had no jurisdiction to determine the question of disqualification, the proper method for determining that question being an election petition as provided by sect. 87 of the above Act, & the duty of the returning officer being to count the votes & "forthwith to declare to be elected the candidate to whom the majority of votes have been given," as provided by Ballot Act, 1872 (c. 33), s. 2; (2) P. had not been declared to be elected, & the office was not full of him; (3) he was not entitled to a mandamus to compel the mayor & corp. to receive his votes at their corporate meetings.—*PRITCHARD v. The committee resolved that, subject to approval by the council, he be released from that date. He was then nominated. After his nomination the council approved the resolution of the committee releasing him. On argument of questions of law reserved:—Held: (1) the advertisement, tender, & acceptance constituted a contract; (2) resp. had an interest in the contract; (3) the ratification, after resp.'s nomination, of the resolution releasing him did not relate back to the date of the resolution, because the interests of persons other than the parties to the contract might be affected, & therefore, resp., at the date of his nomination, had an interest in a contract with the council, & was disqualified, & his election was void.

Both at the time of his nomination & of the election, however, he was disqualified by reason of his interest in a contract with the council. Petitioner claimed the seat on the ground that his being the only valid nomination he should be declared elected. Resp. admitted the disqualification:—Held: the disqualification not being apparent on the face of the nomination paper, the nomination of resp. was valid, & as petitioner did not allege any notice to the electorate of the disqualification of resp., the votes given for him could not be treated as having been thrown away, & petitioner was not entitled to claim the seat.—*HOBBS v. All the voters so voting intended to vote for the candidate, & if both classes of voters could be added together, he had a majority, & was entitled to be returned:—Held: (1) having been duly nominated, & having a majority of votes, he was entitled to be returned; (2) the defect in the bad nomination was not cured by Ballot Act, 1872 (c. 33), Sched. 1, rr. 12, 13, inasmuch as those rules did not apply to the nomination at a municipal election.

By sect. 6 the burgesses may nominate in writing certain candidates, which nomination is to be "sent to the town clerk at least two whole days, Sunday excluded, before the day of election." At the last general municipal election the town clerk published his notice as required by sect. 5, & directed that the nomination papers should be sent in by Oct. 28, the election taking place on the following Nov. 1. Certain nomination papers were accordingly sent in by that day, but others containing the names of other candidates were not sent in until the 29th, these latter he refused to accept, & he published the list of candidates, omitting those whose names appeared only in the last-mentioned lists, who, therefore, had no opportunity of being elected:—Held: the town clerk was wrong, & he had no right to require the nomination papers to be sent in for a longer period than two whole days at least before the day of election.—R. v. 1015. — Withdrawal after delivery—To insert unnecessary alteration—Redelivered.—Municipal Elections Act, 1875 (c. 40), s. 1 (1), (2), & (3), provides that nine days at least before any election of town councillors, the town clerk shall publish a notice intimating the last day on which nomination papers, which are to be signed by the candidate, his proposer & seconder, & by eight burgesses, & delivered by the candidate himself or by his proposer & seconder are to be delivered to him, which day is to be seven days at least before the day of election, & the day & hour at which the mayor will attend to hear & determine objections thereto. At the annual election of town councillors for 1875, the town clerk of N. issued a notice in the prescribed form, but erroneously stating the last day for the delivery of nomination papers to be Saturday, Oct. 23, which did not leave seven clear days between that day & the day of election, Nov. 1. W., a candidate for one of the two vacancies, duly delivered his nomination paper at the town clerk's office on Friday, Oct. 22; but, inasmuch as one of the eight burgesses had written one of his Christian names with a contraction, "Fredk." W., supposing that to be a fatal objection, without notice & without the knowledge of the town clerk, got the paper back from a clerk in the office & returned it on the following day re-signed by the burgess. T., another candidate, delivered his nomination paper on Saturday, the 23rd. H. & P., two other candidates who had duly delivered their nomination papers on Friday, the 22nd, objected to the allowance of the nomination papers of W. & T. The mayor, assuming to have authority to hear it, disallowed the objection, & the result of the poll was that W. & T. were declared duly elected. H. & P., thereupon, filed a petition against this return, but did not claim to be seated. Upon a special case setting out the facts for the opinion of the ct.:—Held: (1) the mayor had no power to deal with the objection as to the time of delivering the nomination papers, & his decision might be questioned on petition; (2) the nomination paper of W. must be taken to have been delivered on Friday, the 22nd, & was, therefore, in time, the taking it away for an unnecessary alteration not being done with intent to withdraw it; (3) the nomination paper of T., though delivered in accordance with the terms of the town clerk's notice, was delivered too late; (4) the notice published by the town clerk being so defective as to be calculated in the opinion of the ct. to mislead the candidates & so prevent a fair election, the whole proceeding must be declared void & a new election ordered.—*HOWES v. Persons subscribing nomination paper—The nominator—Number on burgess roll wrongly stated—Void.]—The number on the burgess roll of a burgess nominating a candidate at a municipal election for the office of town councillor, must, in order to satisfy the requirements of Municipal Elections Act, 1875 (c. 40), s. 1, (2), Sched. 1, Form 2, & Note, be stated in the nomination paper. Therefore, where, instead of the right number 695, the number 704 appeared in such paper, & an objection taken thereto was allowed by the returning officer, although no one had been or could be misled by the mistake:—Held: the decision of the returning officer was correct, & the effect of the mistake was not remedied by & could not be amended under the provisions of Parliament & Municipal Registration Act, 1878 (c. 26), s. 41, & Ballot Act, 1872 (c. 33), s. 13.—*GOTHARD v. 1022. — The seconder—Property of, wrongly described—Name of property recently changed.]—S. was nominated a candidate for the office of councillor in the borough of B.; in his nomination paper his seconder was described as of H. Street. The situation of the property of the seconder was described on the burgess roll as being in W. Street. The street was generally known as H. Street, & its name had been only recently changed to W. Street; no one had been or could be misled by the description thereof as H. Street. The mayor of B. having declared the nomination paper to be void on the ground that the seconder of S. had improperly described the situation of the property, in respect of which he was enrolled on the burgess roll:—Held: the situation of the property of the seconder was sufficiently described, & the decision of the mayor was wrong.—SOPER v. BASINGSTOKE

the fact that he signed the nomination paper before his nominators, but a finding by the magistrate that the nomination was void on that ground is not a preliminary question of law on which the magistrate's jurisdiction depends, & therefore, as by sect. 57 his finding is final, it cannot be disturbed by the supreme ct.—*GILCHRIST v. 1023. — Assenting burgesses—Subscription to more papers than vacancies—All papers not affected.]—Municipal Elections Act, 1875 (c. 40), s. 1 (2), deals with the form of nomination at municipal elections, which it requires to be in writing & subscribed by two enrolled burgesses as proposer & seconder, & by eight other, called assenting, burgesses, & provides that "each candidate shall be nominated by a separate nomination paper, but the same burgesses, or any of them, may subscribe as many nomination papers as there are vacancies to be filled, but no more." In a borough there were four vacancies on the town council. The four petitioners were duly nominated & each nomination paper was signed by P. as an assenting burgess. After the four nomination papers had been delivered to the town clerk, P. signed the nomination paper of a fifth candidate, which was duly delivered to the town clerk. The mayor on an objection duly raised, decided that petitioners' nominations were void. On petition to this ct.:—Held: the nominations were valid.—BURGOYNE v. COLLINS (1882), 8 Q. B. Every candidate for the office of councillor must be nominated in writing. 2. The writing must be subscribed in the case of a ward election by two burgesses of the ward as proposer & seconder, & by eight other burgesses of the ward as assenting to the nomination. A nomination paper at a ward election was subscribed "Edwin J. Hooper," "W. E. Waller," "R. Turner," by three of the assenting burgesses. Upon the burgess roll were entered the names "Edwin John Hooper," "William E. Waller," & "Robert Turner," the numbers opposite these names on the burgess roll being same as those appearing opposite the signature of the assenting burgesses on the nomination paper:—Held: the nomination paper had been duly subscribed by the assenting burgesses.—*BOWDEN v. Resp. was described in his nomination paper as a civil engineer. After practising as such for many years he had engaged in business as a journalist & then as an hotel broker. About ten years before the election he had retired from business, & since then had followed no occupation. During a previous term of office as alderman he had done engineering work for the council with payment:—Held: he was improperly described in the nomination paper as a civil engineer & an application to oust him was granted.—*Ex p. At an election of a ward councillor a burgess was nominated in a paper signed by B. & H. as proposer & seconder, & by eight other burgesses as assenting to the nomination. After the nomination paper had been delivered to the town clerk it was altered in the absence of the seconder & assenting burgesses by striking out the name of B. as proposer & substituting that of G., another duly enrolled burgess:—Held: the nomination was invalid.—*HARMON v. ## F. Corrupt and Illegal Practices.

(a) Corrupt Practices.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 81; Corrupt Practices Act, 1883; Municipal Corrupt Practices Act, 1884; Municipal Elections (Corrupt & Illegal Practices) Act, 1911 (c. 7), s. 1 (1); Public Meeting Act, 1908 (c. 66), s. 1; Perjury Act, 1911 (c. 6), ss. 5, 17, Sched.; Local Elections (Expenses) Act, 1919 (c. 13).

1030. Bribery — When offence complete.]—Under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 54, the offence of corrupting a voter is complete where the bribe is offered & accepted, & the voter promises to vote in pursuance of the corrupt contract, although he may break his promise, or may never have intended to perform it; but where a bribe is offered, but not accepted, the offence is that of offering to corrupt; & it is for the jury to say whether there was a complete agreement or not.—HARDING v. STOKES (1837), 2 M. & W. 233; Murp. & Il. 6; 6 L. J. Ex. 76; 1 J. P. 108; 1 Jur. 200; 150 E. R. 742.

1031. ———— Payment after election—Evidence of promise before election.]—At an election for two councillors for St. John's Ward, in the borough of Blackburn, T. was one of the candidates elected. Some of the burgesses who voted for T., after they had voted, received from T.'s agent a ticket, & were directed to go & did go to a particular inn, where they were shown into a room & upon presenting the ticket received the sum of 2s. 6d., & from another agent of T. one or two 4d. tickets for ale, & spirits, as a gift. Others of the burgesses entitled to vote at the said election, & who voted for T., signed the voting papers required to be handed in not in their real names, but in the names by which they were by mistake described on the burgess roll. The grounds of objection in a rule nisi for a quo warranto information against T. were, the reception of votes for T. from persons not entitled to vote, or who fraudulently personated persons who were entitled to vote; & the reception of votes from persons who had been bribed to vote for T.:—Held: (1) as the persons were entitled to vote, the objection taken was answered, the misnomer in the burgess roll being cured by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 142; (2) the fact of the burgesses having voted in wrong names did not vitiate their votes; (3) as there appeared to be evidence, from which a jury might have inferred an agreement with the voters before voting, that they should receive 2s. 6d. for their votes, that would have been a ground for making the rule absolute.—R. v. THWAITES (1853), 1 E. & B. 704; 1 C. L. R. 67; 22 L. J. Q. B. 238; 21 L. T. O. S. 72; 17 J. P. 281; 17 Jur. 712; 118 E. R. 600.

1032. ———— Remuneration for time lost in voting.]—By Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 2, & 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 12, every person shall be deemed guilty of "bribery," who shall . . . offer, promise, or promise to procure, or to endeavour to procure, any money or valuable consideration to or for any voter . . . to induce him to vote . . . at any parliamentary or municipal election. Deft., soliciting the vote of a voter, said "he should be remunerated for any loss of time":—Held: this was an offer or promise within the sects.—SIMPSON v. YEEND (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 626; 10 B. & S. 752; 38 L. J. Q. B. 313; 21 L. T. 56; 33 J. P. 677; 17 W. R. 1100.

1033. Treating—By candidate—Although subsequently not elected.]—T., a candidate for a school board, went with a friend, S., to a public house, where several voters were present, & S. brought on a discussion as to education, & suggested T. as the right man to represent the district, & T. treated some of the voters to drink, after addressing them as a candidate. T. went to the poll as a candidate, but was not elected:—Held: T. was properly convicted of corrupt practices under Elementary Education Act, 1870 (c. 75), s. 91.—TURNBULL v. WELLAND (1871), 24 L. T. 730; 36 J. P. 212.

1034. ———— Application of Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102).]—By Corrupt Practices (Municipal Elections) Act, 1872 (c. 60), the provisions of Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (c. 102), s. 23, by which giving refreshments to voters at parliamentary elections is made illegal under a penalty of 40s., are rendered applicable in the case of municipal elections.—HARGREAVES v. SIMPSON (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 403; 48 L. J. Q. B. 607; 41 L. T. 216; 43 J. P. 767; 27 W. R. 885, D. C.

paper — Required number.]—Four persons signed a nomination paper in favour of J. as a member of a divisional council. B. signed another nomination paper in favour of J., but did not sign the first paper. J. signed B.'s name to the first paper & sent it to the civil commissioner. The paper signed by B. never reached the hands of the civil commissioner. J. & D. were the only candidates, & as D.'s nomination paper was irregular, J. was declared elected. D. & B. now moved to have J.'s election set aside. The application was refused on the ground that, substantially, J. had been nominated by five persons.—DEVENISH & BOTHIA v. JACKSON (1890), 7 S. C. 311.—S. AF.

PART VII. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 1.—F. (a).

1. Bribery — In indictable offence.]—Where a statute relating to municipal elections made no provisions to repress bribery:—Held: it would no doubt be an indictable offence.—R. v. HOGG (1857), 15 U. C. R. 110. —CAN.

m. Treating—In candidate's interest—Election avoided.] During a municipal election meals & liquors were supplied to voters at a private house in the interest of one of the parties:—Held: the election must be set aside.—McMILLAN v. McLEOD (1886), 7 R. & G. 65.—CAN.

n. Jurisdiction over foreigners.]—It is no defence to a charge, under R. S. O. 1897, c. 9, of having committed illegal & corrupt acts in connection with provincial elections, that the offenders were American citizens & that they were served properly outside the jurisdiction. —Re SAULT ST.

Sect. 5.—Municipal corporations: Sub-sect. 1, F. (a) & (b) & G. (a).]

1035. Intimidation—No systematic riot—Great confusion only—No proof of effect on result.]—At an election of a town councillor there was great confusion during the last three-quarters of the last hour of taking the poll; but inasmuch as there was no proof of systematic riot or intimidation, or that if all the voters then ready to vote, but prevented doing so, had been allowed to vote, the result would have been different, a rule for a quo warranto to set aside the election was refused.—Ex p. GIBSON, R. v. MACGILL (1862), 26 J. P. 87.

1036. Absence of printer's impress—Distribution of bills—By candidate's brother—No evidence of agency.]—Upon an information against applt. under Municipal Corrupt Practices Act, 1884, s. 14, it was proved that applt. was a candidate for a seat in the local board of Willesden; that resp. received from his own servant at his residence a printed address & letter having reference to the election, & purporting to be signed by applt., but without the printer's name & address thereon; that this document was printed for publication by instructions conveyed to the printer in a letter from applt.'s brother, who resided with him; & that the printer had debited applt. with the cost of printing, but had not been paid:—Held: this was no evidence that applt. "printed or caused to be printed" the document in question, within sect. 14 of the above Act.

Placards or posters, also without the printer's name or address, printed by instructions of one, E., who was advertised in a local newspaper as the chairman of a committee for promoting the election of applt., & who sent the "copy" to the printer, were proved to have been posted about the district at E.'s expense:—Qu.: whether this was evidence of the printing & posting by an agent of applt.

The justices having convicted applt. in one penalty for both the alleged offences, & the conviction being bad as to one of them:—Held: it was bad altogether.—BETTESWORTH v. ALLINGHAM (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 44; 50 J. P. 55; 34 W. R. 296; 2 T. L. R. 66, D. C.

election in the following Nov. At the end of Aug. applt. caused to be printed a circular, headed with resp.'s name & the words "Shall he be our new mayor?" & sent six copies thereof in sealed envelopes, marked "private," to resp., the town clerk, & four councillors of the city. The circulars bore no printer's name or address:—Held: the circular was a "bill . . . having reference to a municipal election" within Municipal Corrupt Practices Act, 1884, s. 14, & applt. was rightly convicted by the magistrate.—ALCOTT v. EMDEN (1904), 68 J. P. 434; 20 T. L. R. 487; 48 Sol. Jo. 495; 2 L. G. R. 1313, D. C.

(2) By sect. 32 of the same Act, at the election of town councillors the voting paper shall contain the Christian names & surnames of the persons for whom the burgess votes, with their places of abode & descriptions. By sect. 142 no inaccurate description of any person, body corporate, or place named . . . in any roll, list, notice, or voting paper required by this Act, shall hinder the full operation of this Act in respect to such person, etc., provided that the description of such person, etc., be such as to be commonly understood. A voting paper contained the Christian name & surname of the candidate & his place of abode, & nothing more:—Held: this was not an inaccurate description, but a total omission of the description of the candidate, & was not cured by sect. 142, & the vote was therefore invalid.

(3) By sect. 41, if any burgess shall be rated in respect of distinct premises in two or more wards, he shall be entitled to be enrolled & to vote in such one of the wards as he shall select, & not in more than one. A burgess appeared on the roll both of the N. ward & S. ward, & voted in the S. ward:—Held: not having been objected to at the

"Gonville Place" was situated in a different ward from "Newmarket Road," but had until a few days previous to the election been the residence of the candidate:—Held: that was not an inaccurate description of a place stated in a voting paper which was cured by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 142, which applied only to the inaccurate description of a right place, not to the accurate description of a wrong place.—*R. v. In the nomination papers, under 22 Vict., c. 35, ss. 6, 7, a candidate was rightly nominated as William Penford, & the names were so published by the town clerk. There was no other person of the name of Penford qualified in the borough. In some of the voting papers the candidate voted for was inserted as W. 1088. Acceptance of office—Declaration within statutory period—After notice of election to office.—On rule nisi for a quo warranto information for the office of mayor, it appeared that deft.'s eligibility to that office consisted in his being an alderman of the borough, & his election to the latter office was now impeached because the council had neglected, at the first election of aldermen, in 1835, to declare which aldermen should go out in 1838: that deft. was elected alderman in Nov. 1841, & mayor Nov. 1842; that, by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict., c. 78, s. 23, no application could, when this rule was moved for, have been made to remove him from his office of alderman; & that, when the ct. gave judgment on this motion, there would barely have been time to obtain judgment of ouster before the year of the mayoralty would expire. The ct., in the exercise of their discretion, discharged the rule. Deft. was elected mayor Nov. 9, 1842, being then absent from the borough, to which he did not return until Nov. 23. He had in the meantime casual information of his election, but did not receive any official notice of it until his return. Within five days after his return he made the requisite declaration, & took upon him the office:—Held: this was a sufficient acceptance of the office within five days after notice, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 51.

1094. — The chairman—Although possessing casting vote.—(1) At an election for the office of mayor of a municipal borough one of the candidates voted for himself:—Held: inasmuch as a salary of £30 per annum had, by a resolution of the town council, been attached to the office of mayor, the vote was invalid, the candidate having a "pecuniary interest" in the matter within Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 22 (3).

(2) At the said election a vote was given for one of the candidates by W., who had been appointed chemist to the council, & to whom at the date of his election as councillor a balance was due for goods supplied to them. Subsequent to that date he had supplied them with goods to the amount of 4d. only:—Held: the vote was invalid by reason of the provisions of Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 12 (1).

(3) A vote was given for one of the candidates by J., who was the owner of a building let to the council for a polling station at the election of councillors at a charge of £2 2s.:—Held: the contract came within the exception in sect. 12, sub-sect. 2 (a), of the Act as a "lease of land," & the vote was therefore valid.

(4) The chairman of the meeting at which the election was held was not ipso facto disqualified from voting, & a vote given by him for one of the candidates was therefore good, notwithstanding that under sect. 61, sub-sect. 4, he was entitled to a casting vote.

m. If he may vote—The outgoing mayor—"Exhaustive ballot."—A retiring mayor presiding at the election of his successor has an original & casting vote upon a motion to determine the mode of voting at the election about to be held. At a meeting for the election of mayor, a motion was carried that the election should take place by an exhaustive ballot, & the aldermen filled up their ballot papers in accordance with the chairman's instructions. The ct. refused to entertain a motion to set aside the election on the ground that the method in which the votes had been given was not properly known as an "exhaustive ballot."—*Ex p. (2) Local Government Board's Provisional Order Confirmation Act, 1900, Art. 9, does not deprive a mayor of the right which he has under Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), to give an original vote at the election of his successor.

(3) The expression "equality of votes" in sect. 61, sub-sect. 4 of the latter Act, means "equality of valid votes." #### A. In General.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 14 (1), (7); Municipal Corrupt Practices Act, 1884, s. 5 (1), (2); Local Elections (Expenses) Act, 1919 (c. 13).

1103. Statutory declaration—Failure to make "on admission"—Or within month previously.—(1) 9 Geo. 4, c. 17, ss. 2, 3, do not give the party elected a month at all events for deciding whether he will make the declaration or not, but only excuse him from making it at the time of admission, if he has made it within a month before.

(2) The words "upon his admission" mean at the time, & not within a reasonable time after, & the authorities who admit may prescribe the order in which the ceremonies forming parts of the admission shall take place.

(3) If the party offers himself to the proper ct. to be admitted, not having made the declaration within a month before, & being asked whether he will make it or not, declines to say, but requires the ct. to admit him, which they refuse, the election is thereupon void, & a precept may issue for a new election.—*R. v. 1104. Retiral rota—On first election of aldermen—Delay in appointing.—Under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 25, it is necessary that the councillors who elected the first aldermen should also have appointed who were first to go out of office, & where such appointment has been made, not by those councillors, but by the councillors of a subsequent year, & aldermen have been elected in place of those so appointed to go out, the election is void, although the irregular appointment was not objected to when made.—R. v. ALDERSON (1841), 1 Q. B. 878; 1 Gal. & Dav. 429; 10 L. J. Q. B. 277; 6 Jur. 321; 113 E. R. 1368.

1105. Mandamus for new election—Failure to fill vacancy—After judgment of ouster.—A party declared to be elected alderman of a borough at the triennial November election was ousted by judgment in quo warranto. The council not having elected a successor within ten days after judgment signed, the relator, on the seventeenth day after the expiration of the ten days, obtained a mandamus commanding the council to proceed in the election, which was obeyed, & a return made:—Held: the council would be ordered to pay the costs incident to the mandamus under 1 Will. 4, c. 21, s. 6.—R. v. CAMBRIDGE CORPN. (1845), 4 Q. B. 801; 1 New Mag. Cas. 174; 14 L. J. Q. B. 82; 4 L. T. O. S. 290; 9 J. P. 229; 9 Jur. 11; 114 E. R. 1099.

1106. — Failure to elect.—At a meeting of the town council a minority of the councillors present delivered voting papers to the mayor for certain persons to be elected aldermen. The mayor & the majority of the town councillors had been advised that the day was not the proper one for the election. The mayor consequently declined to proceed with the election, & no election was declared. It was, in fact, the duty of the council to have proceeded to the election of aldermen on that day, had they known the law:—Held: (1) the act of the minority was not the act of the town council; (2) the election had not been part held,

n. Casting vote—Who may give.—At an election for a mayor under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 108 (Ir.) in case of an equality of votes, the casting vote is to be given, not by the mayor, but by the alderman who shall have been elected by the greatest number of votes recorded in his favour on a contest: & an alderman elected after a contest is to be considered as elected by a greater number of votes than one returned by a larger constituency without a contest.—HALL v. WALKER (1875), 1 R. 9 C. L. 66.—IR.

PART VII. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

o. "Unduly elected"—Personation.—Under the Sydney Corporation Act, 1902, a person declared to have been elected as an alderman does not appear to be "unduly elected" within the meaning of sect. 56 if nothing more appears than that votes given by personators have been accepted counted & that the number of those votes is greater than the difference between the number of votes cast for that person & the number of votes but there had been no election; (3) consequently, a mandamus might issue calling upon the council to proceed to elect aldermen.—R. v. BRADFORD CORPN. (1851), 2 L. M. & P. 35; 20 L. J. Q. B. 226; 10 L. T. O. S. 372; 15 J. P. 83.

—Where a given number of aldermen was to be elected on a given day, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 25, which prescribed no particular mode of electing, the proper mode was to put to the vote a list containing as many names as there were vacancies to be filled up, any elector being at liberty to propose & have put to the vote a list of his own.—*R. v. 1117. ———.—Delivery of voting paper—To chairman.—By Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 60 (4), any person entitled to vote at an election of alderman may vote "by signing & personally delivering at the meeting to the chairman, a voting paper containing the surnames & other names & places of abode & descriptions of the persons for whom he votes." A voting paper was delivered commencing, "I, the undersigned A. B." & ending with the signature "C. D."; & upon a petition against the return of the persons elected, the comr. received evidence showing that the town clerk had inserted A. B.'s name in order that the voting paper might be used by him, but by inadvertence it was handed to C. D., who signed & personally delivered it to the chairman without discovering the mistake:—Held: the vote was valid, & the comr. was right in receiving evidence of the circumstances under which it was given.—*SUMMERS v. The mayor presided & voted for himself, which caused an equality of votes. He then gave the casting vote in his own favour, & declared himself elected.

On application for a quo warranto to question his right to act as alderman:—Held: assuming that he was improperly elected, the case was one in which either the person whose election was questioned was at the time of the election disqualified, or he was not duly elected by a majority of lawful votes, within Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 87, & in either view the election could not be questioned except by an election petition, & quo warranto would not lie.—R. v.

When he was informed that it was illegal to incur any expenses at the election he withdrew the cards & incurred no further expense. He defeated the other candidate by one vote. Upon an application for relief:—Held: (1) though the offence was committed through inadvertence, it was not just that relief should be given, the notice containing a personal attack upon the other candidate having been paid for, & it being impossible to say that it had no effect on the election; (2) the fact that the other candidate had at a previous election paid certain expenses was not a ground entitling applt. to relief.—Re DROITWICH ELECTIVE AUDITORS' CASE, *Ex p. Ballot boxes & voting compartments were provided, the number of each voter on the list of voters was placed on the back of the paper issued to him, & each person tendering his vote was asked the three questions specified in Act 40 of 1889, s. 48:—Held: as the Act does not specify how votes

Among the newly-elected councillors was one who had been on May 4, 1909, appointed chairman of the council composed of the retiring members. A parish council elected a chairman from its own body. At the next election of parish councillors the chairman was a candidate but was not elected. At the annual meeting of the new council he presided as chairman. A qualified person, who was not a councillor, was proposed for chairman of the new council. Act of Assembly, appointed a certain school-house in the parish of L. as the place of meeting for nomination of candidates for parish officers, but the poll-clerk had given a notice for the meeting to be held at the house of C. in the same settlement. The parishioners met at the place named in the notice & organised the meeting, & then adjourned to meet at the school-house, where the election afterwards took place:—Held: the foundation of the election being the meeting for nomination of candidates, as that was not held at the place appointed by law, their election was bad.—*Ex p. 1153. Accordingly, where an Act gave power to a corp. to elect a number of persons from among the rate-payers to be guardians of the poor, & directed that election to take place at a given time, the corp., who had allowed that given time to pass without proceeding to the election, were compelled by mandamus so to do, lest the intention of the legislature should be frustrated by the corp. neglecting their duty.—*R. v. In Vestries Act, 1818 (c. 69), which regulates the mode of voting in vestries, is a proviso, that that Act shall not affect the right or manner of voting in any vestry held by ancient usage or by special act:—Held: this proviso did not except the parish of C. from the operation of the above Act, & to bring a vestry within the exception it must have a peculiar constitution.—*R. v. 1158. — Casting vote given by deputy—No vote in ward for which acting.]—At an election in a borough of guardians, a deputy returning officer, not having a vote for the ward in which he was acting, gave a casting vote to H., one of two candidates, H. & W., for whom the votes were equal, instead of determining the election by lot in accordance with Guardians (Outside London) Election Order, 1898, r. 22. The deputy returning officer thought that the returning officer had instructed him that he had a casting vote. The deputy returning officer declared the result of the poll in accordance with r. 24 (1) of the said Order. The returning officer, on discovering the mistake, urged H. & W. to treat the declaration of the poll as a nullity, & to draw lots for the seat, but H. refused to do this. The returning officer then published the result of the election in the various wards of the parish in accordance with the returns of the various deputy returning officers, & announced H. as the successful candidate for the seat. The returning officer then asked H. to concur in creating a vacancy of his seat, but this also H. refused to do. W. issued an election petition, & joined H., but did not join the returning officer, as a resp. Resp. did not give notice under Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 97, & rr. 47, 65, of the general rules of an intention not to oppose the petition. At the hearing resp. did not oppose the petition, except as to costs:—Held: (1) resp. was not duly elected by a majority of lawful votes, & the election was void; (2) the returning officer could not be ordered to pay costs as he had not been joined as a party to the proceedings; (3) resp. must pay petitioner the costs of & occasioned by the petition, including the costs of the special case, from the time when he might have given notice under the said sect. & rules of an intention not to oppose the petition; (4) petitioner must pay his own costs up to that date.—*WATTS v. 1159. Acts of election—Proper days for—Intervention of dies non—Delivery of nomination paper.]—The Poor Law Comrs., by a general order directed to unions amongst which was the union including the parish of W., directed "that whenever the day appointed in this order, for the performance of any act relating to or connected with the election of guardians shall be a Sunday or Good Friday, such act shall be performed on the day next following, & each subsequent proceeding shall be postponed one day;" & that every nomination for the office of guardian should be in writing, & should be sent, after Mar. 14, & before Mar. 26, to the clerk or person appointed to receive nominations; & such clerk or person "shall, on the receipt thereof, mark thereon the date of its receipt, & also a number according to the order of its receipt; provided that no nomination sent before the 15th or after the said Mar. 26 shall be valid:" & that, if the number of persons nominated should not exceed the number to be elected, the clerk should certify such persons as elected; otherwise the election to take place from those nominated. The parish W. was to elect three guardians. Three persons were duly nominated. Mar. 26 fell on a Sunday; & on that day, a paper nominating a fourth person, M., was delivered to the clerk of the union. The clerk, considering this last nomination a nullity, certified the other three as elected guardians. Complaint being made to the Poor Law Board, they, under Poor Law Amendment Act, 1842 (c. 57), s. 8, inquired into the case, & by an order declared the election of the three void. Motion being, within the time limited in that sect., made for a certiorari to remove the last mentioned order:—Held: (1) the legality of the order might, on such motion, be inquired into as to matters shown by affidavit, though not apparent on the face of the order; (2) the order was right, the nomination of M. being valid.—Re WESTBURY-UPON-SEVERN UNION (1854), 4 E. & B. 314; 119 E. ## SECT. 15.—ELECTIONS BY TAKING A POLL.

1164. What is a poll.]—A poll must primâ facie mean a poll of all entitled to vote, i.e. those who are or may be present during the poll (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—R. v. SOUTHAMPTON WATERWORKS COMRS. (1845), 5 L. T. O. S. 216; 9 J. P. Jo. 387.

(2) If the tellers appointed to take the numbers differ, & a poll is demanded & refused, the ct. will grant a mandamus to enter adjournment of the election meeting, & to proceed to complete the election.—R. v. ST. LUKE'S (1833), 2 Nev. & M. K. B. 464.

—Time for—After declaration of show of hands.]—Where waywardens were elected for several townships in a parish, each waywarden for a separate township being by a show of hands declared duly elected:—Held: it was too late to demand a poll for the earlier townships at the end of the whole of the elections, for each election was a separate district election.—R. v. THOMAS (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 282; sub nom. R. v. ST. ASAPH (VICAR), 52 L. J. Q. B. 671; 47 J. P. 792, D. C.

1168. —Granted but subsequently cancelled—Cancellation arising through mistake—Previous election by show of hands invalid.]—At a vestry meeting for the election of a waywarden, according to Highway Act, 1862 (c. 61), s. 10, A. & B. were duly proposed & seconded as candidates for election. A vote of those present at the meeting was then taken, when A. had a majority of votes, & a poll was demanded on behalf of B. It was then observed that no account had been taken of the plurality of votes, & a second vote was accordingly taken, when B. had a majority. A poll was demanded on behalf of A., & fixed for a later day. On the day appointed for the poll the vestry was closed, in consequence of a notice having been affixed to the vestry door, without the authority of B., that he declined to stand as waywarden, & no poll was taken. B. then received a certificate of his having been duly elected waywarden, signed by the chairman of the meeting at which the votes were taken, according to Highway Act, 1864 (c. 101), s. 19, & proceeded to take his seat at the highway board:—Held: there had been no valid election, since it appeared that the ratepayers had not wilfully abstained from voting, but were misled by the notice.—R. v. COOPER (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 457; 39 L. J. Q. B. 273; 35 J. P. 37.

1203. Absence of printer's impress.—By Municipal Corrupt Practices Act, 1884, s. 14, it is made an illegal practice to print, publish, or post, or cause to be printed, published, or posted, any bill, placard, or poster, which fails to bear upon its face the name & address of the publisher. By sect. 20, where it is shown to the ct. that any act or omission, which would, by reason of being in contravention of any of the provisions of the Act, be but for the sect. an illegal practice, arose from inadvertence, & not from any want of good faith, the ct. may on application make an order allowing such act or omission to be an exception from the provisions of the Act, which would otherwise make the same an illegal practice. Four persons stood as candidates for election at the municipal election in the borough of Huntingdon, held on Nov. 1, 1884. These persons employed a printer to print their bills & posters. A fortnight before the election C., one of the candidates, went to the printer, G., & particularly drew his attention to sect. 14 of the above Act. G. in his turn gave instructions to his workmen in accordance with the instructions received by him from C. On Oct. 28, G. printed, published, & posted certain posters on behalf of the four candidates, appcts., which did not bear his name & address. When the omission was discovered he took steps to rectify it. A prosecution under the Act was commenced against C. & his colleagues, & G., the printer of the posters, but by consent the hearing of the summons before the magistrates was adjourned until an application was made to the ct. for an order excusing appcts. from the consequences of the omission. Appcts. made their application under sect. 20, & filed affidavits to the effect that the issuing of the posters without the printer's name & address being on them was due to inadvertence, & not to the want of good faith:—Held: under the circumstances, appcts. were entitled to an order excusing them from the consequences of the omission under sect. 20.—*Re HUNTINGDON (BOROUGH) MUNICIPAL ELECTION, Ex p. 1217. Illegal employment.—On application for relief from the consequences of illegal practices in respect of the election of a county councillor, the ct. at present, will be disposed to deal leniently with bonâ fide mistakes, as the election is the first of the kind, & the law on the subject not easy at first to understand nor as yet well known. The ct. granted relief to a candidate who, through pure inadvertence, employed & paid twelve messengers, at the price of 1s. 6d., to distribute an election address to 1,035 voters in a division for which, under Municipal Corrupt Practices Act, 1884, the legal limit was two.—*Re DUNCHURCH DIVISION, WARWICK (COUNTY), Ex p. employment & payment, by the agent of resp., of certain persons to assist in counting the votes was an illegal employment & illegal practice, an application was made for an order exempting resp. from the consequences of such acts:—Held: inasmuch as the acts arose from an excusable ignorance of the law, & not from any want of good faith, resp. was entitled Averment of general violence.]—(1) It appeared that the whole of the money expended in bribery amounted in the aggregate to 2s. 6d. between three persons:—Held: unless it were shown beyond a doubt that the acts of alleged bribery were done by the candidates themselves, the expenditure of so small a sum could not invalidate the election. Secus if the acts of giving trifling sums were accumulative.

(2) There was an allegation in the petition of undue influence:—Held: although evidence of general rioting & violence would not be altogether excluded under that averment, there ought properly to be an averment in the petition stating that general violence was relied on.

(3) The freedom of election is twofold. In the first place every man without any influence being brought upon him—it is illegal to use undue influence—should exercise his own judgment in selecting the candidate he believes to be best fitted to represent the constituency, & there is freedom of election in another sense, which is that every person who exercises the franchise ought to be at liberty to go & have the means of going to the poll & give his vote, without fear or intimidation. But for the purpose of setting aside an election on that ground there is a limit that must be established, & that is, that persons of ordinary nerve & courage are in fact prevented from going to the poll to give their votes (MARTIN, B.).—*SALFORD CASE, ANDERSON, BRYANT & HARDING V. Returning officer absent—One copy left at residence—One posted—One personally delivered on return.]—*On the last day on which a petition could be presented to the returning officer & for a week previously, the returning officer was in a place where he could not be communicated with by any ordinary means. A petition was signed in triplicate late in the afternoon of the last day for presentation. One copy was the same afternoon left in the house occupied by the returning officer as his private residence, but which he had locked up & left without any one in occupation during his absence, the document being placed inside the house through a window which had been left unfastened. The second copy was posted the same afternoon, & sorted the same evening into the private box through which correspondence for the returning officer was always delivered; but it was not cleared from this box until the next day, when it was placed by a clerk in the office of the returning officer, to await his return. The third copy was delivered to the returning officer personally on his return about ten days afterwards:—Held: there had been no presentation of the petition within due time.—WELLINGTON CASE (1894), 13 N. ## PART IX. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—E.

o. Form of petition—Statutory requirements—Telegram embodying alleged petition insufficient.]—Held: under Commonwealth Electoral Acts, 1918-1922, ss. 185, 187, no proceedings can be had on a petition unless the original petition bearing the signatures of petitioner & of the two witnesses is filed within the time limited by sect. 185 (c). No proceedings could therefore be had upon a telegram sent to the principal registrar which purported to embody a petition disputing an election signed by a person qualified to vote at the election in dispute & witnessed by two other persons.—Re POWELL (1923), 31 C. L. R. 600.—AUS.

*p. Allegation of corrupt practices—Sufficiency of.]—An allegation in the petition "that resp. was by himself, etc., guilty of corrupt practices as defined by the Controverted Elections Act of Ontario" sufficiently charges the commission of corrupt practices under Election Act, R. S. O. 1877, c. 10, ss. 152 & 153.—NORTH ONTARIO (Prov.) (1884), 1 E. R. 1.—CAN.*

*q. Formal allegations as to election.]—*Petition was headed "In the Election Ct. The Controverted Election Act, 1873. Election for the County of Pictou, holden on Feb. 4, 1874," & the first clause set out that "Petitioner was a candidate at the above election," & claims "that he ought to have been returned, etc." The only allegation that the election in question was "for members for the House of Commons" was contained in paragraphs of the petition, complaining that "no legal or proper alphabetical list of the electors of the said County of Pictou, qualified to vote at the election of members to serve in the House of Commons of Canada, etc., was ever prepared, etc." & there was no statement in the petition to show that the County of Pictou was in the Province of Nova Scotia or in the Dominion of Canada:—Held: the petition sufficiently indicated the election intended to be contested.—*DOULL v. *s. Petition irregularly intitled & filed.]—*The election petition against the election & return of resp. was intitled in the High Ct. of Justice, Q. B. Div., presented to the official in charge, filed & entered in the books of that office. A preliminary objection was taken that the High Ct. of Justice had no jurisdiction:—Held: Ontario Judicature Act, 1881, makes the High Ct. of Justice & its divisions a continuation of the former cts. merged in it, & those cts. still exist under new names; & the petition had not been irregularly intitled & filed.—MITCHELL v. CAMERON (1883), 8 S. C. R. 126.—CAN.

*t. Copy not signed by petitioner—No style of cause in petition.]—*Motion to set aside the service of an election petition upon the grounds that the copy served was not signed by petitioner, & did not show that the original was signed, & that there was no style of cause in the petition refused.—LA VERANDRYE ELECTION (1883), 1 Man. L. R. 11.—CAN.

*u. Variance in copy served.]—*By Dominion Controverted Elections Act, 1874, s. 9, a copy of an election petition is required to be served on resp. within five days after its presentation. A petition was filed charging resp. with having corruptly given to electors meat, drink, etc., on the day of nomination, & on the polling day; also, with hiring, promising to pay, & paying for horses, carriages, etc., to convey voters to the polls. The paper served on resp. as a copy of the petition omitted from the first allegation the words "& on the following days," & from the second the words "& paying for":—Held: no copy of the petition had been served on resp., the words omitted being material allegations in the petition.—ROGERS v. WALLACE (1885), 24 N. B. R. 459.—CAN.

*b. —.]—*The following variances between the original petition & the copy filed: "person" instead of "persons"; "places" instead of "place"; "John A. McDonnell" instead of "John A. McDonald"; "cause" instead of "caused":—Held: immaterial.—Re LORNE (1887), 4 Man. L. R. 275.—CAN.

*c. —.]—*An election petition alleged bribery by resp. B. himself, & by his agents, & concluded, "whereby the said B. was & is incapacitated to serve in the House of Commons of Canada as a member for the said electoral district of G., & the said election & the return of the said B. were & are wholly null & void":—Held: an omission of the words "return of the said B. were & are wholly null & void" in the copy of the petition served on resp. was a fatal defect.—ACHIE v. BURNS (1892), 31 N. B. R. 533.—CAN.

*d. Allegations of wrongful acts in the alternative—Not too vague & uncertain.]—*A petition is not insufficient for vagueness or uncertainty because it alleges a number of wrongful acts in the alternative. A petition is sufficient, if it alleges merely that resp. was guilty of a corrupt practice within the Election Act of Manitoba, 1886, s. 198.—Re CARTIER (1887), 4 Man. L. R. 317.—CAN.

*e. Absence of words "Whose name is subscribed"—Effect of.]—*The absence of the words "Whose name is subscribed" after the name of petitioner is not a sufficient ground of objection to a petition.—Re CARTIER (1887), 4 Man. L. R. 317.—CAN.

*f. "in all $2,000" duly deposited with the prothonotary as required by statute. The receipt was signed by the deputy prothonotary by or on behalf of petitioner, the security to be "to an amount of £1,000" to be given "either by recognisance, to be entered into by any number of sureties not exceeding four, or by a deposit of money" or partly in one way & partly in the other. The Act also provides that "two or more candidates may be made resps. to the same petition; but for all purposes of this Act such petition shall be deemed to be a separate petition against each resp."—Held: although there might be two resps. security to the amount of £1,000 was sufficient.—*THOMAS v. 1284. — Petitioners as sureties.]—(1) Security to the amount of £1,000 is all that can be required, though the petition is against the return of two or more members.

(2) Petitioners themselves cannot be sureties; but the fact of some of them entering into a recognisance as securities does not render the security invalid, but is an objection to its sufficiency appointed by the judges, & acknowledged receipt of $2,000, without stating that $1,000 was deposited as security for each resp.—Held: there being at the time of the presentation of the petition security of $1,000 for the costs of each resp. the security given was sufficient.—QUEEN'S COUNTY & PRINCE COUNTY CASES (1891), 20 S. A bond was given to secure certain named costs " & also all costs which on the final disposal of the petition the ct. shall award to be payable as provided by the Manitoba Act." "any objection made to the security given" must be given a liberal construction, & so read, covered the case in question.

The language of the Act is applicable to any security petitioner puts up, whether insufficient in point of amount, or in any other way to meet resps.'s costs, whether right in form or amount, provided it is genuinely filed as a security for the purposes of the petition.—NICHOLLS v. final disposal of the petition".—Held: petitioners were not bound by the form of the receipt given by the prothonotary as to the purposes for which the security given was intended, as no receipt is required by the statute to be given. The money was paid in as security for costs in the matter, & sects. 21 & 22 of the Act make it security for all purposes therein referred to.—Re ST. BONIFACE (1901), 13 Man. L. R. 75.—CAN.

Resp., in order to have costs out of the deposit in ct. moved before a judge of the Supreme Ct. in chambers to dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution, or to have the record remitted to the ct. below. Petitioner claimed the deposit should be returned to him:—Held: the final determination of the right to costs being kept in suspense by the appeal, the motion should be refused: but inasmuch as the deposit in the ct. below ought to be disposed of by an order of that ct., the registrar of the Supreme Ct. should certify to the ct. below that the appeal was not heard, & that the petition dropped by reason of dissolution of Parliament on Feb. 2, 1891.—HALTON CASE, LUSH v. a. — Knowledge of nature of petition.—Upon the hearing of preliminary objections to a controverted election petition:—Held: (1) although the petition was not read over to petitioner before he signed it, he knew that he was signing a petition against the return of resp. at the election in question, & knew in general terms the nature of the document which he was signing, & that was sufficient; it was not necessary that he should know the details of the allegations that were being made in his name; (2) the onus is upon petitioner of establishing his status as an elector.—Re CLAREMOUTH PROVINCIAL ELECTION, McVAUGH T V. 1305.—Bribery & treating.—(1) A vacancy having occurred in the representation of the city, several candidates of like politics started but agreed to a test ballot to decide which should continue the contest. It was alleged that corrupt practices had prevailed against this ballot:—Held: the trial of the petition being fixed for Monday, May 23, particulars must be given on the 17th, with permission to add to them up to the 19th, containing the names & addresses of the persons alleged to have been bribed & treated, & of those who bribed & treated, & the places where & times when the alleged treating took place.

p. Amendment to schedules—When allowed.—Amendments to the schedules of a petition may be allowed where reasonable notice is given. If such notice is not given the ct. may allow the amendments after putting petitioner to terms.—KEYSER v. CONROY (1917), C. P. D. 353.—S. AF.

q. Service of defective copy of petition—Power of court.—The copy of a petition under Alberta Controverted Elections Act, served on resp., had omitted from it a page of the original, containing substantial matter. On a summons to set aside the petition on preliminary objections:—Held: the objection "that service of a copy of the petition has not been made on resp. as required by the Act," was fatal, & the ct. had no power to allow an amendment; & the petition was set aside with costs.—Re ST. PAUL PROVINCIAL ELECTION (1913), 25 W. L. R. 877; 13 D. L. R. 639; 6 W. W. R. 89.—CAN.

r. — Formal defect not misleading.—In the printed copy of the petition served upon resp. the concluding prayer had, by mistake of the clerk, a pen stroke drawn through it:—Held: although the copy was not strictly a "true copy" of the original, yet as the defect was a purely formal one, & could not possibly have misled resp., it was not fatal, & leave to amend was given.—Re CENTRE BRUCE PROVINCIAL ELECTION, STEWART v. CLARK (1903), 22 C. L. T. 286; 4 O. L. R. 263; 1 O. W. R. 503; 2 O. W. R. 1094.—CAN.

s. Alteration after filing—Original restored.—After an election petition had been filed, two clerks of the agents of the solr. for petitioner were allowed to compare it with an engrossed copy, & finding that the two were different they altered the filed petition so as to correspond with the copy, adding in one place the word "treating" which had the effect of introducing a charge of a corrupt practice not in the original. The copy served upon resp. after this alteration corresponded with the petition as altered. It was not shown, & it was denied that petitioner knew of the alteration:—Held: the petition should be restored to its original state, & the copy served should be amended to conform with the petition as it was when filed.—LINCOLN & NIAGARA (DOM.), 1 P. R. 428.—CAN.

t. Misdescription of electoral district.—The petition & other papers in an election case were headed in the proper ct. & purported to be under Ontario Controverted Elections Act, as to "the election of a member of the Legislative Assembly for the Province of Ontario for the electoral district of Lincoln & Niagara." No such provincial electoral districts as Lincoln & Niagara existed, but there was an electoral district of Lincoln, being the district intended:—Held: the misdescription was not fatal; the additional words might be treated as surplusage & struck out, leave being given to petitioner to make such amendment.—Re LINCOLN PROVINCIAL ELECTION, MCKINNON v. JESSOP (1903), 22 C. L. T. 362; 4 O. L. R. 456; 1 O. W. R. 564.—CAN.

a. After examination of ballot papers.—Where the ct. on an application allows an inspection of the ballot papers, each party may only make use of & produce before the ct. the particular papers complained of by him, & is confined to the terms of the order of ct. allowing the inspection, & the ct. will not, after the inspection has taken place, allow an amendment of the petition, or the replying affidavit in order to rely upon other defective ballot papers discovered at the inspection.—*NICHOLSON v. Where, in a parliamentary election petition claiming to void the election, & also, claiming the seat upon a scrutiny, & relating to a division of a metropolitan borough which contained above 7,000 voters, 58,000 inhabitants, & in which some 170 witnesses were intended to be called by petitioners, cannot, as such & as committed with reference to that election, be inquired into for the purpose of invalidating the election in question. Therefore, petitioner has no right, upon the examination of resp. for discovery, to make a general inquiry into such corrupt practices, unless it can be shown that they are in some way connected with & are still operative upon the election in question.—*Re NORTH YORK PROVINCIAL ELECTION, KENNEDY v. 1847. Technical or formal objections not allowed.]—SHREWSBURY CASE, YOUNG v. FIGGINS, No. 1280, ante.

1848. Member of House of Commons may not appear as counsel.]—In 1868 the determining of [election] petitions was placed in the hands of the judges. Then because that tribunal (the judges) reported to the House of Commons, those who had the care of the interests both of Parliament & the Bar in their hands had to consider whether a barrister who was also a member of Parliament, had a right to appear before that tribunal. We determined that no member of the House of Commons should appear before an election judge, because the election judge had to report to the House & therefore the barrister practising before him would be practising before the same tribunal of which he was a member (LORD JAMES).—Re KINROSS (LORD), [1905] A. #### PART IX. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 5.—A.

q. Preliminary objection—Qualification of petitioner.]—Resp., on the opening of the case, charged that petitioner was a candidate at the election, & as such candidate was guilty of corrupt practices, & therefore disqualified to be a petitioner. The judge, without deciding whether resp. had the right to attack the qualification of petitioner, allowed the evidence to be given, but held the same to be insufficient.—Re PRINCE EDWARD ELECTION, ANDERSON v. STRIKER (1871), H. E. C. 45.—CAN.

r. — Burden of proof.]—The petition was met by preliminary objections, in which the sitting member alleged that petitioners were not electors, nor qualified to vote:—Held: the onus probandi was on resp. to support such objections.—MERGANTIC CASE (1883), 8 S. C. R. 169.—CAN.

s. — Delay in filing—Must be considered first.]—Preliminary objections to an election petition under 37 Vict. c. 10 (D), though presented after the expiration of five days from the service of the petition, are not void but at most irregular, & while they remain on the files of the ct. the petition is not at issue, & there can be no examination of the parties.—Re BOTHWELL CASE (1882), 9 P. R. 485.—CAN.

t. — Order of court—No appealable.]—No appeal lay under 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 48, from a judgment dismissing an election petition on preliminary objections.—CHARLEVOIX CASE, BRASSARD v. LANGEVIN (1878), 2 S. C. R. 319.—CAN.

e. Conduct of petitioner at election—When court may examine.]—Except where there are recriminatory charges against the unsuccessful candidate, or for the purpose of declaring petitioner's vote void on a scrutiny, the conduct of a petitioner at an election cannot be inquired into, & in this case there is no distinction between a candidate-petitioner & a voter-petitioner.—Re DUFFERIN CASE (1879), H. E. C. 529; 4 A. R. 420.—CAN.

f. Power of court to adjourn.]—In a statute regulating the procedure upon a contested election, it was provided that the judge "shall adjourn from day to day, until he has pronounced his final judgment":—Held: the provision was directory only, & its non-observance did not vitiate the judge's decision.—McMICKEN v. FONSECA (1890), 6 Man. L. R. 370.—CAN.

g. — — — — —.]—The ct. has power to adjourn the trial of an election petition, & such power may be exercised on the day of the trial, the case having been called, & after preliminary objections by counsel for resp. have been heard but no actual evidence led.—Re MOOSE JAW, [1922] 3 W. W. R. 328; 69 D. L. R. 211.—CAN.

h. Joinder of petitions—Discretion of court.]—R. S. C. c. 9, s. 30, provides that two or more petitions relating to the same election or return shall be bracketed together & tried as one petition, but shall stand in the list where the last presented would have stood if it had been the only one, "unless the ct. otherwise orders":—Held: the words "unless the ct. otherwise orders," make it a matter of judicial discretion to try the petitions separately or together.—VAUDREUIL CASE (1893), 22 S. C. R. 1.—CAN.

k. Amendment of petition at trial.]—At the trial of an election petition based on bribery, petitioner asked for leave to amend by setting up that the election was void on the ground that the list of voters used at the election was compiled & signed by an unauthorised official, this fact having been discovered only after the commencement of the trial:—Held: the amendment must be refused.—MARTIN v. DEANE, NORTH YALE CASE (1899), 7 B. C. R. 128.—CAN.

n. Change of venue.]—When a rule of court has been issued under Controverted Elections Act, appointing a place for the trial not within the constituency the election for which is in question, the judge by whom the petition is being tried has no power to adjourn, for the further hearing of the cause, from the place named in the rule of court to a place within such constituency.—*Re SOUTH GREY ELECTION, HUNTER v. o. — — — — —.]—A number of voters were bribed by persons whose agency was clearly established.

A system of intimidation & violence was organised & carried out for months previous to, & during the election; such intimidation was continued in the borough from the time of the election down to & during the trial of the election petition, & the venue was in consequence changed under the power given by Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, s. 11 (11).—SLIGO (BOROUGH) CASE (1869), 1 O'M. & H. 300.—IR.

I do not think it was ever intended to give him a separate locus standi. There may be cases where witnesses are allowed to leave the box without being cross-examined, & where the ct. may think that in the public interest they ought to be cross-examined. #### PART IX. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 5.—E.

a. Must be proved by direct evidence—Petitioner an incompetent witness.—The affidavit of the relator in support of the objections may be sufficient to obtain the writ, but he is incompetent as a witness under 16 Vict. c. 19, s. 1, & to establish the case at the trial some other evidence is required.—R. v. BECKWITH (1854), 1 P. R. 278.—CAN.

b. Beyond reasonable doubt.—Before subjecting a candidate to the penalty of disqualification, the judge should feel well assured, beyond all possibility of mistake, that the offence charged is established. If there is an honest conflict of testimony as to the offence charged, or if acts or language are reasonably susceptible of two interpretations one innocent & the other culpable, the judge is to take care not to adopt the culpable interpretation unless, after the most careful consideration, he is convinced that in view of all the circumstances it is the only one which the evidence warrants his adopting as the true one.—*Re WELLAND ELECTION, BUCHNER v. #### E. Proof of Petitioner's Case.

1363. Fact of election—Need not be proved.—COVENTRY CASE, BERRY v. EATON & HILL, No. 708, ante.

1364. Must be proved by direct evidence—Not by cross-examination.—(1) Petitioner must prove his case by direct evidence, & cannot rely upon something which he may extract from a witness in cross-examination. Failing to do this he may be dealt with as if nonsuited.

(2) Violence & intimidation to avoid an election must be brought to bear on the voters generally, & must be of such a nature as would induce men of ordinary nerve & courage to abstain from exercising their right to vote. It being proved by the evidence of pugilists that they were hired to come into the town before the day of polling, & that before that day they assaulted two or three persons who were not voters:—Held: to be no evidence of intimidation or violence to avoid the election.

(3) If a man who is an agent of a candidate discovers a voter who is out of work & in distressed circumstances & promises to get him some employment, it must be clearly shown that he did so with a corrupt intention & not from motives of pity, in order to bring the act within Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1354 (c. 102), s. 2.

(4) To induce a judge to allow an amendment of particulars by the addition of names to the list each charge constitutes in effect a separate indictment, & if a judge on the evidence in one case dismisses the charge, resp. cannot be placed in a worse position because a number of charges are advanced in each of which the judge arrives at a similar conclusion.—*Re MESKOKA ELECTION, STARRATT v. e. Admission by respondent.—At the trial resp. admitted that there was evidence capable of being produced which would have the effect of avoiding the election under R. S. of persons bribed there must be a strong affidavit of the fact that the cases have just been discovered, & a summons must be taken out for the purpose.

(5) Unquestionably some person did pay the rates of a number of voters. I am strongly of opinion that there is no evidence whatever to show that [resp.] had anything to do with the payment of these rates, & I may further say that if there were any evidence as to who paid the rates, I should expect still further evidence to bring it within [Representation Act, 1867, s. 49]. The rates were paid obviously to enable voters to be registered & for the purposes of the Act, it would have to have been established that this payment was made corruptly & in order to influence the votes of the men whose rates were so paid (MARTIN, B.).—CHELTENHAM CASE, GARDNER v. I. Scrutiny.

1448. Points reserved for decision—Need not be adjudicated upon—If immaterial to result.]—NORTHALLERTON CASE, JOHNS v. HUTTON*, No. 731, ante.

1449. Scrutiny may be persisted in—By unseated respondent.]—(1) A petition alleged that resp. was "by himself & other persons on his behalf, guilty of bribery, treating, & undue influence, before, during, & after the said election, whereby he was & is incapacitated to serve in the present Parliament," & that the election & return were null & void. There was no allegation of bribery by agents:—Held: the term "other persons on his behalf" included every person for whom the candidate was responsible & under the above clause it was competent to petitioner to go into any act of bribery by resp. himself, & further to go into any acts of bribery by any person for whom in law he was responsible, whether that person were an agent directly appointed by resp., or an agent by virtue of the construction which has been put on the Corrupt Practices Acts.

(2) The relation between a candidate and his agent is more that of master & servant than of principal & agent: & as a master is responsible for an act of negligence on the part of his servant, so a candidate is responsible for the act of his agent, although done in violation of explicit instructions.

(3) Evidence was given to show that between half-past three & four o'clock on the polling day a number of voters who had been previously in treaty with the agent of petitioner, issued from a publichouse, & in a state of intoxication voted for resp.; & to show further that they had received a sovereign each from one H. By evidence accepted as satisfactory it was proved that H. canvassed with a son of resp., & that upon the afternoon of the polling day he went to the said publichouse & brought up the voters. It was further proved that between half-past three & four o'clock on that day 504 votes were polled for resp.:—Held: H. was an agent of resp., & it was not open to the ct. to doubt that the great majority of the voters polling for resp. between the hours named were bribed.

(4) There was a recriminatory case against petitioner claiming the seat, & a claim for a scrutiny on the part of petitioner. The recriminatory case & the scrutiny were abandoned:—Held: resp. must bear the costs of petitioner relating to the recrimination, & petitioner must bear the costs of resp. relating to the claim for a scrutiny; the ct. will not regard vexation as an element to be considered in the apportionment of costs.

(5) Votes given for a candidate after an act of bribery committed by him or on his behalf are not null & void, but merely unavailable for the purpose of his election, his status as a candidate being annihilated by the act of bribery. The votes remain as good to be struck off by the party claiming the seat.

(6) Although unseated for bribery a resp. has a locus standi on a scrutiny for the purpose of attempting to defeat the claim of petitioner to the seat.

(7) The law regards a voter who is bribed in the same manner as it regards a briber. The voter

k. — Whether appeal lies from order.]—One of the judges who tried the petition made a ruling that in cases of objection to votes on the ground that the persons who voted were under the age of twenty-one years or were aliens, although their names were on the voters' lists, he would receive evidence to show minority or alienage, notwithstanding Voters' Lists Act declaring that upon a scrutiny the voters' lists shall be final & conclusive:—Held: no appeal lay from such ruling.—Re PORT ARTHUR & RAINY RIVER PROVINCIAL ELECTION (No. 3), PRESTON v. KENNEDY (1906), 13 O. L. R. 17; 8 O. W. R. 608.—CAN.

m. Theft of papers from court—Scrutiny useless—Costs divided.]—During the progress of a scrutiny ballot papers, counterfoils, & a voters' list were stolen from the ct., which had the effect of rendering the proceedings in the scrutiny useless. In disposing of the costs the ct. ordered that, in the circumstances, each party must bear his own costs of the scrutiny.—Re LINCOLN ELECTION, PAWLING v. RYKERT (1879), H. E. C. 489.—CAN.

n. Duty of judge.]—On an appeal under Saskatchewan Election Act, the judge's duty is to review the decisions of the deputy returning officer & district ct. judge, & in recounting the ballots certify that which in his opinion the deputy returning officer ought to have done, but in so doing it is not as in the exercise of a judicial discretion but according to fixed principles of law & the directions contained in the statute.—Re MOOSE JAW [1921] 3 W. p. ——An election petition ct. may review & go behind the acts of a returning officer. Therefore, if a returning officer has improperly allowed or disallowed a vote, the election petition ct. will hold a scrutiny & strike off or restore such vote. The fact that the votes were not duly scrutinised will not be sufficient to set aside an election unless the result would have been affected by it. Where, after

On the like application authority was given to the registrar, in any case where he was satisfied that a discrepancy existed between the number of ballot papers appearing from the polling officer's statement to have been placed in the ballot box, & the number marked off as having voted in the marked voters' list, to inspect the counterfoil, & compare the same with the marked voters' list.—*PALMER v. 1507. Effect of decision—Final.—(1) Where an election petition claims the seat for one of the defeated candidates, & the judge on the trial of the petition decides that such candidate was duly elected, the judge's decision is final, & a petition against the return of such candidate cannot subsequently be presented under the provisions of Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (c. 125).

(2) The decision given on [the trial of a petition] is a decision in rem (MONTAGUE SMITH, J.).

(3) If an unsuccessful candidate petitions against a successful one, unless he claims the seat, no recriminatory evidence can be gone into, but only matters incidental to the trial, as stated in sect. 11 [of the Act]. But if the seat is claimed, & the case against the successful candidate fails, he can protect himself by proving his case against the unsuccessful candidate before the scrutiny is gone into as to the number of votes. If the case against him is proved, he can go on with the case against the unsuccessful candidate, though he is deprived of the seat himself. The reason is, that the strong vested interest he has in retaining the seat is a security that he will elicit the truth (WILLES, J.).—TAUNTON CASE, WAYGOOD v. JAMES (1869), L. R. 4 C. 1512. Report to Speaker—Not final & conclusive.—A. was a candidate at an election at which B. was returned. A. having petitioned against his return & claimed the seat, recriminatory charges were made. At the trial of the petition B. was proved guilty of corrupt practices by his agents, & decided by the judge not to have been duly elected, & after some of the matters contained in the recriminatory charges were gone into & not proved, B. withdrew the charge by permission of the judge, & A. then abandoned his claim to the seat, & the judge certified to the House of Commons that B. was not duly elected, & reported, amongst other things, that he believed the election on the part of A. to have been perfectly pure. At the election which ensued A. was returned, & a petition was presented against his return, alleging that he had been guilty of corrupt practices by himself & his agents at the previous election at which B. had been returned, the matters intended to be relied on having been discovered since the former trial. On a rule to strike out these allegations from the petition on the ground that the matters alleged might have been given in evidence in support of the recriminatory charges at the previous trial:—Held: (1) the report of the judge at an election trial is not final & conclusive like his certificate as to the matters contained in it; (2) the present petitioner was entitled to give evidence of the alleged corrupt practices.—NORWICH CASE, STEVENS v. f. Report to Speaker—Effect of—On voters.—The fact of persons having been reported by the judge as guilty of corrupt practices at a former election had not the effect of disqualifying them from voting at a second election. 1521. Indemnity to witnesses—Document disclosed in examination admissible in subsequent proceedings.]—Election Commissioners Act, 1852 (c. 57), s. 8, requires all persons summoned to give evidence before Comrs. appointed to inquire into such practices to attend the Comrs. & answer all questions put by them, & produce all books & documents bearing on the inquiry, "provided always, that no statement made by any person in answer to any question put by such Comr. shall, except in cases of indictment for perjury committed in such answers, be admissible in evidence in any proceeding, civil or criminal":—Held: notwithstanding this proviso, a document already in existence before the time at which a witness is examined before the Comrs., & referred to by him in the course of that examination, was admissible in evidence against him in subsequent proceedings, other than the specified indictment for perjury, if it was otherwise admissible, & was proved by independent evidence abunde.—R. v. Deft. was, afterwards, convicted on a prosecution for bribery, & obtained a rule to stay proceedings under sect. 7:—Held: (1) deft. to entitle him to a certificate must make true answers to all questions; (2) the comrs. had in effect refused to certify that deft.'s answers were true, & the certificate was not such as sect. 7 required, & did not operate as a stay of proceedings.—R. v. 1527 i. a. What costs allowed—Absence of proof of payment.—At the trial of an election petition, & on appeal from the judgment, petitioner, a barrister, appeared in person, but was assisted by a junior counsel. On taxation, the petition having been dismissed, counsel fees were charged, to the first counsel at the trial £500, & to second counsel £150; & on argument of the appeal, to first counsel £150, second counsel £100. The master disallowed fees to the first counsel, but allowed £200 to the second counsel at the trial,

& the £100 on appeal; there being no affidavit of payment or receipt for such fees, though it was called for & insisted upon for resp. On an application for revision:—Held: the fees should not, under the circumstances, have been allowed without proof of payment: no more than £150 should have been taxed for the second counsel at the trial.—*Re NORTH VICTORIA (DOM.), CAMERON v. r. — Interviewing witnesses.—A petition under the Ontario Controverted Elections Act, R. S. 1586. Court of record.—Upon the trial of a petition against the return of a borough councillor under Corrupt Practices (Municipal Elections) Act, 1872 (c. 60), the barrister in delivering judgment said that he found the councillor guilty of personal bribery, & that all the costs of the inquiry were to be borne by him, & made an order in writing for the payment by the councillor of certain costs under sect. 19 of the Act. The written order made no provision for the remuneration & allowances to the barrister & other persons under sect. 22. The Lords Comrs. of the Treasury paid the amount of such remuneration & allowances & certified the payment to the borough treasurer, & required him to repay them the amount out of the borough fund or rates as provided by sect. 22. A rate was accordingly made & levied. The Comrs., afterwards, on receiving from the barrister a letter that he had always intended to visit all the costs upon the councillor, & had said so in giving judgment, cancelled their certificate, & the borough corpn. abandoned their rate & returned the sums levied to the ratepayers. Afterwards the Comrs., finding that the barrister had made no written order for the payment of the remuneration & allowances under sect. 22, issued a fresh certificate requiring the borough treasurer to repay them out of the borough fund or rates the amount of such remuneration & allowances. These facts being raised upon the return to a mandamus commanding the treasurer to repay the Comrs. out of the borough fund or rate, & the corpn. to cause such repayment:—Held: (1) no valid order was made by the barrister for the payment of such allowances & remuneration under sect. 22; (2) the election ct. for the trial of petitions under the Act was by virtue of sect. 14 (5), a ct. of record, & neither the Q. B. Div. nor the Ct. of Appeal on the return to the mandamus could amend the barrister's order so as to make it include the payment of such remuneration & allowances; (3) the act of the Comrs. in certifying was not a judicial act, & they had the power to make the second certificate, & were entitled to a peremptory mandamus compelling the treasurer to repay to them the amount of such remuneration

1587. Whether court has jurisdiction—When candidate duly elected.]—J., a town councillor, whose office would expire on Nov. 1, filed a petition for liquidation on June 29 preceding. His discharge was in due course granted to him on Sept. 29. The town council never made any declaration of the office being void, & J. did not, in fact, act as councillor till after Nov. 1. At the following election, owing to an informality, the candidates were declared not to be duly elected, thereupon the mayor declared the retiring councillors to be re-elected. A rule to the town council to hold a fresh election of councillor in place of J. having been applied for:—Held: (1) J. had never ceased to be councillor owing to the office never being declared void, & a mandamus could not be granted, inasmuch as de facto the office had been full; (2) J. was a retiring councillor within 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 8, & was properly deemed re-elected. Semble: the only remedy in such a case would have been under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, s. 12, by petition to the election ct.—*R. v. 1597. — Some of successful candidates—Though all disqualified.]—(1) An election petition may be presented under Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 87, against some only of the persons returned at a municipal election, although the ground of the petition is one affecting the validity of the election as a whole; & the ct. can on such petition declare the persons so petitioned against not to have been duly elected. The three resps. & six other persons were nominated as candidates to fill four vacancies in the town council of a borough under the above Act. An objection having been made to the nomination papers of H., & three other candidates, not resps., on the ground that they were invalid under Sched. 3, Part II., r. 10, because the persons subscribing the paper in each case had subscribed nomination papers of other candidates, the mayor erroneously held the objection to be good, being of opinion that r. 10 applied to a case where there were several vacancies. The objection to H. was withdrawn; but the three other candidates objected to were prevented from going to the poll, & at the election which was afterwards held, H., & the three resps. were declared duly elected. Upon a petition against the return of resps., to which H. was not a party, it was admitted, that an election of town councillors, where there are several vacancies, is governed by Sched. 3, Part II., r. 3, of the above Act, which provides that the same burgesses may subscribe as many nomination papers as there are vacancies, & that r. 10 does not apply to a case of several vacancies; & it was further admitted that as the objection would have been valid against all the candidates returned, the whole election might have been declared void if H. had been a party to the petition; but it was contended that as he was not before the ct., & therefore, as his election could not be questioned, the return of resps. must stand good:—Held: although the erroneous decision of the mayor affected the validity of the whole election, nevertheless the ct. had power to deal with those candidates returned who were petitioned against, & the return of resps. must be declared void, notwithstanding that the return of H. could not be questioned, he not being a party to the petition.

g. Petition presented between nomination day & election day—Whether premature—Effect of waiver by respondent.]—At an election to fill two vacancies on a rural district council, A., B., & C. were nominated as candidates on Apr. 28, the county council having previously fixed May 27 as the day for election. The returning officer rejected A.'s nomination paper, & on May 15, A. presented a petition to set aside the election of B. & C. B. entered an appearance by solr. on June 25. Notice of trial was served on June 12 for June 25. When the trial came on before the comr., B., without having made any application to the Div. Ct. to stay the proceedings, to dismiss the petition, or for a writ of prohibition, appeared before the commission by counsel, who objected that the petition was premature, having been presented before the date of the election, which, he contended, was May 27, & that the comr. had no jurisdiction to try the case; but cross-examined petitioner's witnesses, & went into evidence on B.'s behalf:—Held: without deciding whether Apr. 28 or May 27 was the day of the election, & assuming the petition to have been presented prematurely, this would not have the effect of nullifying the proceedings, but was an irregularity capable of waiver, & which had been, in fact, waived by B.—Re GRANGE-MELLON CASE, [1909] 2 I. A., induced by B., handed to the officer at the place of voting a nomination paper signed by C., a person entitled to vote, but when asked whether he was the person whose name was signed to the voting paper answered "No":—Held: (1) the offence of personating was complete; (2) a conviction of B. for the offence of inducing A. to personate need not set out the means of inducement; (3) it was not necessary that the conviction should show that the election was duly held.—*R. v. f. Omission of names from voters' list—Form of indictment.]—Deft. was charged that, after having made the list of persons entitled to vote, he in making out the certified list to be delivered to the clerk of the peace of persons entitled to vote, feloniously omitted from the "said list" names which ought not to have been omitted:—Held: (1) the omission charged having been the certified list delivered to the clerk of the peace the words "said list," referring to the words "the certified list, delivered to the clerk of the peace," were a sufficient description to identify the list intended; shown explicitly how & in what respects these names should have been on the list.—R. v. SWITZER (1864), 14 C. P. 470.—CAN.

h. ——— By agent—Punishment of agent.]—The election having been victed upon an indictment which alleged that at an election for members of Parliament for the borough of Ipswich holden on Nov. 25, 1885, he was guilty of corrupt practices against the form of the statute in that case made & provided. It was proved at the trial that he had promised money to two voters to induce them to vote. After verdict the objection was taken by prisoner's counsel that the indictment was bad, because it did not sufficiently describe the nature of the offence with which prisoner was charged:—Held: (1) if the indictment were defective, the defect was cured after verdict; (2) the indictment was defective, & on application before verdict might have been quashed.—R. v. STROULGER (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 327; 55 L. J. M. C. 137; 55 L. T. 122; 51 J. P. 278; 34 W. R. 719; 2 T. L. R. 731; 16 Cox, C. C. 85, C. C. R.

1646. Who may be indicted—Not limited company.—A limited co. cannot be committed for trial on an indictment. A limited co. was charged before a justice with an offence under Representation of the People Act, 1918 (c. 64), s. 34, & a servant of the co. was charged with aiding & abetting the co. therein. Both defts. were ostensibly committed for trial under Grand Juries (Suspension) Act, 1917 (c. 4), s. 1 (2), which was then in force. An indictment was then presented against both defts. in which they were respectively charged as aforesaid, & they were both thereupon tried & convicted. On appeal by both defts. to the Ct. of Criminal Appeal:—Held: (1) as against deft. co. the indictment & the conviction must be quashed, inasmuch as a limited co. could not be committed for trial; (2) although the other deft. was charged with aiding & abetting deft. co., it did not on that account follow that the indictment & conviction must be quashed as against that deft. also.—*R. v. 1658. What evidence sufficient—Before grand jury.—On an indictment for bribery the trial was, on the application of the prosecutor, postponed to the next Assizes, on account of the absence of material evidence.

It is not necessary that the case for the prosecution should be completed previously to going before the grand jury; it is enough if a case of suspicion can be shown. To require all the evidence to be produced before the grand jury would, in many cases, put the prosecution to a very needless expense (POLLOCK, C.B.).—R. v. MOBBS (1860), 2 F. & F. 18.

1860. False answer to question as to qualification.]—A. was indicted under Representation Act, 1832 (c. 45), for giving a false answer to the question whether he had the same qualification to vote as that for which he was registered. A. had occupied a house at the time of the registration, for which he was on the register as a voter, but he had left it before the election, & the landlord's agent had, before the election, given the key of it to B., who had put horses into the stable & beer into the cellar, but B.'s rent did not commence till after the election:—Held: in the absence of evidence of the determination of the tenancy of A., the indictment could not be supported.—R. v. HARRIS (1835), 7 C. & P. 253, N. P.

1861. — Bonâ fide belief in truth of answer.]

(1) A person who is registered as a voter for Members of Parliament for a county, as renting £50 a year & upwards, is not entitled to vote if between the registration & the election he gives up that property, even though he rents instead of it other property at a greater rent, & coming equally within the description contained in the register. To entitle him to vote the identity of the qualification must continue. A. rented a house & premises at Turnham Green at more than £50 a year, & for this he was registered as a voter for Middlesex, the register stating the qualification to be £50 per annum & upwards, at Turnham Green. Between the registration & the election A. gave up this house, & took, at a higher rent, another house, which was also situate at Turnham Green:—Held: he had no right to vote at the election.

(2) If a person knew that at the time of polling he gave a false answer as to his having the same qualification as at the time of registration, it would be no defence to an indictment for that offence that he acted under the advice of an electioneering committee; but if, possessing property of equal value with that for which he was registered, he acted bonâ fide, & under an impression that he was entitled to vote, he ought to be acquitted.—R. v. DODSWORTH (1837), 8 C. & P. 218; 2 Mood. & R. 72; 2 Jur. 131, N. P. Annotation.—Generally, Mentd. R. v. Bowler (1842), Car. & M. 559.

1862. — Specific qualification not read to voter.]—A voter having changed his residence since the last registration, cannot be indicted under Representation Act, 1832, for swearing that he has still the same qualification, if the sheriff's deputy should omit, at the time the voter tenders his vote, to read over to him the specific qualification from the register.—R. v. LUCY (1842), Car. & M. 511, N. P.

1863. ——J.—An indictment for wilfully making a false answer to the third question put to a party tendering his vote at an election of Members of Parliament, in pursuance of Representation Act, 1832, s. 58, had been removed by certiorari into the Ct. of Queen's Bench. At the trial several objections were taken, grounded on the omission of proper allegations in the indictment:—Held: being on the record, they should be left to the decision of the ct. above.

In the register of voters of a borough, consisting of several districts or divisions, the names of the voters were arranged accordingly. The name of deft. appeared in the division headed thus:

"Penkhull, etc., No. —, Samuel Ellis. A house in Eldon Place," Eldon Place being the only place of that name in the borough:—Held: the question, "Have you the same qualification, etc., viz. a house in Eldon Place," was a sufficient specification of the particulars of the qualification in the register.—R. v. BOWLER, R. v. ELLIS (1842), Car. & M. 559, 564; 6 Jur. 287, N. P.

1865. Attestation of voting papers.]—Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), directs that the votes for the election of members of local boards shall be given by means of voting papers & enacts by sect. 25 "that if any voter cannot write, he shall affix his mark at the foot of a voting paper in the presence of a witness, who shall attest & write the name of the voter against the same, as well as the initials of such voter against the name of every candidate for whom the voter intends to vote." Defts., who took an active part on behalf of some of the candidates, went to the houses of voters, who were marksmen, to assist in filling up the voting papers, & having obtained the express or implied consent of voters or members of their families, filled up the papers with the proper names & marks of the voters, & put their own names as attesting witnesses without obtaining the actual signatures or marks of the parties themselves:—Held: this did not constitute the offence of forgery at common law.

Qu.: whether the irregularity amounted to an indictable misdemeanour.—R. v. HARTSHORN (1853), 6 Cox, C. C. 395, N. P.

1866. Fabrication of voting paper—Proof that election pending.]—On an information against D. for fabricating a voting paper at an election of guardians:—Held: it was not necessary to produce the original draft notice of election to prove that an election was pending, but proof that notices were printed & acted on was enough.—DAVIES v. STONE (1871), 36 J. P. 390.

1867. — Who is party aggrieved.]—At an election for a member of the local board at W., applt. & M. were the only candidates; M. was declared to be elected, he having obtained 94 & applt. 89. Applt., without the consent of the A.-G., preferred an information under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), sched. II., r. 69, against resps., charging them with fabricating in part the voting paper of D., a person entitled to three votes at the election; but the justices dismissed it on the ground that applt. was not a "party aggrieved" within sect. 253 of the above Act, & therefore, that the consent of the A.-G. was requisite:—Held: the dismissal of the information was wrong, for applt. was a party aggrieved within the meaning of that statute.—VERDIN v. WRAY (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 608; 46 L. J. M. C. 170; 35 L. T. 942; 41 J. P. 484; 25 W. R. 274, D. C.

1868. ——J.—At an election of guardians, W., at the request of the voter's wife, who informed him that she had her husband's authority to fill up the voting paper for a particular candidate, caused her to put her mark, & he put the initials of the voter opposite the candidate's name & attested the paper, which the returning officer treated as the mark & vote of the voter himself:—Held: there was no evidence to justify the conviction of W. for unlawfully fabricating a voting paper within Poor Law Amendment Act, 1851 (c. 105), s. 3.—WICKHAM v. PHILLIPS (1883), 47 J. P. 612, D. C.

1685. — Power of court to determine place of trial.]—The comr. for the trial of municipal election petitions ordered certain persons, prosecuted before him for a corrupt practice committed at a municipal election in Nottingham, to be prosecuted on indictment for the offence at the ensuing assizes at Derby:—Held: (1) the comr. had jurisdiction to order the trial at Derby; (2) his order was sufficient without describing the corrupt practice; (3) the Derbyshire grand jury could find, & the judge of assize had jurisdiction to try, the indictment; (4) "Derbyshire to wit" in the margin of the indictment was sufficient, although the body of it disclosed offences in Nottingham only; (5) the words "a corrupt practice" in the comr.'s order were reasonably interpreted "some corrupt practice," & the prosecution were not precluded from preferring a number of charges of bribery in the indictment.—*R. v. PART X. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

r. Against returning officer—Refusal of votes tendered by qualified voters.]

—At an election six persons tendered their votes & offered to take the necessary oaths to entitle them to vote. The deputy returning officer, refused the vote of one because he could not produce his title deeds, & of the others because they had no houses on their lands. Four of those rejected offered to take the oath prescribed, & described the property on which they claimed to vote. In an action for penalties for refusing the votes:—Held: having refused the tendered votes of those who had sufficiently shown their right to vote, he had refused to perform an obligation or formality & was liable to penalties.—WALTON v. APJOHN (1884), 5 O. R. 65.—CAN.

Meaning of "wilful" refusal.]—In an action against a deputy returning officer to recover a penalty under Ontario Election Act, s. 186, for an alleged wilful refusal to allow pltf. to vote:—Held: the word "wilful" in the sect. means "perverse" or "malicious": & although pltf. was deprived of his vote, by the refusal of deft. to allow him to deposit a "straight" ballot, & there was thereby a contravention of the Act, yet, as deft. honestly believed pltf. was not qualified, & believed in his own power to withhold the ballot, the action failed.—JOHNSON v. ALLEN (1895), 26 O. R. 550.—CAN.

t. — Breach of duty not affecting election.]—Pltf. was a candidate for the office of reeve, but was not elected. He brought this action under Consolidated Municipal Act, 1883,

s. 167, against a deputy returning officer to recover the penalty for a contravention of the Act. There was no allegation that pltf. lost his election, or any votes, or suffered any personal grievance by the acts complained of. On demurrer to the statement of claim:—Held: (1) pltf. was not, by reason only of his being a candidate, a "person aggrieved" within s. 167, & he was not entitled to recover; (2) an action for the penalty under that sect. lay only for a breach of ss. 118–166 of the Act.—*ATKINS v. Against overseers—Inserting names of persons not entitled to votes.—In an action against an overseer for a penalty under Representation Act, 1832, s. 76, for wilfully inserting in the list of voters the names of persons not entitled to vote, it is not essential that deft. should have acted from any corrupt motive, it is sufficient if he has acted wilfully.

It is the duty of the overseer to make out the list, & he may ask such questions as he pleases of the collectors of assessed taxes, to enable him to do so; but if his notice is distinctly drawn to particular names, he has the opportunity of correcting his list at the time, & he is bound to do so (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—TARR v. M'GAHEY (1836), 7 C. & P. 380, N. P.

1694. —[—The parish of M., in the borough of K., was divided into nine districts called wards, for & from each of which, under a local Act, an overseer was appointed; & the nine were, by the Act, made overseers of the parish. Nine lists, each containing the names of the burgesses of one only of the wards, were delivered in severally by the particular overseers appointed for & from the respective wards, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 15. Eight of the lists were signed, each by the overseer of the particular ward; no overseer signed the list of any but his own ward; the ninth list was not signed at all.—Held: each of the overseers of the eight wards, as well as the overseer of the ninth, was liable, in a separate action, to the penalty under sect. 48 of the Act.—KING v. SHARE (1842), 3 Q. B. 31; 3 Gal. & Dav. 453; 11 L. J. Q. B. 163; 6 J. P. 296; 6 Jur. 730; 114 E. R. 419.

e. —Sufficiency of particulars.—Pltf. sought to recover a penalty from deft. in respect of an offence against Nova Scotia Elections Act, the ground alleged being a promise by deft. of valuable consideration to a male person entitled to vote at an election in order to induce such person to vote at such election, etc. In response to a demand by deft. for particulars of the name, residence, & occupation of the person referred to, the place where the offence was committed, & the date of the making of the promise & the giving of the valuable consideration alleged, pltf. furnished particulars charging deft. with having promised valuable consideration to one or other of twelve persons named:—Held: the particulars given were insufficient.—PATRICKIN v. COVERT (1907), 42 N. S. R. 68.—CAN.

f. —Uncorroborated testimony of briber—Sole evidence.—In an action for a penalty for offering a bribe to a voter, the only evidence against deft. was the uncorroborated testimony of pltf., who was the party sought to be bribed. Pltf. admitted having entered into such negotiation with deft. as would have subjected himself to an action for a penalty. It having been objected that deft. could not be convicted upon the above evidence, inasmuch as pltf. was to be regarded in the light of an accomplice:—Held: (1) assuming an analogy to exist between criminal cases & penal actions, there was no inflexible rule of law which rendered illegal a conviction obtained upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice; (2) no such analogy existed between criminal cases & actions for penalties, & the case was rightly submitted to the jury, upon the sole evidence of pltf.—McCLORY v. WRIGHT (1860), 10 C. L. R. 514.—IR.

O'BRIEN* (1896), 27 O. R. 710.—CAN.

h. —Against polling agent—Voting without having taken qualification oath.—Deft. obtained registration as a city voter, not knowing that his name was still on the voters' list for the township in which he had formerly resided. Afterwards he agreed to act as agent at the poll for one of the candidates for the electoral district in which the township was situated, at a polling place other than that for the sub-division in which he had formerly resided & received from the returning officer a certificate entitling him to vote at the place where he was to be stationed. He acted as agent there, took the oath of secrecy, & voted there. No other oath than that of secrecy was administered or tendered or discussed. He was not aware that a non-resident could not vote:—Held: deft. was not liable to the penalty imposed by Ontario Election Act, R. S. O. 1897, c. 9, s. 168, for voting knowing that he had no right to vote, but was liable to the penalty imposed by s. 9 (5) of the Act, for not having taken the oath of qualification required to be taken by agents voting under certificate.—SMITH v. CAREY (1903), 23 C. L. T. 93; 5 O. L. R. 203; 2 O. W. R. 13.—CAN.

k. —Against enumerator—Wrongfully striking off name from voters' list.—An enumerator appointed to make up a list of the voters is an "officer" or "clerk" within the meaning of Dominion Elections Act, s. 249, & is liable for the penalty there provided for a wilful act in violation of the Act if he without good reason strikes a person's name from the voters' list thereby depriving that person of his right to vote. The admission by the enumerator that the person's name was on the voters' list & that he had struck it off, is sufficient to prove such fact without the list being produced.—*CASTLE v. p. — Security for costs.—When ordered.—In an action for penalties, pltf. made an affidavit in reply to affidavits made on behalf of deft., who sought to obtain an order for security for costs, to the effect that he was a person in solvent circumstances:—Held: no case can be made for an order for security for costs when pltf. is perfectly solvent.—KILMARTIN v. WALSH (1858), 12 Ir. Jur. 95.—IR.

q. ——In a personal action brought to recover penalties the ct. will order pltf. to give security for costs, when it is sworn, & not contradicted, that pltf. is a pauper & that he has been put forward by third parties for an ulterior purpose, & that deft. has a good & substantial defence on the merits.—MCLESTER v. QUINN (1859), 10 I. C. L. R. 358; 12 Ir. Jur. 94.—IR.

s. Joined in writ with claim for damages.—Pleadings confined to damage claim.—Right to amend after discovery given.—The writ of summons was indorsed with a claim to recover penalties & for damages for wrongfully depriving pltf. of his vote. The statement of claim did not assert any claim to penalties, but was confined to the common law cause of action. The statement of defence denied the allegations of the statement of claim. Pltf. obtained the usual discovery from deft., without objection. After such discovery, & when the action was ready for trial, pltf. applied for leave to amend the statement of claim by adding a claim for the penalties mentioned in the indorsement of the writ:—Held: deft. in an action for penalties might have successfully resisted an attempt to compel him to submit to an examination for discovery, & pltf., having by proceeding at common law obtained from deft. the discovery which he could not have had in an action for penalties, & having allowed more than a year to elapse

Pltf., an alderman of a borough, made a composition with his creditors, but executed no composition deed; nor were any composition proceedings taken under Debtors Act, 1869 (c. 62). He had, however, executed a bill of sale, duly registered, to a person not a creditor, to secure a sum of money advanced by him to meet the amount of the composition. A meeting of the corp. of the borough having been summoned by notice for the purpose of declaring the office held by pltf. void under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 52, & Debtors Act, 1869 (c. 62), s. 21, & electing a successor:—Held: an injunction would be granted, at the instance of pltf., restraining the corp. from proceeding under their notice, on the ground that, having regard to the express words of the above sect., pltf. had not become disqualified from holding office; that, under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), the ct. had jurisdiction to grant the injunction; & that, having regard to sect. 34 of the same Act, the action, which claimed the injunction only, had been properly brought in the Ch. Comrs. constituted an electricity district & formulated a scheme providing for the incorporation of a joint electricity authority which purported to be representative of the authorised undertakers, both local authorities & electricity cos., in the district so constituted. The scheme provided that the joint authority should at its first meeting appoint two committees, viz. a local authority committee & a co. committee, & assigned to each of these committees definite & separate portions of the electricity district, & delegated separate powers & duties to each committee in respect of the portion assigned. The comrs. began to hold a local inquiry with a view to making an order embodying the scheme. Certain cos. affected by the scheme applied for writs of prohibition & certiorari on the ground that the scheme was ultra vires in so far as it compelled the joint authority to appoint the two committees & delegate to them powers & duties of the joint authority:—Held: the scheme was ultra vires, & a writ of prohibition should issue prohibiting the comrs. from proceeding with the further consideration of the scheme, notwithstanding that an order embodying the scheme could not come into operation until confirmed by the Minister of Transport & approved by resolutions of the Houses of Parliament.—*R. v. ## Part II.—Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of Undertakers.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

4. Generation & distribution of current—Provision of works—Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (c. 56), s. 11.]—A corpn. obtained a provisional order for the supply of electrical energy within their district. They entered into an agreement with deft. co. which provided that the co. should construct all necessary works for the manufacture, supply, & distribution of electricity within the area or supply, & should manufacture, distribute, & supply electricity therein; carry on the business & indemnify the corpn. against all expenses; & that nothing in the agreement was to be deemed to transfer to the co. any powers which the corpn. were by the order or by Electric Lighting Acts, 1882 (c. 56), & 1888 (c. 12), prohibited from transferring. No application was made to the Board of Trade to sanction this agreement. The co. did not construct the works, & the corpn. brought an action against them for damages for breach of contract:—Held: the first part of Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (c. 56), s. 11, only authorised a corpn. which had obtained a provisional order for the supply of electricity to enter into contracts for the construction of works & for the supply to itself of electricity; the second part of the sect. prohibited corpns., & also cos. & persons who had obtained orders, from transferring to other persons or divesting themselves of any legal powers given to them, or any legal liabilities imposed on them by the Act or the orders, without the consent of the Board of Trade; the agreement was on its true construction a transfer of the duties & liabilities of pltf. corpn. to the deft. co.; it was therefore prohibited by the sect. & could not be enforced.—SUDBURY CORPN. v. EMPIRE ELECTRIC LIGHT & POWER CO., LTD., [1905] 2 Ch. 104; 74 L. J. Ch. 442; 93 L. T. 630; 69 J. P. 321; 53 W. R. 684; 3 L. G. R. 822.

5. — Limitation of powers—Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (c. 56), s. 10.]—A municipal corpn. under the above Act, & a provisional order of the Board of Trade were the undertakers for the supply of electricity within their area, & purporting to exercise their statutory powers, supplied every description of electrical fittings & apparatus to consumers of electricity :—Held : (1) the statutory powers of the undertakers ceased with the delivery of electrical energy at the terminals, i.e., the meter, on the consumer's premises & was complete at that point, & the general power to do "all such acts & things as were necessary & incidental to such supply" was limited to the generation & delivery of such supply; (2) the analogy of the supply of gas under the Gasworks Clauses Acts, 1847 (c. 15), & 1871 (c. 41), did not apply to the supply of electricity under Electric Lighting Acts; (3) the supply of electrical fittings & apparatus for the use of consumers was ultra vires the corp., & an injunction was granted accordingly.—A.-G. v. LEICESTER CORPN., [1910] 2 Ch. 359; 80 L. J. Ch. 21; 103 L. T. 214; 74 J. P. 385; 26 T. L. R. 568; 9 L. G. R. 185.

8. —.]—(1) To carry on the trade or business of providing, selling, or letting on hire electric lamps, electric heating apparatus, electric motors, or other electric fittings, appliances, or apparatus, is ultra vires of a local authority. (2) A reduction by a local authority in the price for electricity in respect of houses electrically lighted throughout constitutes an "undue preference" within Electric Light Act, 1882 (c. 56), ss. 19, 20.—A.-G. v. ILFORD URBAN COUNCIL (1915), 84 L. J. Ch. 860; 13 L. G. R. 441; 79 J. P. Jo. 63.

9. — Power conferred by special Act—Area in which power exercisable.]—A.-G. v. SHEFFIELD CORPN., No. 10, post.

10. — Limitation of apparatus supplied.]—A municipal corp., incorporated by Royal Charter, who were the undertakers for the supply of electricity within the city of S., & who also were further empowered by a private Act to supply but not to manufacture electric motors & things for cooking, heating, & ventilating & for motive power & to fix, "connecting with supply mains," & to repair such apparatus, were alleged to have acted beyond their powers, firstly, within their area in installing & repairing electric light, bells, fittings, & wires in buildings, & opening a depot for the sale of electrical accessories; & secondly, outside their area by supplying motors & other electric accessories, installing fittings & wires in houses of non-consumers of their electric energy, & executing repairs to such motors fittings, & installations :—Held : defts. had no power to carry on the trades or businesses mentioned; the further powers conferred on defts. were not exercisable outside their limits of supply, & extended only to electric motors & apparatus used for the purposes specified in the private Act.—A.-G. v. SHEFFIELD CORPN. (1912), 106 L. T. 367; 76 J. P. 185; 28 T. L. R. 266; 56 Sol. Jo. 326; 10 L. G. R. 301.

11. — Acquisition of trading concern.]—A corp., purchased an electrical undertaking, which included a fittings department, & by the special Act the whole of the undertaking was vested in the corp. On taking over the undertaking the corp. continued the business of supplying electrical fittings for the use of consumers. In an action asking for a declaration that the corp. had no power to carry on such business & to restrain them from carrying on such business :—Held : the whole of the undertaking being vested in the corp. by their special Act, they were entitled to carry on the business as it existed at the date of the purchase.—A.-G. v. LIVERPOOL CORPN., [1922] 1 Ch. 211; 91 L. J. Ch. 262; 126 L. T. 692; 38 T. L. R. 101; 20 L. G. R. 547.

SECT. 3.—COMPETITION BY UNAUTHORISED UNDERTAKERS.

12. Restriction of competition—Supply of electricity to tramway in adjoining district—Supplier & consumer same body—Electric Lighting Act, 1909 (c. 34), s. 23.]—By the above sect. : "Where in any area a local authority, co., or person is authorised to supply electricity under Act of Parliament or under licence or Provisional Order granted under the Electric Lighting Acts, it shall not, after the passing of this Act, be lawful for any other local authority, co., or person to commence to supply or distribute electricity within the same area unless such supply or distribution is authorised by Act of Parliament, or by licence or Provisional Order granted in terms of the Electric Lighting Acts : Provided that this sect. shall not prevent any co. or person from affording a supply of electrical energy to any other co. or person where the business of the co. or person affording the supply is not primarily that of the supply of electrical energy to consumers . . ."

In 1901 an urban council, being authorised by an Electric Lighting Order to supply electrical energy within their district, transferred their powers under the order to an electric supply co. on the terms that the co. should generate all electrical energy required for public & private lighting & for working tramways in the district, & the council agreed not to consent to the supply of electrical energy by any other corp., co. or person in the district. The tramways of the district formed one continuous line with the electric tramways belonging to an adjoining borough. By an Extension Order of 1911 the urban district was incorporated with the borough, & the borough corp. was substituted for the urban council, but all contracts entered into by or with the council were to remain in force against or in favour of the corp. In 1921 the corp. ceased to take electrical energy for the tramways of the added area from the supply co. &

PART II. SECT. 3.

a. Restriction of competition—Local undertaking—Powers provincial legislature.]—Under a bye-law of H. City Council, afterwards declared valid by the applts.' incorporating Act, 58 Vict. c. 69, applts. obtained an exclusive right of establishing a system of electric lighting for a term of years in H., & thereupon sued to revoke a licence previously granted by the council to resps. for a similar purpose :—Held : the Act, passed in favour of a purely local undertaking was within the exclusive competence of the provincial legislature, & none the less so because it excluded for a limited time the competition of rival traders.—HULL ELECTRIC CO. v. OTTAWA ELECTRIC CO., [1902] A. C. 237.—CAN.

Sect. 3.—Competition by unauthorised undertakers.Sects. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 & 9: Sub-sects. 1 & 2.]*

themselves provided the electrical energy for the whole of the borough tramways:—Held: (1) the provision of electrical energy by the corp'n. for tramways worked by themselves was a "supply" within the sect., & the corp'n. were acting in violation of the sect.; (2) the agreement of 1901, as preserved by the Extension Order of 1911, prohibited the corp'n. from themselves providing electrical energy in competition with the supply co.—*SOUTHPORT CORPN. v. Acquisition of houses of "labouring classes."—See Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1903 (c. 39), ss. 3, 16, Sched.

13. Acquisition for purposes other than undertaking—Ultra vires.—A local authority, acting under the powers given to them by a provisional order duly confirmed which incorporated Electric Lighting Acts, purchased land by agreement for the purpose of erecting thereon works for generating electricity. Before the purchase they had determined to adopt a scheme, proposed by their engineer, under which they were to erect a refuse destructor on part of the land & use the surplus heat produced by the consumption of refuse in aid of their machinery for generating electricity. The council had power under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), to acquire land for the purposes of erecting a refuse destructor:—Held: the council had acquired the land in exercise of their powers under Electric Lighting Acts, & not under Public Health Act; the erection & use of the refuse destructor was not ancillary to the supply of electricity, & was therefore ultra vires & must be restrained.—A.-G. v. PONTYPRIDD URBAN COUNCIL, [1906] 2 Ch. 257; 75 L. J. Ch. 578; 95 L. T. 224; 70 J. P. 394; 22 T. L. R. 576; 50 Sol. Jo. 525; 4 L. G. R. 791, C. A.

14. Whether "works" or "manufactory"—Right to extract water from canal—Local Act—5 Will. 4, c. xxxiv., s. 82.—By sect. 82 of the above Act [Birmingham Canals Navigation], it was provided that all persons & corp'ns. who "now possess" any steam engines situate [upon land] within 200 yards of the said canals, & used for . . . any manufactories . . . or other works . . . or who might be disposed to erect any fire or steam engines thereon for carrying on the above manufactories . . . [might] make a communication . . . between the water of the said canals . . . & draw water sufficient to supply the said engines.

Pltfs. were owners of land within 200 yards of one of the canals in question, & were erecting thereon a large generating station for the generation & supply of electrical energy for lighting & power purposes, the station being fitted with steam engines, which they proposed to supply with water from the canal:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to take water for the contemplated purposes, on the grounds (1) that the expression "above manufactories" in the sect. meant the existing manufactories referred to, & did not include future manufactories; (2) having regard to the context, a generating station was not a manufactory within the sect.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. BIRMINGHAM CANAL NAVIGATIONS (1905), 21 T. L. R. 548; 49 Sol. Jo. 536; 3 L. G. R. 1287.

15. What included in the expression—Building, plant, & site.—(1) The expression "generating station" where used in Electricity (Supply) Act, 1919 (c. 100), means any buildings & plant used for the purpose of generating electricity as well as the site of such buildings.

(2) The "extension" prohibited by sect. 11 of that Act includes an extension not only of size but also of capacity.

(3) The cost of providing an entirely new generating station is an expense properly chargeable to capital within sect. 52 of the local Order, 1891.—A.-G. v. EALING CORPN., [1924] 2 Ch. 545; 93 L. J. Ch. 516; 131 L. T. 467; 88 J. P.

C. 434, as to the extent to which the soil of a street is vested in a local authority, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), applies to the similar vesting in a local authority under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 96, so that the soil of a street is vested in a vestry under sect. 96 only so far “as is necessary for the control, protection & maintenance of the street as a highway for public use.” An electric lighting co. had illegally broken up the surface of a street within the district of a vestry in the metropolis, & placed their pipes & wires at a depth of about two feet below the surface:—Held: the vestry were not by virtue of sect. 96 the owners of the soil of the street at that depth, & although the co. had acted illegally in breaking up the street, the vestry could not maintain an action for a mandatory injunction to compel the co. to remove their pipes & wires,

By sect. 13 of the last-mentioned Act, which is substantially repeated in Electric Lighting Clauses Act, 1899 (c. 19), s. 12 (2), nothing in that Act or in any Act incorporated therewith shall authorise the undertakers to break up any street which is not repairable by the local authority without the consent of the person by whom such street is repairable or the written consent of the Board of Trade to be given after notice to such person & after an opportunity has been given to him to state his objections thereto:—Held: where there was no person by whom the street was repairable, the sect. operated as an absolute prohibition against the breaking up of the street by the undertakers, & therefore, where a strip of land adjoining a street repairable by the local authority had been dedicated to the public by the owner & had become part of the street, but was not repairable either by the local authority or by the owner or by any other person, the local authority, as undertakers for the supply of electric light in their district, had no power to break up that portion of the street.—*ANDREWS v. pipes. Sect. 7 provides that nothing therein should authorise the undertakers to lay down any pipe or other works "in any land not dedicated to public use, without the consent of the owners & occupiers thereof." Defts., who had statutory power to supply electrical energy within their district, & to whom Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (c. 56), applied, placed two poles for carrying electric wires in a highway which had been dedicated to public use, to the depth of six feet, without the consent of pltf. who was the owner of the soil of the highway. Pltf. claimed damages for trespass & a mandatory injunction for the removal of the poles & the wires stretched thereon:—Held: under Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 15), s. 6, defts. were empowered to excavate the soil of the highway & place poles therein for the purposes of the undertaking, without pltf.'s consent, & sect. 7 of the Act, which contained a proviso to sect. 6, extended only to land of which no portion had been dedicated to public use.

(2) Electricity Supply Act, 1919 (c. 100), which enacts that before placing any electric line across "any land" the undertakers shall serve notice of their intention so to do on the owner & occupier of the land, & if within 21 days the owner & occupier fail to give their consent or attach to their consent conditions to which the undertakers object, it shall not be lawful to place the line across that land without the consent of the Board of Trade:—Held: this was an enabling sect. & did not affect the powers the undertakers had under Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (c. 56), incorporating Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 15), ss. 6, 7, to do necessary works in a street under the last-named Act without the consent of the owner of the subsoil.—PORTER v. the districts:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction in its discretion to decree a faculty on each case authorising the construction of such a chamber in the churchyard, & the use of same as a transformer chamber for the term of 21 years, subject to payment of a yearly rent to the rector & churchwardens of the parish.

(2) A local Act of Parliament provided that part of the parish church of St. Benet Fink in the City of London, & one-third part of the burial ground of that parish, might be taken for the purposes of the Act after notice, & should be vested in the corpn. of the City of London, on such payment being made as in the Act mentioned. By a subsequent local Act it was provided that, on complying with certain directions therein contained, the corpn. might take down the parish church of St. Benet Fink, or the part thereof not taken down under the last-mentioned Act, & the site thereof, & the ground & soil thereof, & also, the then present burial ground of the said parish, & the freehold of same in fee simple should be vested in the corpn. free from all trusts & incumbrances whatsoever; & that as soon as the site of the said church & the said burial ground should be cleared, such portion of same as was not otherwise appropriated under the Act, should remain for ever unbuilt upon, & unappropriated to any purpose except such ornamental purpose as the corpn., with the consent of the Bishop of London, might direct. After the provisions of these Acts as to the vesting of the churchyard of St. Benet Fink had become operative, the corpn. of the City of London & the rector of the united parish of St. Peter-le-Poor with St. Benet Fink, & the churchwardens of St. Benet Fink, petitioned the ct. to decree a faculty for the construction of the churchyard of St. Benet Fink of an underground chamber to be used for the transformation of electricity:—Held: the ct. was not precluded by the local Acts relating to the churchyard from granting the faculty prayed for.—Re ST. #### SUB-SECT. 4.—LAYING ELECTRIC WIRES NEAR GAS MAINS.

26. Electric Lighting Clauses Act, 1899 (c. 19), Sched., s. 18—General provisions.—By Electric Lighting Clauses Act, 1899 (c. 19), Sched., s. 18, undertakers who lay new electric lines, other than service lines, near the mains of any gas co. shall conform with the reasonable requirements of the gas co. for protecting their mains from injury, & for securing access thereto, & repair any damage done thereto, any question or difference which may arise under that sect. to be determined by arbn.; & if the undertakers make default in complying with any of the requirements of the sect., they shall make full compensation to the gas co. for loss or damage incurred by reason thereof, “& in addition thereto they shall be liable for each default to a penalty not exceeding £10, & to a daily penalty not exceeding £5.” By sect. 1, “the expression ‘daily penalty’ means a penalty for each day on which any offence is continued after conviction therefor.” In Oct., 1903, an electric light co. were laying in the streets of a town new electric lines, other than service lines, near the mains of a gas co. On Oct. 2, 1903, the gas co. by letter to the electric light co. complained that the lines were being laid in a manner which was injurious to the gas mains, & required the lines to be relaid in a proper manner. Correspondence then ensued between the two cos., in the course of which the gas co., by letters of Oct. 27 & Nov. 2, 1903, respectively, specified their requirements with respect to the laying of the electric lines. Throughout the correspondence the electric light co., who completed the work of laying their lines on or before Oct. 31, 1903, disputed the reasonableness of the gas co.’s requirements, & they did not at any time comply with them. The questions & differences which had arisen between the two cos. were, shortly after Nov. 2, 1903, referred to arbn. under sect. 18 of the sched. to the above Act, & on Feb. 12, 1904, the arbitrator made his award, finding in effect that the electric light co. had not conformed with the requirements of the gas co., & awarding to the latter a sum as full compensation for the loss & injury they had thereby sustained. On Apr. 29, 1904, the gas co.’s solrs. wrote to the electric light co.’s solrs. pointing out that the electric light co. had made no attempt to comply with the gas co.’s requirements, & threatening proceedings for penalties under sect. 18 unless an undertaking were given that those requirements would be complied with. On May 31, 1904, a complaint was made on behalf of the gas co. alleging that “on & since Oct. 2, 1903,” the electric light co. had made default in complying with certain requirements of sect. 18; that they had laid their new electric lines too near the gas co.’s mains, & did not conform & had not conformed with the gas co.’s requirements for protecting from injury their mains, & for securing access thereto. On the hearing of the complaint before justices they convicted the electric light co. of the offence alleged in it, & adjudged that they should “forfeit & pay to the clerk of the ct. the sum of £1, & the further sum of £1 for every day during default”:—

Held: (1) the complaint & conviction sufficiently alleged an offence completed within six months before the time when the complaint was made, & were, therefore, not bad on the face of them under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11; nor did the facts proved before the justices & above stated show a completed offence before the statutory period of limitation began to run; (2) the reference to arbn. & the award did not bar the right of the co. to proceed for penalties under Electric Lighting Clauses Act, 1899 (c. 19), Sched., s. 18; (3) the conviction so far as it imposed the additional daily penalties was bad, but it could be dealt with either by an amendment striking out the part which related to those daily penalties, or by directing that no effect be given to that part in the event of an attempt being made to enforce them, & the other part of the conviction was good, & could be enforced.—*CHEPSTOW ELECTRIC LIGHT & POWER CO. v. Authority of undertaker's engineer to contract.]—Deft. council, who supplied electricity in their borough under statutory powers, were about to increase the voltage of their supply from 200 to 240. Pltfs., who proposed to obtain a supply of electricity from the council for premises which they had acquired in the borough, & which they proposed to open towards the end of Sept. 1905, being wishful, if satisfied that they could obtain a supply at the higher voltage in time for the opening, to equip their premises in the first instance with electric fittings adapted to the higher voltage, communicated with officials of the council on the subject, with the result that ultimately the council's consulting engineer wrote to pltfs. on June 15, as follows: "After considering the question as to the date on which we can safely promise to give a supply of 240 volts to your premises. I am glad to inform you that, in my opinion, there will be no difficulty about complying with this request by the first week in Sept. & I have told B. of this practical certainty." The council did not, however, in fact furnish pltfs. with the desired supply by that time, & as the date for the opening of pltfs.' premises approached, it was found that they would not be able to do so until after that date. Pltfs. then had an interview with the council's resident engineer, who was called "Manager of the Electrical Department" to the council, & there was evidence that at that interview he said that he would within two days supply pltfs. with electricity at the lowest voltage if they would make certain alterations in their fittings so as to adapt them to receive electricity at that voltage. Pltfs. altered their fittings accordingly, but were not furnished with the supply. Pltfs. sued the council for breach of contract. They set up, first a contract made in June, 1905, practically relying on the letter of the consulting engineer of June 15 as embodying a promise on required for the operation of his X-ray machine. Under bye-laws of the town the city electrician had power to require a person using electricity to put his wires & apparatus in a safe condition, & gave him power to cut off the current from any one who refused to comply with the provisions of the law. The electrician had communicated to the council that pltf.'s place did not comply with the regulations, the council's part; & secondly a contract effected by the resident engineer at the interview of Sept., 1905. The terms of the resident engineer's employment by the council were inconsistent with his having in fact authority to enter into any such contract on the council's behalf as the alleged contract of Sept., 1905, & there was no evidence that he had purported to enter into any similar contract on their behalf. At the trial the jury found that the alleged contract of June had been made by the consulting engineer, & that the alleged contract of Sept. had been made by the resident engineer; & that both the engineers were authorised to enter into such contracts, & were held out by the council as so authorised.

On these findings judgment was entered for pltf's., holding that the contracts were not such as required sealing by the council to render them enforceable. On appeal:—Held: (1) on the construction of the letter of June 15, there was no evidence to support the finding of the jury that a contract had been made by the consulting engineer in June; (2) though there was some evidence that the resident engineer had made the alleged contract of Sept., there was no evidence that he was either in fact authorised or held out by the council as authorised to make such a contract on their behalf; (3) judgment must be entered for the council.—*BOURNE & HOLLINGSWORTH v. Upon a change in the occupation of premises to which current is being supplied by an electric co., there being a debt due to the co. from the outgoing occupier in respect of current already supplied to him, the co. are entitled to discontinue the supply until the new occupier has entered into a contract with them for a supply to him.

At the instance of debenture-holders of an hotel co., the ct. appointed a receiver of the undertaking & property of the co. The order directed the co. to deliver to the receiver possession of the hotel "so far as is necessary for the purpose of such receivership," & the receiver at once took possession of the hotel. At this time electric current for lighting the hotel was being supplied by an electric lighting co., & a large sum was due to them from the hotel co. for current already supplied:—Held: the electric co. were entitled to discontinue the supply of current until the receiver had entered into a new contract with them for its supply.—*HUSEY v. Proceedings having been taken against applts. for making default in giving resp. a supply of energy, they contended that they were not liable to a penalty, inasmuch as any default on their part was caused by circumstances amounting to force majeure. The circumstances, as found by the magistrate, were that two of applts.' workmen refused to do the work required, because the wiring of resp.'s house had been carried out by a man who was not a member of a trade union; that if applts. had dismissed these men, "the result would probably have been" that the Electrical Trades Union would have caused all their members in applts.' service to terminate their engagements; that if this had occurred it would have been difficult for applts. to get other competent workmen; & that any interference with applts.' undertaking by the withdrawal of their workmen would have seriously affected the whole district. The magistrate held that the term "force majeure" applied only to physical or material constraint, & that although it applied to strikes actually proceeding, it did not apply to fear, however reasonable, of the consequences of threatened action. He held that there had been no force majeure & that applts. were liable to a penalty:—Held: the magistrate was right, inasmuch as a reasonable apprehension of a strike did not in itself amount to force majeure.—*HACKNEY BOROUGH COUNCIL v. 41. Prohibition of supply outside area—Supply generated from station outside area.]—In 1889 a limited co., formed under the Companies Acts for the purpose of generating & supplying electric energy, obtained a special Act & certain provisional orders of the Board of Trade empowering them to supply electric energy in three specified areas within the administrative county of London. The special Act & the orders contained clauses in identical terms prohibiting the undertakers from supplying energy or erecting electric works beyond their statutory areas, except by the authority of Parliament or under a licence from the Board of Trade. In 1898 the co., being unable to supply the demands of their customers in their statutory areas from their generating stations in those areas, obtained another special Act authorising them to erect generating works in an urban district outside the county of London. In 1903, the co. purporting to act under the general powers in their memorandum of association, commenced to supply energy from their works in the urban district to a railway co. in that district. In an action to restrain the co. from so doing:—Held: the prohibition in the Act of 1889 was not limited to the administrative county of London, but was general, & the co. were acting in contravention thereof.—A.-G. v. METROPOLITAN ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., LTD., [1905] 1 Ch. 757; 74 L. J. Ch. 384; 92 L. T. 544; 69 J. P. 169; 53 W. R. 418; 21 T. L. R. 355; 49 Sol. Jo. 401; 3 L. G. R. 625, C. A.

42. — Supply to consumers adjacent to area boundary—Extent of special licence for such supply.]—In 1899, pltf. co., & deft. co., electric lighting cos., having separate areas, in respect of which they possessed the usual statutory powers of supply, entered into an agreement to join in promoting a Bill in Parliament to enable them to establish a generating station outside their respective areas of supply, which provided that the supply generated by the joint station should be utilised by the cos. for their respective areas of supply or elsewhere as might be authorised by the proposed Act or agreed to by the cos. The agreement provided that the capital required should be raised by joint loan secured by debenture stock; that each co. should take a proportionate part of the new supply & pay the expenses of a joint station in proportion to the amount of energy taken respectively, & that if either co. did not take a reasonable proportion of the output, the other co. could require the payment of compensation. Later on in the same year an Act was passed to give effect to the contract. It provided (inter alia) that the two cos. might respectively distribute the energy in such proportions & manner as they might from time to time determine, for the purpose of supply within their respective areas of supply as for the time being authorised or for giving effect to any agreement made under the Act. On Oct. 25, 1900, the two cos. entered into a further agreement clause 3 of which was that so long as certain debenture stock should be outstanding "each of the two cos. shall from time to time take from the joint station all such electrical energy as such co. (having regard to its other sources of supply) may require for the purposes of its business in accordance with the provisions of the principal agreement or such other provisions as may from time to time be agreed upon between the two cos. or settled unanimously by the committee." Deft. co. in 1909, supplied energy to certain consumers in a district outside but adjacent to their area of supply. They bona fide, but erroneously, believed that those consumers were actually within their statutory supply area; but they did not procure such energy either from their own generating sources or from the joint generating station. In the years subsequent to 1909, they obtained from the Board of Trade under Electric Lighting Act, 1909 (c. 34), s. 6, licences to supply electricity to consumers outside their actual statutory area of supply. These licences were known as "fringe orders." No fringe orders were granted to them in respect of the supply to the outside consumers in 1909:—Held: defts. were not entitled or bound to employ any part of the electricity from the joint station for the purpose of supplying external consumers, whether under fringe orders or not, & the supply to such consumers, was ultra vires the Act of 1899 (c. 19), & was no part of the "business" of defts. within clause 3 of the agreement of 1900.—*KENSINGTON & KNIGHTSBRIDGE ELECTRIC LIGHTING CO. v. They were also to pay to the lessors a given sum per mile of road along which the tramways were laid, in lieu of repairing any portion of such road, & maintaining the tramways, except the rails & electrical bonds laid thereon. The minimum amount payable under this clause was £900 per annum, & a power of distress was reserved in respect of it. They were also bound to purchase from the vendors all electrical energy required for the purpose of the tramways, & to pay for the same at a given rate, the minimum sum payable in any one year being £4,000. On a case stated:—Held: (1) the £900 payable in respect of the repair of the road was rent, & ad valorem duty was payable upon it; (2) the £4,000 payable in respect of the supply of electrical energy was not rent, but was payable under a covenant made in further consideration for the lease, & relating to the matter of the lease,

The consumers were to pay therefor a fixed charge of £57 10s. per quarter, & in addition, 1d. per Board of Trade unit for all current supplied & consumed as indicated by the co.'s meters, & 10s. per quarter as a rental for the meters. The agreement further provided for the increase & decrease of the quarterly payments in certain events, but in no case was the fixed charge of £57 10s. to be reduced below £50 per quarter:—Held: on the assumption that electrical energy was to be considered “goods, wares, or merchandise” within the exemption in clause 3 of the above Act, which deals with “agreements,” the agreement came under clause 1 of the heading “Bond, Covenant, or Instrument of any kind whatsoever,” in that schedule, as being a “security” for a sum or sums of money at stated periods, & stamp duty was payable upon it at the rate of 2s. 6d. per cent. on the aggregate amount of the minimum annual payments for seven years.—COUNTY OF DURHAM ELECTRICAL POWER DISTRIBUTION CO. v. 47. Differentiation of charges between consumers—Undue preference—Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (c. 56), ss. 19, 20.]—In 1898 deft. signed a request to pltf. co. for a supply of electric energy. The request was made subject, among other terms, & conditions, to the following: “The consumer agrees to take the whole of the electric energy required for the premises mentioned below from the co. for a period of not less than five years”; & the charge was fixed at 4½d. per Board of Trade unit. On the margin it was noted that in the event of the co.'s standard rate being reduced below the price therein quoted deft. was to have the benefit of such reduction. In 1901 deft. gave pltf. co. notice to disconnect. The co. had entered into similar contracts with other consumers for different terms of years, & in the case of one consumer at a different rate of payment. In an action by the co. for an injunction to restrain deft. from taking any electric energy from any person other than the co.:—Held: (1) the contract implied a contract by deft. not to take energy from any one except the co., which in a case of this kind, a trade contract for supply & not for personal services, could be enforced by injunction; (2) the contract was not void under the above sects. on the ground that undue preference had been given by the co. to other consumers; the relevant words of sect. 19 were “under similar circumstances to a corresponding,” & the sect. left a latitude to the co. to make bargains with its customers, where the circumstances differed or the supply did not correspond, for different terms, & on the facts of the case no undue preference was shown; (3) the injunction asked ought to be granted.—METROPOLITAN ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. It was a further term of the agreement that on written notice from one party to the other the three meters should be recalibrated in situ by the Board of Trade or by some other approved standardising institution agreed to in writing. Subject as aforesaid the average reading of the meters was to be final & binding between the parties. On several occasions covering a long period of time it was found that the meters were inaccurate, & were registering fast as compared with a standard Aron meter. *Pltf.*s. contended upon the facts that they were entitled to have three meters installed which were capable of measuring the exact amount of energy consumed by them. Defts. contended that *pltf.*s. were bound by the Watt meters as & when recalibrated in accordance with the terms of the contract:—Held: (1) the meters could not be condemned as long as the remedy by recalibration in situ remained open to *pltf.*s.; (2) if the error of any meter could be measured & was constant, & did not arise from any defective adjustment, the necessary rectification of the readings could be made in accordance with ascertained & constant error; (3) there could not be held to be any breach of any express or implied term of the agreement until *pltf.*s. had applied for recalibration & it had been refused; (4) the agreement did not amount to a warranty that the defts. should measure the amount of energy actually supplied, nor did it impose any power generated & used & sold or disposed of by the co.:—Held: the basis of calculation was the highest amount or quantity of electrical horse power generated & used & sold or disposed of at any one time, & so remained until a higher point was reached.—*A.-G. f. Failure to install within stipulated time—Right of consumer to obtain power elsewhere.]—Under a contract for the supply of electric power the power co. failed to install meters by the time agreed in order to measure the current taken: to measure it otherwise would have been inconvenient & unsatisfactory:—Held: such installing was of the essence of the contract, & until it was done the purchaser of the power was justified in obtaining power express obligation on defts. to keep the instruments up to the measure of accuracy which could show the energy actually supplied.—GRAVESEND & NORTHFLEET ELECTRIC TRAMWAYS, LTD. v. GRAVESEND CORPN. (1910), 74 J. P. 156; 8 L. G. R. 445.

METROPOLITAN ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., LTD.* (1891), 10 T. L. R. 446.

66. Noise.—Extent of.—The incumbent & trustees of a church brought an action against the corpn. for an injunction & damages in respect of an alleged nuisance caused by a noise, described by witnesses as a "low humming sound or note," of varying intensity arising from the electric lighting works belonging to the corpn. situate in the immediate vicinity of the church. Defts. denied the existence of a nuisance as alleged, & pleaded that the use of the works in question as a converting or transforming station was a necessary & integral part of the working of other works erected under Corpn. Act, 1900, & was authorised thereby; & that the particular machinery complained of by plffs. was machinery necessarily & properly used in connection with the working of the system of electric tramways expressly authorised by that Act. In addition & without prejudice to the defence of fact defts. also relied upon the statutory powers given to them by the Act of 1900, & also upon the fact that they as a public authority were exercising such powers & performing their duties with relation to the public supply of electric energy & the working of the system of electric tramways in a reasonable & proper manner & according to the best & most improved methods & further, they relied upon Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), so far as applicable:—Held: the sound complained of though it may have frequently caused irritation or annoyance to certain persons but did not generally distract the attention of ordinary healthy persons, was not a legal nuisance.—*HEATH v. J.—VOL. XX.

—An electric power co. by the working of their engines caused so much vibration in the land adjoining that on which plff's house was built as to render it at times almost uninhabitable, though no actual structural injury was shown to have taken place. The co. was incorporated under Ontario Co.'s Act, for the purpose of manufacturing, etc., electric power, with authority under R. S. O., c. 200, s. 3, to construct, maintain, complete, & operate works for the production, etc., of electricity:—Held: the co. were entitled only to exercise their powers in such way as not to create a nuisance, & the plff. was entitled to an injunction & a reference as to damages.—*HOPKIN v. & other works on land near to a house which was subject to a lease. Owing to excavations for the foundations of the engines, & to vibration & noise from the working of them, structural injury was caused to the house, & annoyance & discomfort to the lessee. The lessee & the reversioners brought separate actions against the co. for an injunction & damages in respect of the nuisance & injury thus occasioned:—Held: there was nothing in either case to justify the ct. in refusing to aid, by injunction the legal rights which had been established.—*SHELFER v. 69. ————]—Nuisance alleged to be temporary only.—An electric light co. will be restrained by injunction from so using their generating station as to cause serious annoyance, by vibration, noise, & smell, to occupiers of adjoining premises. Such an annoyance is not to be excused on the ground that defts. is making an ordinary & reasonable use of the land, nor on the ground that the annoyance is temporary & occasional.—*KNIGHT v. 70. ————]—(1) Defts., a borough council, acting under a provisional order, erected an electric generating station in proximity to houses of which plffs. were lessees & occupiers. The order provided that nothing therein should exonerate the undertakers from an action for nuisance in the event of any being occasioned by them. In an action for an injunction it was admitted that the vibration caused by defts. machinery constituted an actionable nuisance unless it was excusable upon the ground of being merely temporary. Defts. alleged that the nuisance could be removed in time by experiment & alteration of the machinery; & contended that until the machinery was perfected the construction of their works was not complete, & the action would not lie against them:—Held: the nuisance was not temporary, & defts. were not entitled to carry on their works unless & until they could do so without creating a nuisance. An injunction was granted during the continuance of the plffs. leases.

(2) One of the plffs. had granted a sub-lease for the remainder of his term less the last three days thereof:—Held: he was entitled to an injunction in respect of injury to his reversion.—*COLWELL v. 73. Whether absolute liability—At common law.]—A man who creates on his land an electric current for his own purposes, and discharges it into the earth beyond his control, is on the principle of Rylands v. Fletcher, No. 72, ante, as responsible for damage caused by that current as he would have been if, instead, he had discharged a stream of water. Where the act is done in pursuance of a provisional order of the Board of Trade, it is protected to the same extent as other nuisances under statutory authority.

PART II. SECT. 13, SUB-SECT. 3.

73.1. Whether absolute liability—At common law.]—The principle that the owner of land, who brings or accumulates upon it any dangerous thing which would not naturally be there & which may become mischievous if not kept under proper control, is liable for any damage therefrom, applies to a proprietor who stores electricity on his land if it escapes therefrom & injures a person or the ordinary use of property.—EASTERN & SOUTH AFRICAN TELEGRAPH CO. v. CAPE TOWN TRAMWAYS CO., [1903] A. C. 381.—S. AF.

2. —By statute—Independent of proof of negligence.]—A co. under statutory authority constructed an electric tramway along a highway, & the wires carrying the electric current being supported by posts in the highway. Other wires, which were not fully insulated, ran down those posts. Pltf. brought an action against the co. to recover damages for physical injuries sustained by her through contact with an uninsulated live wire of the co., which injuries were alleged in pltf.'s particulars of demand to have arisen from the negligence of the co. in various respects, substantially consisting of the ineffective insulation of the wire. The trial judge refused to direct the jury that if they were of opinion that the injuries were caused by an escape of electricity they should find a verdict for pltf. apart from the question of negligence. A verdict having been given for the co. on the question of their negligence, the judge subsequently dismissed a motion by pltf. for a new trial on the ground of misdirection, but at the same time gave pltf. leave to amend the plaint by adding a claim based on the co. having wrongfully allowed the escape of electric current from the wire. Pltf. appealed from the refusal to grant a new trial:—Held: the point that the co. were liable without negligence was open upon the plaint as it originally stood & that the company were liable unless the escape of the electric current by which the injuries were caused to pltf. was the necessary consequence of the exercise by the co. of their statutory powers, & a new trial should be granted.—FULLARTON v. NORTH MELBOURNE

A tramway co., acting under a provisional order & using the best known system of traction, caused electrical disturbance in the wires of a telephone co. acting under licence from the Postmaster-General:—Held: the tramway co. were protected from liability for nuisance.—NATIONAL TELEPHONE CO. v. Fletcher, No. 72, ante, that who brings into being, or collects on his premises, an agent likely to do damage if it escapes, is liable for the consequences of such escape, does not apply where, in the absence of negligence or nuisance, the consequences are the result of a combination between that agent & another agent over which the owner or possessor of the first agent has no control.

A local authority, authorised under the Electric Lighting Acts to supply electricity within their district, had, as part of their system, a brick-built chamber under the pavement of a street within their district, inclosing a box containing electric cables or wires & a fusing apparatus which acted as a kind of safety valve whenever the electric current was overloaded. The construction of the chamber & box was that generally adopted by suppliers of electricity. When the "fusing" took place, electric sparks were emitted from the "fuse." Near the chamber were the gas mains of two gas cos., & gas frequently escaped from the mains & found its way into the chamber. This chamber was periodically examined, but it was found impossible to prevent the gas entering therein. An explosion occurred in this chamber, caused by a spark from the fusing, which took place at the time, coming into contact with a mixture of air & gas in the chamber with the result that pltf., who was walking on the pavement close to the chamber, was injured. In an action brought by him against the local authority for

One of their mains fused & the bitumen in which the main was laid in consequence became volatilised into an inflammable gas, which accumulated for some time, & then exploded, causing a fire by which the pltf.'s goods were damaged :—Held: apart from any question of negligence, defts. were liable to pltf. as for a nuisance by reason of the provisions of clause 70 of the order.—*MIDWOOD & CO., LTD. v. 77. ——— Damage to telephone cable.]—In 1898 defts. under the powers conferred by a local Act constructed an electric tramway along certain public roads. In 1914 the Postmaster-General laid underground along the same roads a telephone cable, which at one point came within seven feet of defts.' lines. In 1916 a breakdown occurred in the cable in consequence of its being injuriously affected by an escape of electricity from defts.' lines. In an action by the Postmaster-General under sect. 65, sub-sect. 2, to recover the expenses he had been put to :—Held: the liability of defts., under that sub-section, which was to be read independently of sub-sect. 1, was an absolute liability, & neither the fact that defts. had used every reasonable means in the working of their undertaking to prevent injurious affection to pltf.'s cable, nor that pltf. by laying his cable so near to defts.' lines had courted the injury, afforded any defence.—*POSTMASTER-GENERAL v. low potential wires were strung on the same poles, the high above the low. About 4 o'clock on an August afternoon, lightning struck the defts.' wires, shattering a pole & causing the high potential wire to fall on the low potential wire, from which pltf. took electricity into his mill. The damage was repaired, & the current was on again at 20 minutes past 7 in the evening. At about 9 o'clock the same evening, pltf.'s mill took fire. Brightness was observed at the point where the wires entered through the wall of the mill; the wires appeared to have become incandescent from heat; & shortly afterwards, an explosion occurred in the oil switch in the mill, from which a fire resulted. On the evidence :—Held: in an action for damages for the destruction of pltf.'s property, by defts.' negligence, that there was evidence, which could not properly have been withdrawn from the jury, & that the jury's verdict for the pltf. should not be disturbed.—*McELMON v. d. ——— —.]—Upon the true construction of art. 1054 of the Civil Code of Quebec a person capable of discerning right from wrong is responsible, without proof of negligence, for damage caused by things which he has under his care, unless he establishes that he was unable to prevent the event which caused the damage.

Applt. co., acting under statutory powers, had erected along a road in Quebec two overhead cables for the distribution of electric current at tensions of 2,300 volts & 108 volts respectively, & they supplied current at 108 volts to the resp.' premises. A violent wind, not amounting to force majeure, tore a branch from a tree growing about 28 feet away from the cables, & drove it against them. In consequence the cables were broken down, & the high-tension current found its way along the low-tension cable into the resp.' premises, & caused a fire. Resps. brought an negligence to go to the jury:—Held: there was evidence of negligence which should have been left to the jury, & the case could not properly be withdrawn from them merely because the injury was due to nervous shock only.—*SOLOMONS v. 83. — Contact with live wire.—Right of indemnity from contractors for installation.]—A contract between contractors & a local authority for the installation of electric light in public baths & washhouses belonging to the latter incorporated a rule of the Phoenix Fire Office that "when a system of metal tubes is employed the metal tubes should be earthed except in those cases where the earthing would not be desirable." In carrying out the works a system of metal tubes was employed, but the metal tubes were not earthed. After the completion of the works two members of the public who were using the baths were accidentally killed by an electric shock from a wire forming part of the works. The representatives of the persons so killed recovered damages from the local authority, who claimed to be indemnified by the contractors. An arbitrator, before whom the claim was heard, stated his award in the form of a special case, finding as facts that the accident was due to the fact that the metal tubes were not earthed; that there had been no negligence on the contractors' part in not earthing the tubes; & that the earthing of the tubes would not have been desirable so far as risk of fire was concerned, but would have been desirable so far as risk of accident to bathers was concerned:—Held: the rule of the Phoenix Fire Office was incorporated in the contract with a view to the prevention of risk of fire, & inasmuch as the earthing of the tubes was not desirable with reference to that object, there had been no breach of contract on the contractors' part, & they were not liable.—Re FULHAM BOROUGH COUNCIL & NATIONAL ELECTRIC CONSTRUCTION CO., LTD. (1905), 70 J. The co. appealed against supplemental lists made for two parishes in the year 1908, & claimed that the assessment of their undertaking in the two parishes together should be reduced by a sum which was the result of a comparison between the net revenue earned by the company in 1904 & in 1907:—Held: the co. were entitled to a reduction; but in calculating the amount of the reduction, it must be assumed that the quinquennial valuation was still correct in the year preceding that in respect of which the supplemental valuation lists of 1908 were made.—*WESTMINSTER ELECTRIC SUPPLY CORPN., LTD. v. other parts of the Metropolis. On July 5, 1904, the co. entered into an agreement to transfer that portion of their undertaking which was in the Borough of St. Marylebone to the local authority. In pursuance of that agreement the co. continued to supply all consumers in St. Marylebone to Aug. 8, 1905; & from that date they supplied a gradually diminishing number of such consumers to Mar. 31, 1906, when they ceased to supply any consumers in St. Marylebone. The hereditaments occupied by the co. in Paddington were assessed in a quinquennial valuation list for that borough made on May 23, 1905. In an appeal against this list, the arbitrator found as a fact that a person desirous of becoming a tenant of the co.'s undertaking would in the year 1905 have ascertained the purport of the agreement, & that the rent which he might reasonably be expected to pay would be materially diminished by the facts so ascertained. The arbitrator therefore took into account the circumstances that the Marylebone undertaking was before Mar. 31, 1906, in process of being severed, & was on that date to be wholly severed, from applts.' undertaking:—Held: the arbitrator was right.—*METROPOLITAN ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. Owing to a Lighting Order, dated Dec. 15, 1915, under Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, restricting the lights in the borough, the number of lamps actually lighted during the year 1916 was very small, & in an action by pltfs. to recover £1,290, the total of four quarterly payments as fixed by the agreement, defts. claimed to deduct sums which by the penalty clause they were to be at liberty to deduct in the event of lamps remaining not lighted "from any cause whatever"; further, that by reason of the lighting order the performance of the contract had become impossible or within reasonable probability impossible:—Held: the words "from any cause whatever" though wide enough to become unlimited, were in fact limited to causes over which pltfs. had or ought to have control, causes in which there had been some default on their part. 95. Pipes & wires—Laid under unauthorised street subway—Interference prohibited.]—W. & Co. were occupiers of land on both sides of F. Street within the urban district of which the W. U. D. C. was the urban authority. In Apr. 1901, W. & Co., constructed a tunnel or culvert beneath the carriage-way of F. Street for the purpose of carrying electric cables in connection with their business. The tunnel consisted of a concrete flooring & a brick archway. They subsequently changed their plans, & cutting through the concrete, laid the cables in pipes upon or nearly upon the clay subsoil, & filled in the flooring with fresh concrete. The W. U. D. C. gave them notice to remove the tunnel in accordance with Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 26. W. & Co. then removed the keystone of the arch, the tunnel fell in, & the subsidence was made good with ballast. The W. U. D. C. not being satisfied, brought an action claiming a declaration that they as the urban authority might properly cause the arch, vault, or cellar constructed by defts. under the carriage-way of F. Street to be altered, pulled down, or otherwise dealt with as the W. U. D. C. should think fit. W. & Co. instituted a cross-action for an injunction to prevent the W. U. D. C. from cutting, disturbing, or injuring their pipes or electrical wires. The two actions came on together. It was argued on behalf of the W. U. D. C. that they had a right to remove the whole of the structure, including the pipes & wires:—Held: the pipes were not in any part of the structure, & it was unnecessary to decide whether the concrete flooring was part of the tunnel; the W. U. D. C. were entitled to remove the structure, which they could & must do without injuring the pipes or wires. The injunction in the cross-action was granted.—WALKER URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. Another provisional Order on June 28, 1892, took away a power the corpn. had, but had not exercised, to issue irredeemable stock. The statutes confirming the two orders received the Royal assent on June 27, 1892:—Held: the statutory price for the undertaking was an amount of irredeemable stock; the corpn. were not by implication authorised to issue irredeemable stock for the purpose of purchasing the undertaking; & therefore, the power to purchase compulsorily was in abeyance so long as the corpn. had no power to issue irredeemable stock.—SHEFFIELD CORPN. v. 106. Purchase-money to be raised by loan—Failure to obtain borrowing powers—Extension of time to complete contract.]—A metropolitan borough council obtained a special Act by which they became bound to purchase the undertaking of an electric supply co. in their borough. Notice to treat was duly given, but the parties being unable to agree on the amount of the compensation to be paid, the matter was referred to arbitration. The arbitrators having disagreed, the umpire by his award, adjudged that the sum of £1,212,000 should be paid by the council to the co. as compensation. As this would involve the levying of a rate of 20s. in the £1, the council applied to the London County Council for liberty to raise this sum by a loan, but this application was refused. The council then resolved to appeal to the Local Govt. Board against this decision. Before this appeal could be heard, an order was made on Aug. 7, 1903, against the council for specific performance of the contract created by the Act, the notice to treat, & the award. The order fixed Dec. 31, 1903, for the completion of the contract but gave liberty to the council to apply for an extension of time in the event of their being unable to find the necessary money. Subsequently to the order the council applied to the Local Govt. Board by way of appeal & also to the Board of Trade, but both applications were refused. As a last resource the council proposed to promote a Bill in Parliament to obtain the necessary borrowing powers. To do this an extension of time was necessary in order to enable them to obtain the consent of the parochial electors under the Borough Funds Acts to the promotion of the Bill. Under these circumstances the ct. extended the time till Feb. 29, 1904, upon terms, including payment by the council to the co. of the bulk of the capital expenditure they had incurred in carrying on the undertaking since the date of the contract. The consent of the parochial electors having been obtained, & the Bill read a second time in the meantime, the ct. afterwards further extended the time upon terms including a further payment by the council to the co. towards capital expenditure.—METROPOLITAN ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. Two electrical supply cos. obtained statutory powers to supply electrical energy within the City of Westminster, & at the expiration of a certain period the City of Westminster had the right to acquire the undertakings of the respective cos. One of the two cos., resps., supplied within the district of their operations electricity on the system of continuous current, the other co., applts., supplied electricity on the principle of alternating current. In 1910 an agreement was come to by which resp. co. was to manage applts.' undertaking in the Westminster area, receiving & retaining all amounts due for energy consumed by applts.' customers therein. Applts. were to supply to resps. all alternating current required by applts.' customers in Westminster. The question between the parties was whether on the construction of that agreement in view of the powers granted by Electric Lighting Act, 1909 (c. 34), resps. were entitled to reduce the working of applts.' undertaking by soliciting persons, who were entitled to apply, & did apply, to applts. to supply them with electricity, to take their supply from resps. instead; & whether under the terms of applts.' Provisional Order, 1889, resps. were entitled to claim a supply from applts.' & having acquired the right to manage applts.' undertaking as well as their own had an option to dictate to consumers which supply they should have:—Held: resps. were under a statutory obligation so to manage applts.' undertaking as not to lessen its receipts, nor interfere with the consumers' right to be supplied with alternating current, & further, they could do nothing which would be likely to decrease the value of applts.' undertaking whenever it should be acquired by the City of Westminster, although they had contracted with applts., that if the purchase price paid was below a certain sum, they should be answerable to make up the price paid by the City of Westminster to that sum.—LONDON ELECTRIC SUPPLY CORPN., LTD. v. In Mar. 1897, by deed approved by the Board of Trade, the powers, etc., under the Provisional Order were transferred to a co. By an agreement of even date, after reciting that in part consideration for the local authority assenting to the transfer the agreement was entered into, the co. undertook to erect & maintain a refuse destructor & to cremate or dispose thereby of the whole of the refuse to be supplied to them by the local authority. This agreement was not approved by the Board of Trade, they having intimated that they were not concerned with that matter. After the company had begun to work the dust destructor, serious complaints were made by the inhabitants of the district to the local authority on account of the noxious smells thereby occasioned, with the result that the co. declined to perform their agreement to maintain a destructor & dispose of the refuse:—Held: the agreement was not ultra vires of the local authority, but was enforceable by them, their power to enter into it not having been taken away because the terms thereof were not contained in the deed of transfer, which had to be made with the approval of the Board of Trade.—LAMBETH CORPN. v. ## Part I.—Nature and Purpose of Equity.

1. In general.]—Now equity is no part of the law, but a moral virtue, which qualifies, moderates & reforms the vigour, hardness & edge of the law, & is a universal truth; it does also assist the law where it is defective & weak in the constitution (which is the life of the law) & defends the law from crafty evasions, delusions, & new subtilties, invented & contrived to evade & delude the common law, whereby such as have undoubted right are made remediless; & this is the office of equity, to support & protect the common law from shifts & crafty contrivances against the justice of the law. Equity therefore does not destroy the law, nor create it, but assist it (LORD TALBOT, C.).—DUDLEY (LORD) v. DUDLEY (LADY) (1705), Prec. Ch. 241; 24 E. R. 118, L. C.

2. —.]—The rules of eqs. of equity are not, like the rules of the common law, supposed to have been established from time immemorial. It is perfectly well known that they have been established from time to time—altered, improved & refined from time to time. In many cases we know the names of the Chancellors who invented them. No doubt they were invented for the purpose of securing the better administration of justice, but still they were invented. If we want to know what the rules of equity are, we must look, of course, rather to the more modern than the more ancient cases (JESSEL, M.R.).—Re HALLETT'S ESTATE, KNATCHBULL v. HALLETT (1880), 13 Ch. D. 696; sub nom. Re HALLETT'S ESTATE, KNATCHBULL v. HALLETT, COTTERELL v. HALLETT, 49 L. J. Ch. 415; 42 L. T. 421; 28 W. R. 732, C. A.

4. —.]—The cause why there is a Chancery is, for that men's actions are so divers & infinite that it is impossible to make any general law which may aptly meet with every particular act & not fail in some circumstances.

The office of the Chancellor is to correct men's consciences for frauds, breach of trusts, wrongs & oppressions of what nature soever they be, & to soften & mollify the extremity of the law, which is called summum jus.

Law & equity . . . both aim at the same end which is, to do right (LORD ELLESMERE, C.).—OXFORD'S (EARL) CASE (1615), as reported in 1 Rep. Ch. 1; 21 E. R. 485, L. C.

6. —.] Secundum allegata et probata.]—I sit in a court of conscience, & not in a court of conjecture. I must judge secundum allegata et probata; & I know nothing that would be so dangerous to the rights of the subject as for a judge sitting here, to overlook legal evidence, & throw into the other scale his own suspicions & conjectures (HEALEY, LORD KEEPER).—FISHER v. ### PART I.

11. In general.]—The principles of equity, which are universal, forbid a person to deal with property which he knows he holds on security, & not in actual ownership.—MAUNG KYIN v. MA SHWE LA (1917), 1 L. R. 45 Calo. 320.—IND.

12. —.]—Cases in the English Ct. of Ch. have no application to the law of India as laid down in Acts of the Indian legislature.—BALKISHEN DAS v. LEEGE, [1899] L. R. 27 Ind. App. 58; 1 L. R. 23 All. 149.—IND.

13. —.]—The common law of England is truly an equitable law. It is a "nursing mother," & contains within its fertile bosom principles of justice & equity, which, though long latent, often develop themselves, as new circumstances & exigencies arise, like those seeds which may have lain dormant for years, imbedded in the earth, but which vegetate, spring up, & grow, as the turning of the soil admits the access of the sun & of the air.—R. v. MILLES & CARROLL (1842), Jebb. & B. 219.—IR.

14. —.]—The doctrines & rules of equity recognised by the law of Natal do not differ from those of the cts. in England.—BENINGFIELD v. BAXTER (1886), 56 L. T. 127.—S. AF.

15. —.]—The practice by which the Ct. of Ch. in England takes upon itself the responsibility of judging for those who cannot judge for themselves does not exist under the law of the Cape of Good Hope.—DE MONTMORT v. BROOKS (1887), 58 L. T. 198.—S. AF.

16. To provide remedy for wrong.]—It is an inherent principle of equity that it not only has power, but ought by summary order in every case, to correct & set right whatever was irregularly or improperly transacted in such cause.—DARRINGTON v. GROGAN (1821), Beat. 199.—IR.

17. —.]—Cts. of equity should not be governed by technical rules, by which the law sometimes defeats the substantive end of solid satisfaction of a debt.—LEAHY v. DANCER (1838), 1 Mol. 313.—IR.

18. To grant actual relief required by parties.]—Cts. of equity have a vast & flexible jurisdiction to adapt their decrees to the exigencies of each case, so as to grant the actual relief required by the parties.—KASHI NATH v. MUKHTA PRASAD (1884), 1 L. R. 6 All. 370.—IND.

legal rules, & in so doing they act most beneficially for the subjects. . . . One of the rules of a ct. of equity is, that they cannot decree against the oath of the party himself on the evidence of one witness alone without other circumstances: but when the point is doubtful, they send it to be tried at law, directing that the answer of the party shall be read on the trial; so they may order that a party shall not set up a legal term on the trial, or that pltf. himself should be examined; & when the issue comes from a ct. of equity, with any of these directions, the cts. of law comply with the terms on which it is so directed to be tried. By these means the ends of justice are attained, without making any of the stubborn rules of law stoop to what is supposed to be the substantial justice of each particular case; & it is wiser so to act, than to leave it to the judges of the law to relax from those certain & established rules by which they are sworn to decide. . . . I am therefore clearly of opinion on principles of law that pltf. cannot recover in this action, & we cannot in this case assume the jurisdiction of a ct. of equity in order to overrule the rigid rules of law (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—BAUERMAN v. It is impossible for this ct. to interfere in the way asked; which is, in fact, that the railway shall not commence at the place at which the legislature has appointed it to commence. #### SUB-SECT. 2.—RESTRAINT ON APPLICATION TO PARLIAMENT.

32. Restraint of petition against private bill—Injunction.—A ct. of equity has jurisdiction, if a proper case connected with private property or interest be made, to restrain a party by injunction from petitioning against a bill in Parliament.

The S. Ry. Co. being leased to the C. Co., entered into an agreement for the sale of their railway to the L. Co., & it was a term of the agreement, that the purchase should be completed three weeks after an Act had passed for permitting the L. to amalgamate with the C. Ry. Co. It did not appear that any definite agreement was concluded between the C. & the L. Cos., but it was understood that a bill should be presented by the C. Co. for the amalgamation of the two Cos. The bill was presented & passed the Commons without opposition, but in the Lords the L. Co. presented a petition against the bill. The S. Co., fearing that if this Act did not pass, they would lose the benefit of their contract, filed a bill against the

PART II. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.

29 i. General rule.—A ct. of equity will, where personal equities exist between two parties over whom it has jurisdiction, though such equities may refer to foreign lands, give relief by a decree operating not directly upon the lands, but directly in personam, but such relief will never be extended so far as decreeing a sale in the nature of two other Cos., praying an injunction to restrain the L. Co. from opposing the bill in Parliament, & also specific performance of the agreement:—Held: the S. Co. had not made out such a case as to induce a ct. of equity to exercise its jurisdiction by injunction.

A party who comes to oppose a railway bill in Parliament, does so solely in respect of his private interest, not as representing any interest of the public, or for the purpose of communicating any information to Parliament. He is not even allowed to be heard as a petitioner against the bill, unless he has a locus standi in respect of some property or interest liable to be affected by it if it should pass into a law (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—STOCKTON & HARTLEPOOL RY. 34. Restraint of prosecution of private bill—Prosecution contrary to good conscience.]—By the standing orders of the House of Commons, a sum of not less than £8 per cent. of the estimated cost of the undertaking must be paid into the Ct. of Ch. upon the deposit of a bill in the private bill office:—Held: an agreement by the promoters of the bill, in consideration of a third party advancing the necessary amount, & paying it into the Ct. of Ch., not to proceed with the third reading of the bill in the House of Lords without his consent, is not against public policy & illegal. This ct. has no power to control the actions of the legislature; but it will act in personam, against a person who, contrary to good conscience, prosecutes a measure in Parliament.—SCOTT v. OAKLEY (1864), 33 Beav. 501; 4 New Rep. 5; 33 L. J. Ch. 612; 10 L. T. 322; 28 J. P. 328; 10 Jur. N. S. 431; 12 W. R. 728; 55 E. R. 462; affd., 4 New Rep. 258, L. JJ.

35. — Exercise of jurisdiction.]—Although there is no doubt that the Ct. of Ch., by virtue of its jurisdiction in personam, has power to restrain an improper application to Parliament for a private Act, yet it is difficult to conceive a case in which it would be right for the ct. to exercise that power.

Therefore a pltf. cannot obtain an inquiry both as to damages & also as to profits. He must be put to his election between the two inquiries.—DE VITRE v. BETTS (1873), L. R. 6 H. L. 319; 42 L. J. I think that the amount of what is due to pltf. ought to be ascertained by means of an action at law, & I do not clearly see how it can be satisfactorily done in any other way. 44. Secret profit of agent—Account & return of profit.]—The rule of this ct. . . . as to agents, is not a technical or arbitrary rule. It is a rule founded upon the highest & truest principles of morality. No man can in this ct., acting as an agent, be allowed to put himself into a position in which his interest & his duty will be in conflict. . . . All that the ct. has to do is to examine whether a profit has been made by an agent, without the knowledge of his principal, in the course & execution of his agency, & the ct. finds, . . . that these agents in the course of their agency have made a profit, & for that profit they must account to their principal (*LORD CAIRNS, H. 48. ———.]—Equitable estates are guided by the same rules of descent as legal estates.

The law is clear, & cts. of equity ought to follow it in their judgments concerning titles to equitable estates; otherwise great uncertainty & confusion would ensue. The discretion [of the ct.] is to be governed by the rules of law & equity, which are not to oppose, but each, in turn, to be subservient to the other; this discretion, in some cases, follows the law implicitly, in others assists it, & advances the remedy; in others again it relieves against the abuse, or allays the rigour of it; but in no cases does it contradict or overturn the grounds or principle thereof (JERKYL, M.R.).—*COWPER v. By a codicil, testator, after confirming his will, devised his real estate to trustees, upon certain trusts for the payment of debts & securing a jointure for his wife:—Held: (1) the trustees were bound, after providing for the jointure & debts, to convey the estates to the same uses as those declared by the will; (2) the heirs of the body of A.B. took by purchase, & no equitable freehold resulted to A.B. so as to attract the operation of the rule in Shelley's case, & create an estate tail in A.B.

63. ——*By a settlement made upon his second marriage the husband conveyed freeholds, subject to existing mtges. thereon, to trustees in fee simple to the use of the wife & himself for successive life interests & after his decease "in trust for the child of children," of the husband "now born or hereafter to be born who shall attain the age of 21 years & if more than one in equal shares as tenants in common & if there shall be no such child then in trust for the right heirs" of the husband. The husband then assigned leaseholds, chattels, & a policy of insurance upon similar trusts which so far as the children were concerned were expressed in identical terms. The settlement also contained a provision enabling the trustees to "mortgage or charge the premises hereinbefore expressed to be hereby conveyed & assigned with any sum or sums not exceeding together one-half of the expectant share of any child" & to "apply the same for his or her benefit or advancement." There was also a hotchpot clause to the effect that no child of his first marriage was "to take any part of the trust premises herein comprised without bringing into hotchpot all sums of money & other benefits which he or she may receive" under an earlier settlement:—Held: the limitations in trust having been perfected & declared by the settlor, they must have the same construction as in the case of legal estates executed, & in the absence of words of limitation the children took life estates only in the freeholds.—*Re BOSTOCK'S SETTLEMENT, NORRISH v. 74. — Ultimate benefit of appointor — Jurisdiction of court.—A testator by his will devised all the residue of his freehold, copyhold, & leasehold estates, & personal property to trustees, upon trust for his nephew J. for life, & on his decease, subject to a power of jointuring his wife, upon trust for the children & grandchildren of J. as he should appoint, & in default of appointment, to his children generally, they taking vested interests at twenty-one; & in default of their taking such vested interests, upon trust for his nieces, & their several families. After testator's death, J. married, & had one child, a son, & four days after this event, he, by a deed poll, reciting the will, appointed to his children generally, with a power of revocation, as he should by deed or will appoint; & in default of such appointment, subject as therein mentioned, in trust for his said son then born, & all his after-born children, as joint tenants, for their absolute use & benefit. This appointment was objected to by the children of one of testator's nieces, who were thus excluded from the contingent interest in their favour pointed out by testator, on the ground that it operated as a fraud against those interests, & contrary to testator's intention:—Held: as testator had intrusted J. with such a power of appointment, the ct. could not restrain the exercise of that power, however it might frustrate his ultimate intention.

Looking at testator's will and the deed poll, I think that J. has exercised his power of appointment in a very reasonable manner, & perfectly within the limits given him by the will. If, it was competent for testator to intrust such an authority to the appointor, it is not within the jurisdiction of the ct. to restrain such an exercise of authority. Equality is the highest equity known to the ct.; & as the father has appointed among his children in equal shares, this ct. cannot determine the appointment to be improper, upon the bare suggestion that a contingency might arise, in which the appointment would ultimately turn out for the benefit of the appointor. At any rate the ct. cannot declare the appointment to have been improperly made before that contingency happens (KNIGHT BRUCE, V. C.).—PEMBERTON v. JACKSON (1845), 5 L. T. O. S. 17.

A reconciliation took place, & another child was born:—Held: such last mentioned child did not participate in the provision.

This ct., when it can do so, consistently with the instrument executed by the parties, will do that which is the highest equity, make an equality between parties who stand in the same relation; but it cannot do that contrary to the plain meaning of a deed (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—*HULME v. 76. Overpayment of beneficiary — Bankruptcy.—Where, after the admission by the trustee of a creditor's proof against a bkpt.'s estate & that creditor's participation in a first dividend, it was ascertained that he had proved for & received more than he was entitled to, & upon an application to the ct. his proof was reduced:—Held: in the absence of any rule in bkpcy., the well-known principle of equity, that a beneficiary who has been overpaid is not entitled to receive any further payment out of the common fund, until the payments to the other beneficiaries are levelled up to the amount received by the overpaid beneficiary, was applicable, with the result that the overpaid creditor is not entitled to participate in any future dividends in respect of his reduced proof without giving credit for the overpayment in respect of his original proof. The mere fact that the trustee cannot recover either payments made to a creditor whose proof is subsequently expunged or overpayments made to a creditor whose proof is subsequently reduced does not prevent the operation of that equitable principle in the case of a proof in bkpcy.—Re SEARLE, HOARE & Co., [1924] 2 Ch. 325; 68 Sol. 77. Division of profits by solicitors in partnership — Separate solicitors retained by same client.—Where two separate solrs. are retained by the same clients in the same business, the presumption of law is, that as their liability is joint, the profits are to be equally divided, & this presumption is not removed by the delivery of separate bills of costs where the solrs. have conducted different parts of the business. Where, therefore, the evidence in favour of an agreement for a different division was not stronger than that against it, the ct. decided in favour of equality.

The evidence satisfies us that the result of it cannot be represented more favourably for deft. than that the statements on one side neutralise those on the other. So putting it, I conceive that the presumption of law remains which is equality (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.).—ROBINSON v. ANDERSON (1855), 7 De G. M. & G. 239; 44 E. R. 94, L. J.J.

The owners, claimed the proceeds of part of the cargo, namely, two parcels of barley, & the amount was paid out to them subject to a claim by the shipowners for freight & charges:—Held: although at common law no freight was due, as the contract of affreightment had not been carried out, & had become illegal by reason of the war, the Prize Ct., acting on equitable principles would allow such a fair & reasonable sum in respect of freight & charges as should be ascertained by a reference.—THE IOLO, [1916] P. 206; 85 L. This deed held to operate in nature of a testamentary instrument, & being made in consideration of natural love, etc., was held to amount to a covenant to stand seized. The children considered to take as tenants in common both by the words used, & also from the nature of the provision.

It has been said indeed that if two men make a purchase they may be understood to purchase a kind of chance between themselves which of them shall survive; but it has been determined that if two purchase & one advances more of the purchase-money than the other there shall be no survivorship, though there are not the words "equally to be divided" or to hold as "tenants in common," which shows how strongly the ct. has leaned against survivorship & created a tenancy in common by construction of the intent of the parties (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—*RIGDEN v.
